SENATE'S RULES CAUSE DELAY IN NAVY PACT VOTE

Must Act First on Many Riders.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Rejecting overwhelmingly the only two amendments offered, the senate today completed the first stage of action on the London navy limitation treaty and adjourned until Monday.

The final vote on ratification of the treaty, which will be approved with less than a dozen senators in opposition, will be reached the first part of next week—probably on Monday. The United States will be the first of the five signatories to ratify the pact.

Before the final vote fourteen reservations offered by opponents of the treaty will be acted upon. Thirteen of them are doomed to defeat by the overwhelming majority of treaty supporters. The fourteenth the President and the protreaty senators have signified they will accept, however reluctantly, for the reason that to reject it would be to incur the risk of delaying ratification, if not defeating the treaty.

This reservation, which was offered by Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], provides that the senate ratifies the treaty with the understanding that there is no secret agreement modifying its terms.

Block Steam Roller Tactics.

The opposition to the pact was about talked out when the senate convened at 11 a. m., and the administration steam roller was all ready to steam forth and flatten out any fresh obstacles to ratification before adjournment tonight. Senators had their railroad tickets in their pockets and their bags packed for the hegira to far places where political fences await mending.

The steam roller steamed but it did not roll—at least, not very far. In the first place Senator George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], who is president pro tempore of the senate and chairman of the rules committee and knows more about the intricacies of the senate ritual than all the members of the legislative sanhedrin except possibly Vice President Curtis, whispered to Senator Hiram W. Johnson [Rep., Cal.], leader of the opposition, that the resolution of ratification when presented must go over to the next legislative day and could not be presented until the treaty should be read article by article and amendments disposed of. Senator Johnson asked the Vice President for a ruling and Mr. Curtis sustained the law according to Moses. That meant a final vote could not be reached before Monday. It took most of the steam out of the steam roller.

Walsh Worries Administration.

Then a new complication arose. Senator David I. Walsh [Dem., Mass.] offered a resolution providing that the senate, if the treaty is ratified, favors the completion by Dec. 31, 1936, of all eight inch gun cruisers, aircraft carriers, destroyers, and submarines permitted by the pact. He had stated privately that he would not vote for the treaty unless some assurance is given that the United States is to have the navy which the authors of the London agreement say will give it naval parity with Great Britain. Senator Walsh served notice he would insist on a vote on this resolution before ratification of the treaty, even if it becomes necessary to offer it as a reservation.

This development alarmed the administration leaders. They perceived that if the Walsh resolution were adopted they might lose the votes for the treaty of the entire group of La Follette radicals, who are for the London agreement only because it limits the navies of other powers, but are opposed to building the navy it allows us. These little navy senators are not interested in parity with the British, which they contend would cost us more than one billion dollars to achieve.

Points to Pacifist Activity.

On the other hand, rejection of the Walsh resolution might alienate some of the big navy senators in addition to the Massachusetts senator. The administration leaders immediately labored with Mr. Walsh to agree to action on his resolution after instead of before ratification of the treaty, assuring him that in that case they would would deliver the votes to adopt it. The latest word from Walsh was that he had refused to listen to this proposition.

Speaking in support of his resolution, Senator Walsh said that the pacifists already are organizing to defeat appropriations for the navy the treaty

BABY MIX-UP STUMPS SAGES; TRY NEW TESTS

Doctors Attempt to Fix Parentage.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Mr. and Mrs. William Watkins stared moodily at the floor yesterday as Mr. Watkins fondled a 3 weeks-old baby boy who until recently they had assumed to be their own first-born.

In another room in Englewood hospital where a consultation was in progress, sat Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bamberger. They sadly regarded the cheerful countenance of another 3 weeks-old boy who, they had assumed pridefully, was their own.

Experts Ponder Problem.

In various attitudes of concentration numerous physicians, hospital officials and health department experts stood about giving their opinions as to whether the baby who was supposed to be the image of Mr. Watkins wasn't in reality the Bamberger offspring, and whether the pride of the Bamberger home, as a matter of fact, is a little Watkins.

At 4:47 o'clock on the afternoon of June 30 in the Englewood hospital, Mrs. Watkins' son was presented to the world. At 6:23 o'clock, Mrs. Bamberger's son, her third child, was born on the same floor.

Finds "Bamberger" on "Watkins."

The two mothers, who occupied the same room, left the hospital July 9. Mrs. Watkins went to her home at 1619 West 82d street and Mrs. Bamberger to her residence, 5523 South Paulina street. All went well until on July 12 when Mr. Watkins, watching his baby as he had a bath, noticed a piece of adhesive tape on the infant's back. On it in red ink was the name "Bamberger."

He got in touch with Mr. Bamberger, who, astounded, found a piece of adhesive tape marked "Watkins" which had been removed from his baby and thrown in a waste backet.

The mystery proved yesterday to be a deep one. Dr. Arnold H. Kegel, health commissioner of Chicago, in starting an investigation, was confronted with such a maze of intricate and confusing facts that he announced it would be the middle of next week before a jury of experts possibly can agree on the real identity of the babies. Meanwhile he is pondering on whom he will appoint to solve the fates of the infants Bamberger and Watkins. He has listed 27 possible points of variance to be investigated.

Babies Look Alike.

"However," he admitted, with a worried look, "they look as alike as two peas in a pod."

The most positive opinion on the identity was offered by Dr. Fred Fair, who brought young Charles Evans Watkins into the world. Dr. Fair, who has been confined to his home with illness for the last 10 days, and thus unable to see his patient, examined both boys yesterday.

"I recognize the infant now known as George Williams Bamberger as the real Watkins baby," he told Dr. Kegel. "I distinguish him because I remember that shortly after his birth I considered performing a circumcision on the child."

Other Doctor Agrees.

Dr. P. A. Murphy, the Bambergers' physician, agrees with Dr. Fair that the babies are in the wrong homes.

Dr. Murphy pointed out that at birth the Watkins baby was not so husky as the Bamberger baby, according to the scales, yet last Sunday the supposed Watkins baby tipped the scales at 8 pounds 11 ounces, while the Bamberger boy weighed only 7 pounds 10 ounces.

Dr. Kegel said he would study the problem "as if it were my own child." At which some one remarked that that was the trouble, there were two children, not one.

Among the difficulties was that of the blood test. In the morning Dr. Kegel cheerfully remarked he could solve the problem by blood tests, by the rule that if a parent has blood of type 1, 2, or 3, the child has blood of that type. But all parents were of type No. 4 except Mr. Bamberger. And if a parent has blood of type No. 4, which is rare, its offspring may be of any of four types.

"Well, there is skin pigmentation left—that should be easy," Dr. Kegel said, and forthwith specimens of the skin of each parent were put under microscopes.

More Tests Are Needed.

But he later admitted that much more thorough tests would have to be made before skin pigmentation proved anything. It seems that Mrs. Watkins is fair, Mr. Watkins dark; while in the Bamberger family it's the other way around. Each balances the other.

Europe's old conception of an American was a millionaire trying to see how much money he could get rid of in the shortest time.

Europe's present conception of an American is a person who is trying to hold on to his money for the longest possible time.

Last year the young man who thought he had discovered the secret of getting rich without working was envied by all his office associates.

This year he is envying all of his former office associates.

Our old conception of a grandmother was a nice old lady knitting by the fireplace and being very nice to her grandchildren.

The present conception is of a sprightly and slightly mature vamp being nice to other folks' grandchildren.

Harry Black, Noted Realty Man, Suicide

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Harry S. Black, chairman of the United States Realty and Improvement corporation, owners of a chain of hotels including the Hotel Plaza in New York, who, according to the police, fired a bullet into his head this morning, died at 8:15 o'clock tonight in his country home, Allondale, at Lloyd Harbor, L. I.

Mr. Black was found unconscious in his bedchamber at 10:30 a. m., with a bullet wound in his right temple, by his valet, Gustave Anderson. His hand clutched a .32 caliber pistol, from which two cartridges had been discharged. The absence of powder marks about the head led the authorities at first to suspect that he was the victim of foul play, but later Assistant District Attorney Fred Mundor of Suffolk county and Deputy Sheriff Amza W. Biggs announced after an investigation that the wound was self-inflicted.

So far as could be learned, Mr. Black left no notes and no explanation of his act was forthcoming.

Almost Drowns in Tub.

On Oct. 19, 1929, Mr. Black was found unconscious in a bath tub in a suite at the Hotel Plaza here. It required eight hours' work with a pulmotor to resuscitate him. He had been in poor health for many weeks and had been confined to his apartment, a penthouse on the eighteenth floor of the Plaza, under the care of a trained nurse. His valet found him lying face down in the tub, which was overflowing with water. Subsequently it was stated that an attack of acute indigestion robbed Mr. Black of his senses while he was taking a bath.

Wife Reported in Europe.

Mrs. Black, who was Miss Isabella L. May of Baltimore and is Mr. Black's second wife, is reported to be in Europe. There were no members of the family at Allondale except the owner himself.

Mr. Black's first wife was Miss Allon Fuller, a daughter of the late George A. Fuller, who was president of the George A. Fuller Construction company, a subsidiary now of the United States Realty and Improvement corporation.

Mr. Black was nearly 67 years old. In early youth Mr. Black entered the banking business in the state of Washington, where he remained until 1896 when he joined the George A. Fuller company as a vice president.

For many years he has been noted as the moving spirit in the modern growth of New York and the constructor of some of its most famous buildings.

OFFERS WIFE GUN TO SHOOT HIM; SHE TURNS IT ON SELF

Charles F. Grant, an automobile dealer and former agent in the department of justice, summoned police and a physician to his home at 2433 Blue Island avenue last night with a telephoned report that his wife, Elien, 28 years old, had attempted suicide. The woman was taken to the St. Francis hospital, Blue Island, a bullet wound near her heart.

"We had some friends over," said Grant, who appeared to have been drinking, the police said. "After the guests left we quarreled over a trivial matter. My wife said she would shoot me if she had a gun. Thinking she was joking I got the pistol I used in the service and handed it to her. "I shut my eyes, put my fingers in my ears and told her to go ahead and shoot. Then I heard the shot and turned to find her sinking to the floor. She didn't say a word. We have been married ten years."

Grant was held for further investigation. Surgeons said his wife was in critical condition.

Empty Auto Wrecks Train; 100 Injured

BULLETIN.

Elizabeth, N. J., July 20 (1 a. m.) —(Special.)—More than 100 persons were injured in the Pennsylvania wreck here last night, according to a count shortly after midnight.

Elizabeth, N. J., July 19.—[Special.] Three coaches of a Pennsylvania express train, traveling at high speed on the elevated section of the road through Elizabeth, plunged thirty-five feet to the street level tonight.

No deaths have been reported thus far, but more than thirty persons are in hospitals, seriously injured. Twenty or twenty-five more were less seriously hurt. Fire started in the wreckage. In addition to Elizabeth's fire fighting forces, ambulances were summoned from all the Elizabeth hospitals and private automobiles and trucks were pressed into service to help convey the injured to hospitals, and extra physicians and nurses were required.

The train was made up of seven coaches. It was bound from Philadelphia to New York. It was not scheduled to stop at Elizabeth.

Hits Abandoned Auto.

The accident came at an "S" curve just before the train left the street level for the elevated tracks. A motorist had driven his car down a street end, presumably thinking it was a crossing. Trapped, he had abandoned the auto on the tracks.

The engine struck the automobile and carried the wreckage of it 300 feet along the elevated tracks, when the engine jumped the rails, struck and demolished a signal tower, and plunged down the embankment.

The first and second coaches followed the engine, dragging the third car part way after them. A fourth car hung over the side at a perilous angle.

The engine struck squarely on top of an automobile parked in the street.

Pinned in Burning Wreck.

Answering the alarm, the first engine arrived just as the engine boilers blew up, driving flames from the fire box over the wreckage.

The firemen put out the blaze before much of the wreck burned, probably saving the lives of those pinned down in the wrecked cars.

Edwin S. Larsen's $35,000 Yacht Destroyed by Blast

Westport, Conn., July 19.—[Special.]—The luxurious $350,000 yacht, Sawdust Sally, owned by Edwin S. Larsen, vice president of P. W. Chapman & Co. of New York, was completely wrecked tonight by an explosion and fire. Jewelry valued at $75,000 was recovered after the flames were extinguished. Mr. Larsen and his wife were rescued.

Ballyhoo Spurs Tree Sitters to Stay Aloft

Some 50 juvenile tree sitters were visited in a tour of Chicago yesterday. Almost invariably the seekers after the honor of remaining longest above ground in rudely constructed, insanitary hovels were found to be pale, weary eyed and sick of the contest, kept in the branches by avaricious managers, doting relatives or envious playmates ready to break out into raucous jeers if the contestants came down.

Clinging to their wooden perch in a tree at 61st street and South Crawford avenue were H. F. Ellingham, 12 years old, 3938 West 61st place, and L. D. Sanders Jr., 12 years old, 3930 West 61st place, the leaders. The two boys, according to witnesses who were undisputed, went into the tree a week ago last Thursday. Their record at 3:30 p. m. yesterday, when they were visited, was 210 hours.

Fred Strasser, 3936 West 61st place, a keen faced youth, announced himself as the manager of the unenthusiastic boys above. No prize fighter's manager was ever more vigilant in scenting possible profit than young Strasser.

Ballyhoo on Job Here.

The tree was plastered with signs revealing that "radio used by the contestants is a —— furnished by the —— store." And "these boys' suits pressed and cleaned by ——." An ice cream and pop stand, presided over by the manager, was doing a good business.

"My boys," said Strasser, gazing proudly at the tree sitters above, "are going to stay up 1,500 hours. School will start then and they'll have to come down," he sighed.

"Are you really going to stay up that long?" the two youngsters in the tree, staring apathetically at the crowd below, were asked.

"We are not," came a rebellious duet. "Gee whiz, we been up here a year already."

"Sometimes they get a little tired," explained Strasser. "But they'll stay up that long, all right."

That Prima Donna Spirit.

In talking to other contestants, an unboylike spirit of desire for publicity was found. Some of the tree sitters were querulous in complaints that others had been given more newspaper space than themselves.

"You're from THE TRIBUNE. Gee, you gave us a lousy story," complained Harold Simpson, 13 years old, 6235 Wabansia avenue. Harold and Carl Carlson, 11 years old, 1732 Merrimac avenue, passed their 100th hour in a tree near their homes at noon yesterday.

"Some of those other kids are probably faking," interjected a bystander. "These boys are legit."

Just why some of the contestants appear pale faced and depressed was apparent after Teddy Arvidson, 12 years old, 5842 North St. Louis avenue, was watched for a few minutes in the tree where he is perched alone. A blueberry pie, an ice cream sandwhich, and some pop passed easily down Teddy's throat. He is also a 100-hour veteran.

Bad for Children, Kegel Says.

Health Commissioner Kegel said yesterday that tree-sitting was unnatural for the children, fatigued them and lowered their vitality, making them subject to colds and pneumonia. The lack of exercise is detrimental, he warned.

A list of all the tree-sitters now up in Chicago alone would fill half a column. Most of the contestants have passed 100 hours. To the tree-sitting contests should be added other endurance tests noticed in traveling through the street.

These included bicycle riding contests [tires furnished by the —— Tire Shop] hammock-swinging contests, pony-riding contests and watermelon-eating contests. Word came from New Jersey of an ingenious one There, the neighborhood was watching with bulging eyes the solemn efforts of a group who sought to see who could hold water in his mouth the longest.

Tree Sitter Hurt Severely.

Back here in Chicago, Joe Poproki, 14 years old, 722 West 21st place, was in St. Anthony's hospital with severe injuries received when he fell from a tree in Douglas park on Friday. Commissioner Kegel said that as the boys become wearied from the contests, other such accidents undoubtedly will occur.

As the reporter left one of the tree-sitting scenes, a small boy, whose name shall be mercifully withheld, sidled up to him and said:

"Put my name in the paper as one of those tree-sitters, will you, mister?"

"Why?"

"Well, I stayed down at the beach all night last night. It'd make a swell excuse if my mother thought I was up in a tree. She'd like the publicity."

30 POINT DROP BRINGS RELIEF TO CHICAGOANS

Rest of Midwest Swelters.

Here and Elsewhere

While Chicago's temperature dropped from 101 degrees to 71 degrees, other middle west cities recorded the following maximum temperatures:

Peoria	103
Canton, Ill.	105
Des Moines, Ia.	102
Keokuk, Ia.	103
St. Louis, Mo.	103
Kansas City, Mo.	100
Concordia, Kas.	102
Omaha, Neb.	106
North Platte, Neb.	100

After Chicago had sweltered through its hottest July 19 of all time with a maximum of 101.1, Lake Michigan yesterday did another Houdini act to cool the city off with a spanking breeze and a temperature drop of 22 degrees in an hour. Yesterday's maximum, the hottest of the year, was less than two degrees below the all-time record of 103 on July 21, 1901.

The change was as sudden as it was unexpected, as the official forecast had been for "continued warm." The mercury had climbed steadily since 11 a. m., when it was 88, to 95 at noon; up to 100 at 2 o'clock, and at 3:30 reaching the maximum of 101.1. It remained at 101 until 5 p. m.

Lake Wind Ends Heat.

No relief seemed to be in sight at 6 o'clock. Then suddenly the searching wind from the southwest that had prevailed for two days ceased, to be replaced by a steady eight mile an hour breeze from the northeast. The wind off the lake brought the miracle. The mercury began skidding. It was 100 at 6 o'clock, and 98 at 7. But at 8 o'clock it had dropped to 76, at 9 it was at 75, at 10 o'clock it was 73, and by 1 o'clock it had fallen to 71 degrees, a decline of 30 degrees since 5 o'clock.

It was a phenomenon that excited much comment among visitors, but was accepted as more or less commonplace by the natives, who know their lake. Only on three days so far this season has Lake Michigan failed to function to save Chicago from extreme heat.

The forecast for today, given out by Forecaster C. A. Donnel last night, is "mostly fair; possible showers by Monday. Continued warm, unless the wind blows off the lake."

Heat Sweeps to East Coast.

The result yesterday was it was the only city to enjoy escape from the torrid wave that blanketed the country eastward from Nebraska and Kansas to the Atlantic ocean. Even in seaboard cities like New York and Atlantic City there was no relief. In New York the maximum for the day was 96 degrees.

Middle west towns reported record maximum readings last night when Chicago was reveling in a 75 degree temperature.

105 Degrees in Canton.

In Illinois, away from the lake, the heat wave in many instances set new marks. Aurora reported 102, the hottest in 16 years; Peoria, 103; Canton, 105, the second highest since 1856; Ottawa, 100; Carbondale, 105; Chicago Heights, 103; Morton Grove, 101.

Considering that thousands of persons went to the bathing beaches in the extreme heat, comparatively few accidents were reported here. Also there were few cases of serious prostration. This was explained by the city health department as due to the fact that there was almost a complete absence of humidity.

Veteran Fireman Dies.

John J. Miller, 1216 Rosemont avenue, a veteran of the fire department died at his home of an apoplectic stroke, induced by the heat.

James Lewis, 58 years old, who fell from a window of his room in the Alaska hotel, 426 South Clark street, as he leaned on the sill, died early yesterday morning at the county hospital.

Charles Fanbro, 30 years old, 2643 Fulton street, a mail carrier, was overcome while fishing off the Illinois street pier. He fell in the water, but was rescued and revived by the coast guard.

Boy Drowns in Lake.

Elmer Amen, 17 years old, 4449 Fulton street, while playing on a raft at Lake Zurich, made a dive and was drowned. His four boy companions tried in vain to rescue him.

Mrs. Agnes Geiger, 45 years old, 6000 North Albany avenue, collapsed as she sat in a rocking chair on the back porch of her home.

Mrs. Leverett Thompson of Lake Forest was overcome while working in her garden. Her condition was said to be not serious.

More than 200 calls for fire apparatus to fight blazes believed to have been started by the intense heat were received. Most of the hook and ladder and engine companies were kept busy throughout the day.

Naphtha Ignites; Woman Burned.

The most freakish of the fires was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Labb, 223 Washington boulevard, Oak Park. Mr. Labb had gone to a rear porch to hurl the contents of a pan of naphtha over the railing. As he did, it blazed up. Mrs. Labb's clothing caught fire and she was fatally burned. The porch fire was soon extinguished.

Three families were forced to the street when flames broke out in a building at 1525 South Springfield avenue. M. Clark, owner of the building, was seated on the back porch when he saw a corner of it burst into flames. A 2-11 alarm was turned in and the fire was checked with a loss of about $1,500.

A shortage of water was reported yesterday from one point on the west side as the city pumps were taxed to keep pace with the excessive use of water during the hot spell. Mrs. E. A. Schifferle, 3159 Washington boulevard, notified the health department and the city engineer's office of the lack of water in her home.

Over the country a few deaths occurred, but the number was not large, considering the extent of the heat wave. Live stock in many places saw green pastures turn russet and die. The danger of corn being "fired" in the field was feared in Iowa.

ASK RAINMAKERS' AID.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAGUE, July 19.—The successful experiments which the Dutch rainmaker, Herr Veraart, conducted recently have received official recognition by several European countries. Germany has invited him to operate in rainless territory, and now a French agricultural syndicate has asked him to produce rain on a large scale in Algiers. Veraart's method in ordinary climatic conditions is to go up in a plane and sprinkle clouds of ice dust on the clouds below. Heavy rainfalls are said to follow. In a hot climate the same method is employed with a chemical instead of ice dust.

GRAIN PRICES RISE

BY PAUL POTTER.

Farming areas over nearly the entire country were seared again yesterday by a hot sun. In some sections there has been little rainfall for a month. The corn crop was suffering and pastures drying up. On the Board of Trade crop conditions were reflected in an increase of more than three cents a bushel in corn prices and an advance of two cents in wheat. There were indications of a damaged shortage in milk supplies for Chicago as a result of declines of nearly 20 per cent in milk production in the nearby country.

"We need a good rain over most of Illinois very soon or there will be serious damage to crops," said A. J. Surratt, federal crop statistician at Springfield.

Wisconsin's dairymen are crying for a good rain on their pasture lands, and have been feeding clover and alfalfa hay to prevent a radical drop in milk production, it was said yesterday. The Pure Milk association, whose members supply Chicago and eleven nearby cities, reports a drop of nearly 20 per cent in market milk here this last week. If this condition becomes worse, officials said, there is danger of a shortage here.

MOBILE POLICE JOIN HUNT FOR "KILLER" BURKE

Mobile, Ala., July 19.—[Special.]—Search in this vicinity for Fred Burke, Chicago gangster sought as the slayer of Thomas Bonner of Chicago and of a policeman of St. Joseph, Mich., and also wanted for the Valentine day massacre, was redoubled here today when the Mobile police were notified that Burke had been seen in this city by a man who knew him in New York.

The information corroborated word received by Baldwin county authorities a few days ago that Burke was headed this way. At that time deputy sheriffs armed with riot guns were stationed at Bay Bridge entrances to apprehend Burke.

SUN FRIGHTENS MANY BATHERS FROM BEACHES

Crowds Smaller than on Cooler Days.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

It was a fair guess yesterday, in view of the "'eat wot makes yer bloomin' eyebrows crawl," as Kipling phrased it, that Chicago's miles of beaches would experience their record workout of the year. Yet when a TRIBUNE reporter and photographer went skyscouting to survey and report the crowds it developed that one important angle had been overlooked which markedly affected the situation. That was the way the sun's rays were blistering everything in sight. This situation continued until 6:30 p. m., when the wind changed and the lake breeze forced a sudden and emphatic drop in temperature.

During the superheated day almost everybody sighed for the cool embrace of Lake Michigan's waters. Thousands, in fact, sought the beaches even in the intensity of the midafternoon temperatures. But the broiling sun and the sizzling sands proved too extreme for many thousands. Anywhere out of those scorching rays was better than braving them direct, it seemed. And so the beach totals of attendance hardly equaled those of usual warm Sundays.

Heat Cuts Beach Crowds.

Taking off from the Curtiss airport shortly after 3 o'clock, The Tribune plane cut across north Evanston and began winging its way down the curving shoreline of Chicago. It was soon apparent that not even the combination of a sustained heat wave, a week-end holiday, and the accessibility of the beaches had sufficed to tempt overflow throngs to the water.

Roaring over the lake toward the Drake hotel, Pilot Jim Templeton throttled down the motor and sent the ship into a side slip just off the Oak street beach. There was an enormous crowd there, but seemingly no more than on any warm holiday.

Jackson Park Leads.

Clarendon beach revealed only a mediocre attendance compared to some days. Diversey beach was well populated, but there was room for a good many more. Oak street numbered the greatest total of the north side beaches, but Jackson park appeared to have drawn more bathers than any. The 74th, 75th, and 76th street beaches had fairly large crowds, and one of the most popular of the smaller playgrounds was the new 12th street beach at the planetarium on Northerly island.

Cruising up and down the lake shore and across country to and from the airport the most striking feature of the trip was the scarcity of pedestrians except on the beaches. Automobile traffic was light for a week-end.

Guggenheim Safety Plane Contest Winner Burns Up

Cleveland, O., July 19.—[U. P.]—The Curtis plane which last year won the Guggenheim prize of $100,000 for the safest plane caught fire in the air at the Thistledown race track today and burned. The pilot, Leroy McGraey, brought the plane down and leaped to safety from the cockpit when the flames burst out. He was not hurt.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS.

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pickup, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999, 340-A Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. He also needs men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for sample and big money making offer.—Adv.

CAPONE'S DENIAL OF BRUNDIDGE'S STORY EXPECTED

Gang Leader Does as He Threatened.

BY HARRY T. BRUNDIDGE.

[Staff correspondent, St. Louis Star.]

St. Louis, Mo., July 19.—[Special.]—My interview in the St. Louis Star yesterday with Al [Scarface] Capone, which has been denied by Capone in Associated Press dispatches, was correct as published. It was correct when I quoted Mr. Capone as stating he would deny my interview if I published the following:

"Let me give you a hot tip: Lay off Chicago and the money hungry reporters.

"You're right, and because you're right, you're wrong.

"You can't buck it, not even with the backing of your newspaper, because it is too big a proposition. No one man will ever realize just how big it is, so lay off."

"You mean——"

"I mean they'll make a monkey out of you before you get through. No matter what dope you have to give that grand jury, the boys will prove you're a liar and a faker. You'll get a trimming."

Said He'd Deny Story.

"I'm going to quote you as saying that."

"If you do I'll deny it."

I note in Mr. Capone's denial the statement that I was with him only ten minutes. I arrived at the Capone villa at about 9:45 p. m. and waited until 10 o'clock, when the gang chieftain appeared. I was with him from then until about 1 o'clock in the morning.

If that seemed like ten minutes to Al, I am highly complimented.

It is interesting to note further in this connection that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on July 13 published a dispatch from its Miami Beach, Fla., correspondent, stating that I had been in the company of Capone for four hours.

Newspapers throughout the United States published that same statement, which set forth among other things, "Brundidge refused to discuss a four hour conference with Capone," and, "He was seen leaving the gang residence about 2 a. m. today in an expensive sedan driven by one of Capone's lieutenants."

All this was several days before the Capone interview was written and published.

AS TO REPORTERS AND RACKETS.

The St. Louis Star, under a Chicago date line, yesterday printed the following:

"The Chicago Herald-Examiner yesterday made public acknowledgement of the connection of Ted Tod, crime reporter on its news staff, as a press agent in the employ of the "Bugs" Moran-Zuta-Aiello gang interests which own the Fairview Kennel club.

"The day before, the Chicago Times acknowledged that James Murphy, a veteran police and crime reporter, had been discharged from its employ after admitting he had been a partner in a speakeasy while employed as a reporter.

"These disclosures followed acknowledgment by the Chicago American that Harry Read, city editor of that paper, was in the party of Al Capone that flew from Miami Beach to Havana, Cuba, in April, 1929. Read said he paid all of his expenses and that he did not remain with the Capone party when it went out to see the sights.

"Previously, as already recorded, Leland Reese, crime reporter for The Chicago Daily News, admitted for the first time that Julius Rosenheim, assassinated last February, had been an underworld stool pigeon for him. Harry T. Brundidge of The St. Louis Star in his articles on Chicago gangland and its relationship to journalism there, disclosed for the first time that Rosenheim was a stool pigeon for the Daily News reporter. Later Reese was mysteriously injured near De Kalb, Ill., when his car was crowded from the road by unidentified parties in another machine. He has been under guard of private detectives since."

The Stars then reprints the Herald and Examiners' statement about Tod which THE TRIBUNE reprinted yesterday.

MARRIED MAN NEEDS LOT OF MONEY, IS THIS BANK BANDIT'S EXCUSE

Muncie, Ind., July 19.—[Special.]—"I wanted to get married and I didn't have any money, so I held up the bank of Oaklandon, Ind., several weeks ago. Then I was married July 4 and I found that a married man needed a lot of money, so yesterday I robbed the bank of Daleville, where I got about $1,400, and came on home to Muncie."

This was part of the confession of Bruce A. Scott, 26, diminutive sheik bandit, as reported by city detectives who arrested him this afternoon.

After the holdup, Scott shot his way out of town and one bullet grazed the leg of Miss Ruth Costerison of Daleville, who was passing the bank.

FOSTER QUIZZED IN SECRET ON LINGLE MURDER

Indicted Gangster Denies Owning Death Gun.

$55,825 IN REWARDS.

Rewards totaling $55,825 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter. Of the $25,000 reward offered by The Tribune, $10,000 will be paid to any person who will give confidential information identifying the slayer of Lingle. All information should be sent to the headquarters established by State's Attorney Swanson in Room 503 Temple building, 77 West Washington street. Telephone State 3729.

Frank Foster, gunman of the Moran-Zuta-Aiello gang, who is under indictment for the murder of Alfred [Jake] Lingle, reporter for THE TRIBUNE, was secretly questioned late yesterday by Charles F. Rathbun and James E. McShane, assistant state's attorneys in charge of the murder inquiry, and Pat Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office.

The prosecutors declined to comment on Foster's attitude toward the questioning, but it was reported that the gunman had denied ownership of the gun which killed Lingle, and which had been traced to Foster.

According to the reports, Foster insisted the gun had been taken from him by the police months ago, when he was arrested on suspicion. This had been denied by the police, who point out that the gun which killed Lingle was a .38 caliber Colt, known as the "Detective Special," whereas the gun taken from Foster at the time of his previous arrest was a Colt .45 caliber automatic.

Taken from Train at 31st Street.

Foster, manacled to the two detectives from Investigator Roche's staff who captured the gunman in Los Angeles, arrived on the Santa Fé's crack train, the Chief. The train, by prearrangement with officials, was brought to an unscheduled stop at Western avenue and 31st street, where Foster and his captors got off. Mr. Roche with a squad of detectives was waiting, and Foster was hurriedly shoved into an automobile and driven to the secret destination where Mr. Rathbun and Mr. McShane were waiting.

Some time later Frank Heeder, a court stenographer, was summoned from the state's attorney's office by Mr. Roche. This led to reports that Foster was making a formal statement.

Levy to Defend Foster.

Attorney Harold Levy, former assistant state's attorney, announced that he had been retained to represent Foster, and that he would insist that the prosecution refrain from subjecting Foster to further questioning.

"Foster's place is in the county jail and I'm going to see that he is put there at once," Levy said. "He is under indictment and awaiting trial."

The attorney said he would make no attempt to sue out a writ of habeas corpus until tomorrow, but if Foster is not in jail by then, he will ask the court to turn Foster over to the custody of the jailer. Levy said he had been retained by Foster's wife.

Abbott Still in Custody.

Tommy Abbott, north side hoodlum who has been sought for questioning in the attempt to kill Jack Zuta as the latter was being conveyed across the loop by Police Lieutenant George Barker, was still in custody yesterday, although no charges had been placed against him. Witnesses to the assault, which resulted in the killing of a street car motorman, were to look at Abbott's automobile. It is believed his car was the one used by the gangsters, who sought to kill Zuta.

Attorney Louis Gould yesterday morning presented a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in Abbott's behalf, before Judge E. I. Frankhauser in the Criminal court. When the police requested the judge to permit them to hold Abbott until Monday morning, while they were completing their investigation, Judge Frankhauser assented and continued the hearing on the writ until tomorrow.

Church Committee to Quiz Federal Attorney on Crime

United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson will be the next witness before the secret hearing into crime conditions being conducted by a committee of the Chicago Church federation. The session will be held on Tuesday at the Hotel La Salle, according to an announcement made by District Attorney Johnson. At previous hearings State's Attorney John A. Swanson and Ald. Arthur Albert were questioned by the ministers.

LATEST INVENTION AIDS DEAF WITHOUT BATTERIES, WIRES, HEADBANDS, ETC.

Now comes this amazing new invention to make hearing again possible for literally thousands of deafened people. Throughout the United States the Vibraphone is being acclaimed as the ideal device. The tiniest of instruments, it fits snugly into the ear and is practically invisible. Better still, no batteries are needed—no headbands, no conspicuous wires—yet results are positively astonishing even with severest cases. Frank Foster, who is indicted for murder in Alfred Lingle case, brought back to Chicago to face quiz. He was taken from train before it reached the downtown station.

HECKSCHER NOW BIGGEST GOTHAM REALTY HOLDER

He Wrests Crown from Astor Family.

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—August Heckscher, philanthropist and patron of arts, today was rated the largest individual holder of income producing New York city real estate, meaning, of course, real estate on Manhattan island.

In this respect Mr. Heckscher has wrested the realty crown from the Astor family.

Buys Another Skyscraper.

Only last Thursday Mr. Heckscher paid sundry millions in cash for the sixteen story Sears-Roebuck building which is being constructed at the southeast corner of 9th avenue and 31st street and which is to comprise 330,000 square feet of rentable space.

A few weeks ago this shrewd realty investor paid several millions cash for the Bartholomew building in 42d street near 3d avenue.

Mr. Heckscher is a cash trader. That his means are seemingly unlimited is without question.

Holdings Are Listed.

Among the aged philanthropist's better known holdings are:

The 33 story Adams Express building.

The 26 story Heckscher building on 5th avenue.

The 22 story Canadian Pacific building on Madison avenue.

The United States Rubber building site on Broadway.

The Vanderbilt-Concourse building.

The 20 story building at No. 341 Madison avenue.

The 20 story Bartholomew building.

The 15 story Marlin-Rockwell building on Madison avenue.

The 12 story apartment house at No. 927 5th avenue.

The 10 story apartment house at 64th street and Madison avenue.

The 10 story Knox building on 5th avenue.

The 9 story De Pinna building on 5th avenue and the 5 story store-apartment building on East 44th street.

CRYSTAL FORMS ILLUSTRATED.

The systems according to which minerals crystallize, and the varying development of crystal form in each system, are well illustrated in the William J. Chalmers crystal collection which is on exhibition at Field Museum of Natural History.

ENGINEER VETOES RESERVOIRS FOR CHICAGO'S WATER

After a survey City Engineer Gayton decided yesterday that the use of quarries in Chicago as water reservoirs to ease the load on the pumps during the periods of greatest demand from consumers is not feasible. In his search Mr. Gayton said he found only two quarries in Chicago, one at 19th and Lincoln streets, in which refuse has been dumped, and another at 27th and Halsted streets, which is being worked.

"These quarries might hold as much as 5,000,000 gallons of water," said Mr. Gayton. "The total daily pumpage in Chicago is one billion gallons, so the supply in such reservoirs would be comparatively small.

"One thing that is done in this direction is to ask suburbs that receive water from Chicago to erect reservoirs that we fill at night and they draw from in the day. These reservoirs are erected at a considerable height to maintain a pressure."

STEGE, 3 OTHER CAPTAINS PUT ON EMERGENCY CALL

Chief Shifts 5 Sergeants; Adds to Bureau.

Four police captains who have been detailed at the detective bureau without specific commands were transferred yesterday by Acting Police Commissioner Alcock to the newly created miscellaneous division. In another order five sergeants and 35 patrolmen were shifted, 3 sergeants and 23 patrolmen going from district stations to the detective bureau to fill some of the vacancies left in the wake of the recent order, which emptied several hundred berths there.

The captains are John Stege, former deputy commissioner in charge of detectives; William P. Kennedy, Charles L. Larkin, and Richard P. Gill. The official order, effective this morning, reads:

"Until otherwise ordered these captains will report in uniform at the police reserve room, 2138 North Halster street, second floor.

"Their hours of duty will be from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m., with a half hour for lunch. Their days off will be Sundays only.

"A daily record of their attendance will be kept.

"They will be subject to call for any emergency."

The sergeants transferred are John J. Russell, Canalport to detective bureau; John J. Coughlin, Austin to detective bureau; E. J. Hayes, Grand Crossing to detective bureau; Thomas McKenna, Gresham to Brighton Park, and Elmer F. Spengler, Hudson avenue to the miscellaneous division.

Twenty units of the department were placed under the miscellaneous division Friday by Alcock. This division is in charge of Acting First Deputy Commissioner Scanlan.

Another innovation was the detailing yesterday of Capt. Willard Malone in charge of parades and public gatherings for the entire city. Heretofore the district captains have had charge over events of this character within the boundaries of their commands.

An order was sent to the district captains also calling their attention to the city ordinances prohibiting the calling of wares or making noises with mechanical instruments in advertising except in public alleys between the hours of 11 a. m. and 6 p. m. The captains are directed to enforce the ordinances.

SALOONKEEPER WIELDS A CHAIR ON DRY RAIDER

Otto Jessat, whose bar at 2720 North Clark street is said to have continued in operation since prohibition, appeared before United States Commissioner Walker yesterday with a battered eye, as did Prohibition Agent Frank Burgess.

When a squad of raiders appeared early yesterday, Jessat, a German subject, declared he was immune from arrest, according to the agent's complaint, and landed a blow on Burgess' eye, continuing his assault with a chair. Burgess received aid from his fellow drys, and Jessat was subdued.

Commissioner Walker held Jessat in bond of $5,000 on charges of violating the liquor laws and assaulting an officer. Charles Berger, bartender, was held in bond of $2,000, and Jacob Brewer $1,000, for a hearing on July 24.

Doctor Studies Gland Ills as Responsible for Crime

Washington, D. C., July 19.—(AP)—A new way of reasoning the why of crime was laid before President Hoover's law enforcement commission today by a young San Francisco physician who believes the day will come when it will be generally accepted that the chief factor in all human misbehavior lies in chemical or physical malformation of men's bodies.

Dr. Ralph A. Reynolds, the physician, gave his findings from extensive investigation in San Quentin prison, California, to Chairman Wickersham and Commissioner Anderson, in charge of the inquiry into causes of crime. The result was an arrangement with Reynolds to extend his research into several other states, and to embody his conclusions in the commission's final report.

Experiments in Prison.

Starting upon the medical fact that definite disturbances of human glands often are accompanied by abnormal behavior, Reynolds began an independent investigation among the prison population last summer to determine whether the obverse were true: that crime—or anti-social or abnormal actions—go along with poorly functioning glands.

Although the results are yet far from conclusive enough to back up a dogmatic theory, he said today, they have convinced him that exhaustion of the field is warranted.

"This is not a theory," he explained. "It is an interpretation, a line of reasoning more scientific, I believe than the prevalent practice of merely punishing, or merely pitying criminals."

Cites Case of Girl.

"Here is a girl 11 years old," he exemplified, "who because of a disfunctioning gland, has developed all the physical and instinctive characteristics normally attained in 18 years. She has the problems of 18 years, and the experience and knowledge of but 11. Is it any wonder she gets into trouble? Yet, if we did not know her physical defect, we would only condemn or pity her for moral turpitude."

With the coöperation of Dr. L. L. Stanley, the prison physician, Reynolds examined and compiled yards of statistics about 200 criminals in San Quentin, all of whom had easily recognizable glandular disfunctions.

Some Thyroid Cases.

Some of them were thyroid cases, suffering from wrong secretion from a horseshoe-shaped structure in the throat which often causes great nervousness. Others were pituitary patients, belonging to that group of physically abnormal individuals among whom obesity, when pronounced, often is accompanied by excessive growth in adolescence and a definite easy going, "good natured fat" personality. The rest had disturbances of the reproductive system—a field where many outlines still are dim to scientists—a field in which, it is acknowledged, malfunction means abnormal behavior.

"I found a thread of unity, a relationship between thyroid trouble and crimes of violence, such as murder and assault," Reynolds said. "I found it between pituitary disturbances and crimes of irresponsibility, such as robbery and thieving; and between the other disfunctions and acts of moral turpitude."

The percentage of abnormal gland conditions is about 40 per cent higher among prison than among law abiding population, Reynolds concluded from his study.

Far from denying that environment as well as inherited makeup moulds human behavior, he proposed to arrange environment to offset the other. Thus, he believes, the mentors of society can reduce crime.

Reynolds is on the medical staff of Leland Stanford university.

INVOKES SHOTGUN TO END TRAFFIC DISPUTE; JAILED

Bert R. Clendenon, 28 years old, 350 East 74th street, was locked up by the Grand Crossing police on four charges of intent to commit murder last night after trying to settle a traffic dispute with an automatic shotgun.

Arthur Latzke, 25 years old, 7227 South State street, his sweetheart, Miss Rose Abrahamson, 21 years old, 7158 Yates avenue, and two friends, James R. Walker, 1535 Lake avenue, Wilmette, and Ray Erickson, 8205 South Paulina street, were driving south in State street in Latzke's car. Latzke was preparing to turn east at 72d street when Clendenon's machine nudged the Latzke vehicle from behind, crumpling a fender.

Latzke protested, but became calm when Clendenon agreed to escort the whole party to his home for mutual exchange of license numbers, opinions, and insurance policy numbers. Clendenon bade them wait at the door. They were waiting when he came out with the shotgun, but scattered precipitately when he started firing.

"Aw, I aimed in the air," Clendenon objected when locked up. The four complainants contradicted him.

92 Cases of Paralysis Reported in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., July 19.—[Special.]—Ninety-two cases of infantile paralysis have today been recorded in the city of Los Angeles during July. There have been seven deaths. In Los Angeles county limits, outside the city, the cases of the disease total over 60 with six more deaths.

PUSH INQUIRY INTO SHOOTING OF J. H. ROEMER

Police continued their inquiry yesterday into the shooting of John H. Roemer, wealthy attorney, 64 years old, on Friday evening in his struggle with two policemen against arrest at Montrose avenue and Broadway.

Policeman Michael Hoban, of Town Hall station, shot Mr. Roemer twice through the head after the attorney had shot a finger off the left hand of Policeman Edward Strandberg. The policemen said they came upon Roemer in the act of leveling a gun at the head of Miss Susan Kein, 19 years old, 4308 Sheridan road, as the girl was walking with Gerald Laycock, 7142 Harvard avenue.

Mr. Roemer, when quieted at the hospital, said he had been drinking. He said he had never before seen Miss Kein or Laycock and was not aware of what he was doing. Mr. Roemer's condition yesterday was described as critical in the American hospital.

Attorney A. Louis Flynn, an associate of Mr. Roemer, said last night that Mr. Roemer had been in poor health for two years and that his infirm mental and physical condition, influenced by the intense heat, probably caused his acts.

EVICTION SUIT WRITS SERVED ON HOUSEBOATS

Chicago's houseboat colony in the north branch of the Chicago river were served with eviction suit notices yesterday. The suit was filed in the Circuit court on Wednesday by Attorney Walter E. Beebe for the sanitary district. About 400 residents of 100 houseboats scattered along the river from Belmont avenue to Irving Park boulevard are affected by the suit.

The suit chargs the colony with obstructing navigation and rendering the district noisome and unsanitary. Residents of the colony, who have thirty days in which to file an answer, tended to laugh at the notice.

READ HOW 12,000 STANDARD OIL SHARES GREW

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—A trust fund consisting of 12,000 shares of stock of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, set aside in 1917 by John D. Rockefeller to pay the bulk of the income to his daughter, Mrs. Alta Rockefeller Prentice, with $30,000 a year to her husband, E. Parmalee Prentice, now amounts to 356,350 shares and has yielded an income of $6,693,320 to the beneficiaries up to May 31, 1929.

This was disclosed today in a report filed by Sidney C. Crane, named as referee to take an accounting. The principal of the fund has increased from $9,000,000 to $18,173,000.

SECOND BATTLE OF MARNE SEEN AS TURN OF WAR

Experts Agreed on Point 12 Years After.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—American military authorities including high ranking officers of the A. E. F. agree with German historians that the second battle of the Marne beginning July 18, 1918, marked the turning point of the world war and sounded the death knell of the great German offensive against Paris.

"Twelve years ago on July 18, the high tide of the German offensive crumbled into an Allied counter offensive that gathered momentum with each passing phase of the struggle," the war department stated today in a short summary of conclusions reached by army military experts who have had access to German, French, and American war records.

The success achieved on this date by American and French forces, in a counter offensive engineered to "pinch out" the Marne salient between Soissons and Reims, the statement continued, "removed the threat against Paris, took the initiative from the German armies, shook the morale of the enemy and raised that of the allies by leaps and bounds."

Marks Turning Point.

This official statement that the opening of the American-French offensive designed to clear out the forces of the German crown prince from the Marne of Chateau-Thierry salient marked the turning point in the four years conflict, came one week after a CHICAGO TRIBUNE dispatch from Berlin had announced publication of the thirty-fifth volume of "Battles of the World War," a series brought out under the auspices of Germany's national archives by German military experts. In this volume the authors describe July 18, 1918, as the tide turning battle because from that day when the Allied counter offensive began, Germany was forced to defensive warfare never to regain the offensive.

Inquiry discloses that a consensus of opinion of American officials is that the success won by the dash and vigor of the attacking Amercan divisions and the assault of the French troops had suddenly reversed the whole situation on the western front. As these authorities analyze the situation, this attack changed the allied method of thought from defense to offensive and infused new pep into the war weary troops of France and Britain. It ended abruptly the German Champagne-Marne offense which was to have been followed, if successful, by a drive against Paris, prevented the German capture of Reims and demonstrated that Ludendorff's effort to break the allies, before the Americans could put on offensive force in the field had failed.

Pershing Sees Tide Change.

In his final report as commander-in-chief of the American expeditionary forces, Gen. John J. Pershing asserted that the "magnificent dash and power displayed on the field of Soissons by our First and Second divisions" definitely turned the tide of war in favor of the allies. Twelve years of study of the allied records of the battles of the world war has strengthened the war department belief that Gen. Pershing was right. The setting of the two battles which definitely marked the turn of the tide was in the valley of the Marne. Here were fought the Champagne-Marne and the Aisne-Marne, the latter extending from July 18 to Aug. 6.

The Aisne offensive in early summer had taken the Germans to the Marne and had bulged the German front line out between Reims and Soissons into what was known as the Marne or Chateau Thierry salient. Chateau Thierry was the spear head. It was a sharply defined salient in the form of a rough semi-elipse. Its base was about thirty-seven miles wide and its greatest depth about twenty-eight miles. The Vesle and Aisne rivers formed the base.

Mangin Plans Attack.

On June 20, Gen. Mangin, in command of the French tenth army, submitted a plan for an attack to seize the plateau southwest of Soissons. The plan was approved and on July 7 the allies learned that the German high command was planning to attack on July 15 on both sides of Reims. This, the records show, was to be part of two large German operations for July. The other was to destroy the British army in Flanders. These goals, once achieved, the final attack against Paris would begin.

On July 9, after knowledge of the German plans had been obtained, Marshal Foch, the records disclose, wrote to Petain suggesting an enlargement of the scope of the proposed offensive against the Marne salient.

Foch believed success was much more likely if the Soissons offensive was joined by another offensive operation between Reims and the Marne by French troops. Many American authorities believe Foch was undoubtedly influenced by the conviction that the German attack on both sides of Reims would be rendered less likely to succeed if the attention of the enemy was distracted by an allied move against the salient. On July 12 Petain issued orders for converging the attack on the Marne salient, the object being to drive out the Germans or capture them by closing the sack at the base of the salient.

Attack Begins July 18.

When the German attack around Reims began, Petain was undecided for a time as to whether to suspend the Marne salient offensive. Foch ordered the offensive to go on. On July 18 the attack began. The 1st, 2nd, 4th, and 26th American divisions participated.

"Four French armies," states the war department, "the fifth, ninth, sixth and tenth, in line from right to left, were directed to take part in the counter offensive. The tenth army near Soissons was designated to deliver the main attack.

"The spear head of the tenth army was the 20th corps, which was to capture the high ground south of Soissons. It consisted of the 1st and 2nd American divisions and the 1st Moroccan division. The troops of this corps were four-fifths American. These two American divisions with the Moroccan division in between them advanced with characteristic dash and vigor.

American Troops Advance.

"By 8 a. m. they were in possession of the ground which practically assured the success of the whole battle. To the right, elements of the 4th division, attacking with the French, advanced vigorously. Still further south the 26th division had captured the villages of Belleau and Torcy. Orders for the gradual retirement of the German troops were issued that evening."

The German army was shaken by the suddenness and fury of the attack. That evening of July 18 was characterized by the German crown prince as the most critical in his experience. The allied counter offensive had taken the German forces in flank and rear. The most dangerous penetration was that toward Soissons. If the allies took Soissons and reached the hills to the east the German divisions would be in danger. Many American army officers believe that had sufficient reserves been immediately behind the attacking allied forces the offensive would have resulted in a greater number of prisoners and possibly the capture of most of the Germans in the salient. Two French divisions were held in reserve behind the Twentieth corps. On July 20 ended what was considered the first phase of the Aisne-Marne operation. The second phase, from July 20 to 30, covers the period of German withdrawal. The third, from July 30 to Aug. 6, was marked by pursuit of the Germans to the Aisne-Marne line.

ARRESTS DECREASE, STILL AND BREWERY RAIDS GAIN IN YEAR

A slight decrease in the number of arrests and an increase in the number of stills and breweries seized as compared to the previous year was shown in the annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30 sent to Washington yesterday by E. C. Yellowley, former prohibition administrator for the enforcement area that formerly included Illinois, Iowa and the eastern half of Wisconsin.

The figures on enforcement achievements for the two years follow:

	1929.	1930.
Arrests	6,171	6,087
Stills	1,004	1,301
Breweries	219	243
Permanent injunctions	1,351	758
Autos seized	290	395
Beer destroyed [gals.]	220,630	213,845
Alcohol destroyed [gals.]	86,918	95,106
Mash destroyed [gals.]	2,865,864	4,263,043

The substantial increase in the amount of mash destroyed was pointed to by Mr. Yellowley as an indication of the seizure of bigger and better stills and breweries.

HOOVER NAMES 2 FOR FEDERAL POWER BODY

Washington, D. C., July 19.—(AP)—President Hoover today nominated Claude L. Draper of Wyoming, Ralph B. Williamson of Washington state, and Marcel Garsaud of Louisiana as members of the newly created federal power commission.

The chief executive also sent to the senate the following nominations:

William M. Jardine of Kansas to be minister to Egypt.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines of Utah to be administrator of veterans' affairs, and Nicholas Roosevelt of New York to be vice governor of the Philippine islands.

The nominations have been held up by the President until the senate neared a vote upon the London treaty. He did not wish, it was said at the White House, to introduce extraneous matter so long as the treaty fight was at its height.

The three members of the power commission are the first of five to be named by the President.

SLEEPS ON SWITCH TRACK; KILLED.

17 MIDDIES WILL BE PUNISHED FOR 'GIRL SMUGGLING'

2 Women Don Blouses, Eat in Mess Hall.

Annapolis, Md., July 19.—[Special.]—According to unofficial reports 17 midshipmen will be punished for their part in the recent escapade at the academy when two Washington young women donned middies' blouses and took a meal with the midshipmen in Bancroft hall.

According to the report the two midshipmen held responsible for the presence of the young women have been recommended for dismissal and their cases have been referred to the navy department. Two others considered to have special responsibility in the matter will be sent to the Reina Mercedes, the station ship, for sixty days and receive 100 demerits each.

Thirteen others, said to have been at the table with the visitors and having failed to report it, according to the report, will spend thirty days on the ship and receive fifty demerits each.

Capt. C. P. Snyder, commandant of the midshipmen, it is understood, completed the investigation into the case today.

The two escorts, members of the new second class, the midshipmen in charge of the table and the midshipmen at the table were restricted to the grounds of the academy while the inquiry was in progress.

Lieut. Commander Donald Beary, aid to Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, superintendent of the academy, declined to make public the names of those involved.

The two girls are said to have worn midshipmen's jumpers over their own clothing. Commander Beary said they were not fully dressed in the midshipmen's uniform.

CHICAGO REALTY MAN SEIZED ON FRAUD CHARGE

Sol Rubenstein, former Chicago real estate operator, sought on a confidence game charge for more than a year, is in custody in St. Louis, it was learned last night. Mrs. Bertha Zeilinger, a Chicago woman, signed the warrant for Rubenstein's arrest, but her address could not be learned last night.

According to the police, Mrs. Zeilinger charged that Rubenstein appropriated to his own use stocks valued at more than $5,000, which she had put up as collateral. Dispatches from St. Louis said Rubenstein told the police there that his transactions with the woman was legitimate, and that he would fight extradition to Chicago.

SENATE'S RULES CAUSE DELAY IN NAVY PACT VOTE

Must Act Upon Treaty Clause by Clause.

permits the United States. He also asserted that the London conference had accomplished no navy reduction, and that none will be forthcoming from the next one unless we go to it with ships to bargain with.

Senator Moses offered one of the two amendments to the treaty that were rejected without a roll call. It provided that the prohibition of the sinking of merchant ships by submarines unless passengers and crews are placed in safety applies only in the case of merchantmen that are unarmed.

Escalator Amendment Lost.

The other amendment, offered by Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], was intended to interpret the escalator clause. Under this clause a signatory that deems itself menaced by the navy building program of another power may exceed the tonnage limitations specified in the treaty. Then the other signatories may also exceed the limitations in the identical categories.

The cruiser category is divided into the subcategories of 8 inch gun and 6 inch gun ships. But as the escalator clause does not mention subcategories Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams holds that we could build any kind of cruisers to match the excess building by another power. For example, if Great Britain, alarmed by French navy building, were to lay down more 6 inch gun cruisers than permitted by the treaty we could lay down an equal tonnage of 8 inch gun ships. Admiral William V. Pratt, chief naval adviser of the American delegation at London, holds that we would be restricted to the construction of 6 inch gun ships.

Woud Ignore Subcategories.

Senator Bingham's amendment provided that building under the escalator clause should be "without regard to restrictions of subcategories," thus giving effect to the Adams interpretation. Senator Reed opposed it, saying Adams is wrong and Pratt is right. Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] also opposed the amendment as immaterial. He said that America could always take the initiative under the escalator clause and thereby build any kind of ships desired. Thus, if the British were to build 6 inch gun cruisers in answer to French building, the United States could declare itself menaced by France and, invoking the escalator clause, build 8 inch gun ships. Senator Arthur R. Robinson [Rep., Ind.] denounced this proposal as smacking of sharp practice.

Senator Bingham said that Japan might profess to be menaced by China or Russia and "upset the balance of power in the far east" by building six inch gun cruisers, but under the escalator clause as construed by Senator Reed we could protect our interests in the Pacific only by building the 8 inch gun ships essential to our requirements. But the amendment was overwhelmed.

Reed Resents Questioning.

Senator Reed resented attempts by Senator Frederick Hale [Rep., Me.], chairman of the naval affairs committee, and Senator Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.] to catechize him on the meaning of treaty provisions. He angrily said he would refuse to be cross-examined by the senators, who referred constantly to typewritten material said to have been furnished by naval officers. Mr. Hale explained he did not understand the treaty.

"The senator's inability to understand," snorted Reed, "is connected with a higher power than mine."

In the course of the discussion it was divulged that the secret documents bearing on the treaty negotiations which are in the possession of Senators Reed and Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.] are far from complete, as the result of the suppression of certain correspondence.

President Hoover refused to furnish the senate with the secret documents, but said that Senators Reed and Robinson would give any senator access to them under seal of secrecy. It was not known at the time, however, that the administration was holding out some of the documents.

Asks for Japanese Notes.

The disclosure was made following a question put to Senator Reed by Senator Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.]. Mr. Copeland wanted to know if William R. Castle Jr., special ambassador to Tokio, had assured the Japanese government the United States would not build the last three of the eighteen big cruisers allotted by the treaty.

Senator Reed replied that no such assurance was given, there being no mention of the matter in the messages passing between Mr. Castle and the American delegation in London.

"Are those dispatches among the documents in your possession for submission to senators?" asked Senator Johnson.

"No," replied Mr. Reed, "I destroyed them to protect the code in which they were written from disclosure, but copies may be procured."

HOOVER STICKS TO HIS DESK DESPITE HEAT, BUT TAKES AUTO RIDE

Washington, D. C., July 19.—(AP)—Through one of the hottest days of the summer in the capital, President Hoover stuck to his dek today except for a brief ride late in the afternoon accompanied by Mrs. Hoover and their youngest son, Allan.

The chief executive had hoped to make his usual week-end trip to his lodge in the Virginia mountains, but since the special session of the senate started he has made a practice of staying in his office while the senate was meeting.

Allan Hoover arrived home yesterday to spend the week-end with his parents and expects to depart late tomorrow for Bayonne, N. J., where he is working during the summer.

MARINE RESERVE WILL BE REVIEWED BY CROSLEY SOON

The final inspection and review of the 5th corps area, United States Marine Reserve corps, will be held Friday afternoon at the Great Lakes Naval station. A battalion of five companies from Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Toledo, and Detroit will pass in review before Rear Admiral Walter S. Crosley, commandant of the station. Special merit recognition will be given the men.

The reserve is completing a two weeks' summer encampment under the command of Maj. Chester L. Fordney of Saginaw, Mich. The encampment is said to have the largest number of marines assembled at the Great Lakes station since the world war. Special attention has been given this summer to problems of infantry tactics and drill.

RHINELAND DONS SUNDAY BEST FOR VON HINDENBURG

'Tour of Triumph' Starts with Great Success.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MAYENCE, Germany, July 19.—On the threshold of the 900 year old Speyer cathedral, one of the most beautiful in Germany, President von Hindenburg, on a triumphal tour of the Rhineland and Palatinate, which were freed by the French evacuation on June 30, today received homage and thanks for his leadership of Germany.

Church bells pealed throughout the country as the highest dignitaries of the Catholic church, in colorful frocks, thanked the Protestant president for his government of the German people, and told him that every day the priests in the Speyer cathedral pray for his protection the same as they prayed for the old German kaisers in the days of their glory.

Crowds Wait Outside.

Outside stood crowds, anxious for a glimpse of the president. From Speyer all the way through the romantic Palatinate, with its toy boxlike villages, and down the Rhine to Mayence, the streets were turned into triumphal roads, full of symbols meant to convey a message of loyalty to him. For weeks the villagers and townsmen have toiled, and for hours they stood today to wave greetings to the president.

President von Hindenburg thanked the Speyer church dignitaries for their reception and asked them to thank the Palatinate people for their loyalty. His words were not prepared, as they were in his speeches later in the day. No word of hatred came from him. He was eloquent in praise of the courage and forebearance of the men and women in the liberated territory.

"Blackest Days Over."

"The blackest days are over for our country," he said. "There still remains much to be done. We don't want to look backward—we want to look forward. We want to believe in the future, and we can believe in it."

After the church ceremony Von Hindenburg went to the town hall, where officials of the freed provinces swore oaths of fealty to the German republic. His speech was broadcast on all street corners in Speyer. In the name of the cabinet the president thanked the masses for their unflinching loyalty in times of distress. The populace stood with bared heads and joined in with the president's "hochs" to the fatherland, and the whole countryside joined in singing the national anthem, "Deutschland Uber Alles."

Famous Wine Center.

Early this afternoon, when President von Hindenburg started on the trip to Mayence, the villages were waiting for him. Their names alone are music to the ears of those who know real wine, because it is in the Palatinate where the best German wine is made. The natural beauty of the villages is famous, but it was enhanced by the artistic decorations that the townspeople devised themselves.

In the general picture today uniforms were scarce, because the Palatinate belongs to Bavaria, which has prohibited the wearing of uniforms by political clubs. To make up for this the male part of the population turned out in their firemen's uniforms, with gorgeous brass helmets.

Girls working in the vineyards stood at the roadside in bright kerchiefs. The girls in the villages all wore white. The local police in the villages wore shiny spiked helmets. The state police, in green uniforms, wore fantastic plumes of horsehair shakoes. Flags of every description floated and waved.

Many Forms of Expression.

The enthusiasm of the masses was expressed differently in each spot. At Duerkheim sounds of a beautiful chorus came floating through the park. In Neustadt and Hardt a living monument of young men, clad in a minimum of clothing, illustrated the sufferings of the "years of slavery." Neustadt was one of the chief sufferers during the days of the French occupation.

Tonight President von Hindenburg is resting at Mayence palace. Singing clubs are serenading him after a day which cannot have left a shadow of doubt in the mind of the president that the people of the German republic see an idol in him.

Kappa Alpha Theta Leads Fraternities at U. of I.

Urbana, Ill., July 19.—(AP)—Kappa Alpha Theta ranked first among the national social sororities on the campus during the last semester, with an average of 3.175, officials of the University of Illinois said today. The average is figured on a basis of 5 as perfect. Pi Beta Phi was second; Gamma Phi Beta, third, and Kappa Kappa Gamma was fourth. Sigma Kappa, scholastic leader of the preceding semesters, dropped to 13th place.

CANADIAN BOOZE STILL FLOWING TO U. S., BUT VIA SHIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., July 19.—Liquor is still finding its way from Canada to the United States, despite the liquor export act, but very little of it is going south across the border, shipments having been diverted to St. Pierre and Miquelon, where cargoes are reshipped or diverted to the United States.

During the month of June, shipments of whisky from Canada to the island of St. Pierre and Miquelon totaled 140,590 gallons, while in June last year no whisky was exported from Canada to these islands.

There were also shipped to St. Pierre and Miquelon from Canada during June 203 gallons of beer and 4,521 gallons of potable spirits other than whisky.

Wolfe Pledges Cleaning of All Alleys in City

A thorough cleaning of all alleys in the city was promised yesterday by Commissioner of Public Works Wolfe as a result of the action of the council at its last meeting in appropriating an additional $500,000 to the street department. After the one good cleaning up of garbage the remainder of the fund will be used, Wolfe said, in improving the regular service which was reduced after the passage of the main budget in January.

Ruling Tuesday

Hearing of testimony, in the Thomas Condon divorce trial was completed yesterday before Superior Judge Williams. The judge is expected to give a decision on Tuesday. Mrs. Mary D. Condon again took the stand yesterday and made a blanket denial of all her husband's charges, which include intoxication, misconduct, and cruelty. Condon, who is contesting his wife's separate maintenance suit with a counter action for divorce, is head of the Condon Industries, Inc.

Three witnesses for Mrs. Condon testified that they had never seen her under the influence of intoxicants, although it was admitted that she generally served cocktails and highballs at the meetings of their bridge club. The witnesses were Mrs. Eleanor Higgins, 8030 Drexel boulevard, a sister of Mrs. Condon; Mrs. Lucille Diter, 2453 East 74th place, and James Bunn, 1205 Sherwin avenue, a brother-in-law. Mrs. Condon has charged cruelty.

Rubbish Blaze Causes Flurry in County Jail

A heavy pall of smoke arising from a rubbish fire in the jail yard of the county jail yesterday afternoon caused excitement among prisoners in the southwest portion of the structure. Acting Warden George Gibson assured them there was no danger.

SEIZE 3 RADIOS USED TO DIRECT BOOZE RUNNERS

Dry Agents Arrest Seven in Smart Colonies.

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Three powerful secret wireless sending stations used, it was said, to guide ships laden with liquor to safe landings in unguarded waters were raided and confiscated today by federal agents in a series of raids on stately mansions in the exclusive summer colonies of Suffolk county, Long Island.

Four houses were raided. They were at Quogue, Southampton, Hampton Bays, and Mattituck. At the latter place a wealthy retired manufacturer, Joseph Michert, was arrested in the midst of a dinner party on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws. In the Southampton raid on the Howard homestead, across the road from the summer home of Col. H. H. Rogers, Standard Oil multimillionaire, a powerful radio set was found in operation.

Seven Prisoners Held.

Seven prisoners taken in the raids were held in $7,500 bail each in Brooklyn during the day on charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws and the federal radio act of 1927.

The confiscated material—three tons of it—consisting of about $20,000 worth of wireless apparatus, code books, charts, shotguns, rifles, a horse pistol, and a bottle or two of champagne, were taken to the subtreasury building and stored there under guard.

The raids were planned and carried out under the direction of H. T. Simmons, chief of the special agents of the department of justice here, and Arthur Batcheller, local radio supervisor of the department of commerce. Mr. Batcheller said the Long Island drive was only the opening skirmish in a campaign to put unlicensed radio stations out of business.

Believe Fake S O S Explained.

The seizure of wireless plants, it was alleged, explained the mystery of the fake S O S call which a week ago caused coast guard vessels protecting the Long Island shore line from smugglers to desert their posts and rush to the assistance of the yacht Florida, which was supposed to be in distress off Montauk point with Mayor Walker and a fishing party aboard.

Mr. Batcheller said, however, that definite evidence to link any of the raided stations, which allegedly were operating without a department of commerce license, with the bogus call for help was lacking.

Apparatus Hidden.

In one of the places visited, the Horton mansion at Hampton Bays, elaborate efforts had been made to conceal the transmitting apparatus. The only sign of its existence was an ordinary antenna and an innocent looking set of dials in an old phonograph cabinet.

The agents were about to leave with apologies when one of them traced a seemingly useless wire to a concrete garage 200 or 300 yards from the house and found a complete sending station hidden in an old trunk.

WOUND KILLS THEFT SUSPECT.

Fred Boehmes, 28 years old, 115 South Homan, shot June 18 by Policeman Lee Davis of the North Damen avenue station, when he opened fire on Davis as he was being questioned as a possible auto thief, died yesterday at Bridewell hospital.

Forbid Army Physicians to Prescribe Rum for Civilians

Washington, D. C., July 19.—[Special.]—Army medical officers no longer are permitted to prescribe alcohol or any brand of alcoholic beverages for civilian patients. Circular 33, just issued, prohibits army physicians from obtaining from the national prohibition director permits allowing prescriptions to be written.

Such permits are not necessary in prescribing alcohol to military personnel, but under previous regulations it was mandatory for medical officers engaged in private practice to obtain such permits in event they wrote prescriptions for civilians.

Under certain conditions army medical officers are permitted to treat civilian patients. The new regulation states "medical officers and contract surgeons will not prescribe alcohol or alcoholic liquors except in case of actual sickness, and then only when a definite therapeutic reason therefor exists. Only such amounts will be prescribed at one time as are clearly indicated and will be necessary for the next ensuing 48 hours. Alcohol and alcoholic liquors will not be prescribed under these regulations with the intent that they be purchased from civilian dealers by the individuals concerned."

The new restrictions recall the recent war department memorandum calling attention of army officers to the national prohibition act and forbidding them to violate it either on or off military reservations.

Former Wife of Broker Divorces Second Husband

Mrs. Sadie O'Connell Goldblatt, former wife of a wealthy loop broker, yesterday won a divorce from her second husband, Harry Goldblatt, a salesman. The decree was granted by Judge Sabath on grounds of cruelty. Last January Goldblatt sued his wife for an accounting of the $250,000 settlement she received from her first husband. He alleged she had entered into a written agreement with him whereby he was to receive one-half of the alimony for marrying her. The case is pending.

(A BUSINESS EDITORIAL)

This is No. 3 of the series of editorials used ten years ago in the last period of readjustment. It sounds a note of courage and truth that is worthwhile at this time.

THE SOFT TIMES

On every hand we hear of hard times. Everybody is complaining. 'Tis only the heavy clouds that people see, not the sun that is trying to pierce them.

The press, however, is optimistically telling us that the prospect is brighter, that we have long since reached the turning point, and that we are well on the way to normalcy. People read and smile and that's all.

What is the trouble? We are like spoiled children. Everything came our way so easily a while ago that we cannot get used to the changed condition. Things seemed to happen with little effort on our part.

Let us all realize that the soft times have gone, and in their place has come a time when all must buckle down and work hard for the good things of life.

It isn't the stringency of the present that we detest; it is only the fact that the easy times of yesterday have gone. Let's turn about, forget the softness of yesterday, and make the best of the blessings of today.

HEAR HOW FUNDS FROM SOVIET GET TO AGENTS HERE

Say Trade Bodies Mask Red Activities.

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—How American communists get money for their subversive work in the United States and the part played in these transactions by the Amtorg Trading corporation, the soviet commercial agency in this country, was told by witnesses today before the congressional committee investigating communist activities.

With the Amtorg concern continuing to play the central part in the inquiry, further evidence purporting to show the direct contact between Moscow and American communists was adduced when Inspector John A. Lyons, head of the radical bureau of the police department, was recalled to the stand.

Hamilton Fish Jr., chairman of the committee, sought the inspector's views as to what ought to be done with the communists as a party. The inspector declared emphatically that the communists should be suppressed, outlawed as a party, "because they do not represent a political party but organized violence directed toward the overthrow of the government."

Former Envoy's Revelations.

The piece de resistance of Inspector Lyons' testimony today, however, was his reading into the record of the revelations made recently by Gregory Besseodovsky, former soviet chargé d'affaires in Tokio and in Paris, who, upon breaking with the soviet government, exposed many of the secrets and inner workings of the soviet régime, including the methods employed by the communist international.

Besseodovsky's revelations concerning Moscow's intrigues in America and the utilization of the Amtorg as a channel of communist propaganda in the United States, Inspector Lyons told the committee, bear out the implications of the Amtorg documents made public by Grover Whalen, former police commissioner, who on Friday told the committee that the documents showing how Moscow is using the Amtorg as a channel of communication with Reds in this country were genuine "beyond doubt." The documents have been denounced as forgeries by Peter A. Bogdanov, chief of the Amtorg, who Tuesday will be given an opportunity to refute the genuineness of the documents.

Money Sent Through Amtorg.

The substance of the Besseodovsky revelations was that subsidies were transferred to the Amtorg for distribution to American communists through the soviet embassy in Berlin. These subsidies have increased in recent years, according to Besseodovsky.

In addition to spending approximately $100,000 a year on propaganda in the United States, Moscow has permitted the American communist party to draw emergency funds from the Amtorg to the amount of $10,000 a year. In addition, the Red trade union international, with headquarters in Moscow, contributes $25,000 a year to propaganda in American trade unions Besseodovsky revealed, while $60,000 a year is being spent by the soviet government in its Ogpu branch in the United States. This money is being spent on espionage work, including work in the army and navy.

Other Witnesses.

Another witness who helped cast light on how money reached American communists from Moscow was John J. Leary Jr., labor editor of the New York World, who, after telling of communist work in the needle trades, revealed that American merchants holding contracts with the soviet government turn over money to communist organizations here from payments received from Moscow. One of the firms mentioned by Mr. Leary was the Eitingen-Schild corporation, of which Matty Eitingen is president, and which holds a $30,000,000 fur concession from the soviet government.

A large part of today's session was devoted to testimony on communist activities among Negroes. The witnesses were Phillip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Pullman Porters; Alderman Fred R. Moore, and Dr. F. Ethalred Brown, a Negro minister of Harlem and a Socialist.

Survivors of Fatal Boat Crash Tell Stories

Charge Yacht Without Lights in Lake Crash Fatal to Girl

Coast guardsmen and survivors of Friday night's lake collision off Rogers Park who described the accident which caused the death of Miss Betty Ayers, 18 years old, of 5200 Sheridan road, testified at her inquest yesterday that the auxiliary yawl Scarab was not lighted. Fifteen other persons were thrown into the water when the cabin speedboat Whoopee rammed the 63 foot yawl, sinking it.

The speedboat, owned by Benjamin H. Marshall Jr., son of the wealthy sportsman and architect, was taken out from the Marshall home on the Wilmette yacht harbor for a cruise to escape the heat. Young Marshall, Miss Ayers, and two other young couples were aboard.

On its return from a trip to the waters off Edgewater beach the speed boat rammed the yawl, piloted by George Pulver, millionaire broker of Washington, D. C. Pulver and his companions on the yawl were not present at the inquest yesterday, presumably because they were not notified. The inquest was continued until Aug. 7.

Pilot Tells of Crash.

Barton Webster, 43 Walnut street, Hinsdale, retained as boat pilot for the Marshalls, said at the inquest that he had turned the wheel of the craft over to Miss Dorothy Marshall, 15 years old, sister of the owner, and that she was at the controls when the crash occurred.

"All of a sudden," Webster said, "I saw the yawl directly in front of us without lights and I yelled to Dorothy, at the same time helping her with the wheel. Up in front were Betty Ayers and Ben Marshall, and both went into the water."

The girl's body was recovered from the lake a few hours after the accident.

Capt. Otto Fricke of the Evanston coast guard, who went to the rescue, testified at the inquest that the Scarab was without lights. He said the Whoopee had its navigation lights burning.

Survivors' Parents at Inquest.

Benjamin Marshall Sr. was present at the inquest, as also was Alfred H. Shotwell, 209 Lake Shore drive, millionaire candy manufacturer, whose son, Robert, 16 years old, was a passenger on the Whoopee. Other guests on the boat were William J. De Riemer, 18 years old, son of Dr. Alfred De Riemer, 6022 Kenmore avenue, and Miss Janet Schreiner, 15 years old, daughter of Joseph O. Schreiner, 3330 Sheridan road, board of trade operator.

Young Marshall, who was injured in attempting to rescue Miss Ayers, was still in the Evanston hospital yesterday.

Funeral services for Miss Ayers will be held tomorrow at 9:30 a. m., from the chapel at 6749 Sheridan road, to St. Ita's church. Burial will be at Calvary cemetery. Miss Ayers was the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Egan Ayers, the widow of William N. Ayers. Besides her mother she is survived by a sister, Helen.

MARGARET COYNE ASKS DIVORCE ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Claims Mistreatment on Wedding Day.

Mrs. Margaret Quan Coyne, 38 East Elm street, yesterday filed suit for divorce in the Superior court against Philip Coyne of Wilmington, Del. The bill, charging cruelty, states Coyne's mistreatment began on their wedding day, and that she left him three weeks after their return from a wedding trip to the West Indies.

The marriage of Miss Quan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Quan, took place on Jan. 20 of this year and was an event of the winter season. The service was performed at the Holy Name cathedral and was followed with a reception at the Fortnightly club. Miss Quan made her debut in 1926 and is a member of the Junior league and Service club. Coyne is the son of William Coyne of Wilmington.

The bill, drawn up by the law firm of Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson, declares that shortly after the marriage service Coyne left his bride, remained away for four hours and then returned after he had been communicated with by telephone. The next day the couple left for New York, where they sailed for the West Indies.

They returned to New York on Feb. 20, the bill states, and went to Wilmington, where they were to make their home. Five days later, Mrs. Coyne came alone to Chicago, visited her parents for a week and then returned to Wilmington, the bill recites.

On March 15, Mrs. Coyne asserts, she separated from her husband and since has been living with her parents in Chicago. Mrs. Coyne charges her husband has at no time provided a home for her and declares they have never lived as man and wife.

Charges Cruelty on Wedding Day.

The series of cruel treatments, the bill states, began on their wedding day when Coyne gave his wife a shove. On another occasion, she alleges, she narrowly escaped serious burns when Coyne placed a lighted cigar in his mouth as she was about to kiss him.

She charges he caused her much anguish on numerous occasions by driving his automobile at a speed of sixty miles an hour through traffic.

Mrs. Coyne declares her husband owns valuable property and is a man of considerable means. She asks suitable alimony.

ONE KILLED, 4 HURT IN BLAST.

Reading, Pa., July 19.—(AP)—H. B. Cooling, 35, foreman of the F. S. Wertz and Sons flour, feed and grain warehouse, was killed and four other employés were seriously burned today in an explosion which partially wrecked the building.

SEEK $60,000,000 OF U. S. TO BUILD TWO SUPER LEVIATHANS

Washington, D. C., July 19.—(AP)—Documents relating to the pending sale of two government owned steamship lines and an application for $60,000,000 of government funds with which to build two super Leviathans were prepared today by the shipping board for delivery to President Hoover's advisory commitee on shipping.

Ira Campbell, secretary of the committee, asked that the documents be sent to him in New York, where the committee has begun work.

The proposals to be studied first are the application of the United States lines for money with which to build the two new ships, and the offer of the same lines to purchase the American Diamond and America France Steamship lines as contrasted with the bids of the present operators of these ships, the Black Diamond and the Cosmopolitan Steamship companies.

Samuel Goodacre, secretary of the shipping board, said the information requested and "other general data" would be forwarded to Campbell.

U. S. JUDGE HOLDS BAN ON NEGRO VOTERS IS O. K.

El Paso, Tex., July 19.—(AP)—Judge Charles A. Boynton of the United States District court today held the state Democratic executive committee had a right to bar Negroes from participation in the party primaries.

Judge Boynton dismissed the application of Luther Wiley of San Antonio for an injunction restraining the Bexar county Democratic executive committee from denying him a vote in the July 26 primary. He held the disqualification of Negroes by the Democrats was not an action of the state, but of private individuals.

The state Democratic executive committee had passed resolutions denying Negroes participation in the primaries but notwithstanding this action the county executive committees of Val Verde and McLennan counties had decided to let the Negroes vote.

LAST MEMBER OF LAST MAN'S CLUB TO SIP OLD WINE

Stillwater, Minn., July 19.—(AP)—A weird promise, made in jest and sealed with song and laughter, will be fulfilled in deep solemnity here Monday when Charley Lockwood completes a pilgrimage to Stillwater and drinks a toast in old red wine.

For the 87 year old civil war veteran is the last man of the Last Man's club, and Monday, the anniversary of the battle of Bull Run, in which he and 33 other club members fought, is the traditional date set for carrying out the covenant of these men, who survived a battle scarred company of Stillwater men who marched away to war in 1861.

"One sip is all I will take," Lockwood said today at Minneapolis, where he is resting before coming here Monday, en route from his home at Chamberlain, S. D., and then he explained that for many years he has confidently looked forward to being the last man of the club, and wishes that instead of wine the contents of the bottle had been whisky, for he has never cared for burgundy.

A massive banquet table will be spread in Lowell inn, on the site of the old Sawyer house, where the survivors of company B, First Minnesota volunteer infantry, gathered for a reunion July 21, 1885.

There it was that, after hours of feasting, speeches, and jollity, the plan for the club was laid—just how no one ever recalled. But a bottle of burgundy, the last of the evening's supply, was set aside, from which the toast of the last should be drunk—and this bottle will be standing before Lockwood Monday.

Around the table will be 33 empty chairs, draped in black, representative of his comrades. Lockwood will dine alone, and alone he will stand to drink the toast to the others, which was looked forward to as an honor in 1885 and in which Lockwood now finds no pride.

'CARMEN' CAST TAKES ACT TO SETTLE NERVES

BY EDWARD MOORE.

It took practically one complete act for the performance of "Carmen" at Ravinia last night to recover from an attack of fidgety nerves. For one thing the limitations of time make it necessary to cut a score as long as this one so they begin with the second act instead of the first. I have always believed that if a cut is necessary, it might better be the last.

So beginning with the second, it was harder to get into tempo. Ina Bourskaya in her singing dance, caught the right spirit, and Giovanni Martinelli continued it with the flower song. They, however, were not able to dominate the rest of the act.

But with the third act the opera began to flow as it should, smoothly, suavely, without jerks or angles. The long concerted numbers at the beginning were excellent, the card scene was good enough for any performance, and it was followed by one of the high spots of this one. It was the aria of Micaela, sung beautifully by Queena Mario, with all the lovely tone and simple, unaffected manner that the number should have, and, apart from a slightly unconventional ending, a perfect piece of art.

SWEDISH GROUP TO HAVE ANNUAL OUTING TODAY

The annual outing of the Swedish Societies' Old People's Home association will be held today on the grounds of the home, at Pioneer road and Grant street, Evanston. Thousands of Chicagoans of Swedish descent are expected to attend. The outings have been held annually for 20 years.

Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Evanston, Oscar C. Lundquist, Swedish consul, and Rodney Brandon, state director of public welfare, will be among the speakers.

The United Swedish singers of Chicago will entertain the guests. Carl Festin is chairman of the committee in charge and Edward L. Jarl chairman of the program committee.

THEY WILL SING FOR JOY OF IT AT MUSIC FESTIVAL

Army of Chorus Voices to Revive Old Tunes.

Festival Facts

TIME—Saturday night, Aug. 23.

PLACE—Soldiers' Field, Chicago.

FEATURES—Grand parade, including scores of bands and drum corps and choruses preceding program. Massed bands playing Sousa marches; 85-piece band in "Anvil Chorus," with accompaniment of electric anvils, and "Overture of 1812," augmented by artillery in thunderous bombardment; community singing; broadcast of concert over W-G-N.

PURPOSE—To afford opportunity for musicians in Chicagoland to win recognition for their talents and provide an entertaining, unusual program for music lovers throughout the central states.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Remember away back when the folks used to gather around the piano in the evening and all turn loose singing "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "The Banks of the Wabash," "Sweet Marie," "The Sidewalks of New York," and a dozen others of different vintages and degrees of tunefulness?

They don't do it so much now. Talking machines started doing it for them and the radio is completing the job. Just the same, no amount of machine made music has succeeded in striking the American nation dumb, and no amount of it is going to in the future. Just how much we ordinary folks care about singing just for the fun of it is going to be made manifest when THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Chicagoland Music Festival has its big concert on Soldiers' field the evening of Saturday, Aug. 23.

Song Gladdens the Soul.

For singing, says an old treatise on the subject published a couple of centuries ago, is the finest exercise on earth for gladdening the soul and clearing the pipes. The author had the right idea. He might have added that it is the only musical exercise that needs no purchase or manufacture of an instrument whereon to make the music. Every person carries his own musical instrument. It is his voice. All he needs to do is to open his mouth.

This has nothing to do with solo singing. It is not concerned with the aristocratic golden-throats of opera and concert, petted prima donnas, highly trained tenors who emit strangely beautiful and enormously difficult arias and are paid enormous fees for so doing.

This is a homelier, more intimate form of music, making fewer pretenses, and generally turning out to be more enjoyable in the doing. For there is a lot more fun in getting in and helping do a thing yourself than sitting on the side lines and watching other people do it.

Good Chorus Singing Plentiful.

Rather curiously, although ravishing solo voices are scarce things in this world of ours and command their great fees because of their scarcity quite as much as for their beauty, good chorus singing is to be found on every hand. There is no paradox here. It rests upon a fact well known to choral singers and choral conductors.

Almost any group of ordinary run-of-the-mine individual singers can be turned into a good chorus with very little trouble. If A's voice is slightly rough in some of its tones, that roughness is rubbed off, hidden, canceled by the voice of B, and his in turn by C's.

When the Chicagoland Musical Festival was first planned it was hoped that there would be a liberal response from Chicagoland. These hopes have been more than surpassed. The proponents of the plan themselves are exhibiting symptoms of surprise over the answers. As it looks now, there will be at least twenty choruses present at the event, choruses of varying dimensions but averaging about thirty-five singers each. Add to these twenty bands, averaging about forty-five players each, and at least fifteen drum corps of the same size, and you can see that the concert at Soldiers' Field really deserves the adjectives of huge and gigantic that have been applied to it.

Don't forget the date—Saturday, Aug. 23.

FROM THE CONTESTANTS

Editors of newspapers which are sponsoring the preliminary music festivals in their home cities in Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, and Michigan have written enthusiastic reports of progress in their plans and of the numbers of contestants whom they will send to the Chicagoland festival in Soldiers' field. Among the nearby cities in which preparations are going forward are Waukegan, South Bend, and Hammond.

For the folks in Waukegan who do not have radio in their homes, A. F. Carney, of the Carney Radio company, will relay the Soldiers' Field program through a loud speaker, rigged up to throw the festival music across the street to the court house lawn. Comfortable chairs will be provided by Mr. Carney and everybody is invited to listen in.

Other stores and organizations assisting the Waukegan News-Sun in planning for the local festival are the Waukegan Township High School board, the North Shore line, the James C. O'Shea Music store, the Cable Piano company, the Lake county Local 284, American Federation of Musicians, the Genesee School of Music and the Libertyville Municipal band.

Factory Singer Enters.

A factory worker in South Bend writes to the News-Times, the paper directing the music festival in that city, that he is practicing two hours each day. He says, "I'm greatly thrilled over the opportunity of entering the News-Times-Chicago Tribune festival. My friends say I have a good tenor voice. This will be the first time in my life that it has been given a real test."

John W. Whitaker of the Hammond Times, who has been given charge of the music festival contest for his paper, announces that the Hammond high school band, which ranked third at the national band concert at Flint, probably will come to Chicago, as it has entered in the local festival. Other units in the Hammond contest are the Whiting American Legion drum corps, the Hammond Shrine corps, the Orpheus mixed chorus, and the Saengerbund Fidelia, a German singing group of 35 male voices.

Two huge searchlights, anti-aircraft equipment, will illuminate Soldiers' field on the night of the festival and marching drum corps and bands will be vividly seen as they execute their steps. The lights, manned by an army detail, will be loaned through the courtesy of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the Sixth army corps area. These lights, mounted on trucks, can be moved to any place on the field.

Wed at Church

Miss Margaret Elizabeth Meyercord, daughter of George R. Meyercord, was married to Albert Robinson Pyott, son of the late Albert E. Pyott, at Our Lady of Mount Carmel church at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The Meyercords live at 577 Hawthorne place. Mrs. John Dorian Curtin of Tulsa, Okla., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Eugene L. Dunne was best man.

CAMP MEETING GOVERNOR'S DAY LACKS GOVERNOR

Emmerson Found to Be at Races.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Thousands of Methodists of the Chicago area celebrated "Governor's day" yesterday at the Des Plaines Methodist camp meeting without a single governor present. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson had been scheduled to arrive at the camp meeting at 2:30 p. m., escorted by a squad of motorcycle police, but he had not arrived at 3:30. About four o'clock it was announced that the "Governor's day" celebration had been given a sudden change of venue from the Methodist camp meeting to the Arlington race track.

According to the Rev. Charles H. Draper, manager of the camp meeting, Gov. Emmerson had arranged with George P. Ellis, president of the laymen's association of the Rock River conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, under whose direction the program had been planned, to take part in the "Governor's day" ceremonies at the camp meeting. Addresses by the governor and Charles W. Hadley, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, had been scheduled. However, yesterday was also "Governor's day" at the Arlington track.

Urges Enforcement Dictator.

In his address, Mr. Hadley declared that present day laxity in law enforcement requires strong arm tactics and that the time is ripe to call an enforcement dictator of the type of Andrew Jackson, who would proclaim by word and deed that the American constitution is still the law of the land. He laid a large part of the blame for the present "unprecedented disregard for law" on the shifting of population from country to city during the last 60 years.

Talks on Rights of Church.

Another speaker was the Rev. Dr. Fred D. Stone, pastor of the Irving Park Methodist Episcopal church. Taking his theme from Mr. Hadley's address, Dr. Stone declared that the press had told the ministers of the churches that they had no right to discuss crime and politics in their pulpits.

"We have a perfect right to teach the citizen in regard to politics and crime," said Dr. Stone. "The press tells us our business is to teach the simple gospel. But are the ideals of the press so upright as to give the last word in civic 'morality?'"

Dr. Stone said the newspapers do not dare to tell all they know about the relationship of Alfred Lingle, slain TRIBUNE reporter, and other reporters to the racketeers. He asserted that when the churches "dedicate themselves to the common task" of teaching their congregations about politics, crime and public morality, a basis of church union between Methodists, Congregationalists and Presbyterians will be found."

New York Woman Dies Suddenly in Paris Hotel

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 19.—Lucille Paine Sims, wife of James W. Sims of Scarvaile and New York, died mysteriously early this morning in the Champs Elysees hotel. The Sims, who were spending their vacation in Europe, dined with friends last evening. They returned to the hotel at midnight Shortly afterward the wife became ill, and died before a doctor could be summoned.

FORECAST FIRST TWO EXTENSIONS OF CAR SERVICE

Garfield Park "L" and South Western Avenue.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Probably the first two track extensions under the ordinance permitting $12,000,000 in transportation improvements, will be a third track on the Garfield Park elevated line and a new surface line in Western avenue. This was predicted yesterday by persons interested in the transit program.

The preliminaries for the two improvements were under way before the indeterminate franchise was approved by the voters on July 1. The elevated lines had obtained about 40 per cent of the right of way for the additional track on the Garfield Park branch.

Formal offers have been made to the owners of the remaining property and it was reported yesterday that many of them have since made private contracts to sell. Elevated officials say that soon it is planned to condemn all needed property which cannot be purchased at a reasonable price. Work on the plans has been going on for some time. For other elevated improvements the planning is not so far advanced.

Petition for Track Extension.

Property owners along South Western avenue petitioned the Illinois commerce commission before the referendum to compel the surface lines to lay and operate tracks in that thoroughfare south of 75th street. The commission continued the case for 30 days to await the outcome of the referendum.

Street cars now operate in Western avenue from Evanston to 75th street. In the widened thoroughfare south of served in the middle of the street for the laying of surface car tracks. It is pointed out that the tracks could be laid to 111th street, where a cross town line is now in operation.

It has been announced several times that the transit companies are confident they will be able to raise the $12,000,000 to spend, but the plan of obtaining it has not been told. That job has been assigned to Halsey, Stuart and company and Harry L. Stuart has been out of town for the last three days, according to information at his office.

Two Problems in Getting Cash.

For the elevated lines, the acquiring of the cash is a matter of finding the bankers willing to loan it. But the surface lines are in a different situation. All are in receivership.

When the surface lines recently obtained $1,250,000 with which to buy buses as a loan from their own equipment fund, the transaction involved some negotiating. All the protective committees for bondholders had to be satisfied and then an appeal made to the receivers and Federal Judge Wilkerson before the money in hand could be used. A like procedure will probably be followed in getting money for extensions and improvements, it was said.

Interest was displayed yesterday in the report of the basis of exchange of first mortgage bonds for new securities in the consolidated transit company. Two bondholders were encountered who insisted that no formal agreement has been made on the exchange although both said that the plan as printed "appears to be acceptable to the first mortgage bondholders generally."

Both also said that an error was made in printing that the first mortgage bondholders have not received their interest since the surface lines franchises expired on Feb. 1, 1927. Interest has been paid on these bonds but not on other bonds.

ARREST 3 MINERS AFTER SHOOTING.

Providence, Ky., July 19.—(AP)—Three striking miners were arrested today in connection with the shooting of Jesse Edmondson, 21, last night. Edmondson had made known his intention of going back to work in the mines.

58 CENT WHEAT MAKES KANSAS POLITICS HUM

Test Will Come at Polls on Aug. 5.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Topeka, Kas., July 19.—[Special.]—The wheat situation has reopened the old battle over farm relief, and equalization fee and export debenture are popping up in the advance skirmishing incident to the Kansas primaries Aug. 5.

Gov. Clyde M. Reed and Senators Arthur Capper and Henry J. Allen are candidates for renomination in the Republican party. The fight of Gov. Reed against the farm board on its gospel of wheat acreage reduction has brought the governorship contest into national prominence.

Following the Paul Revere ride of Alexander Legge, head of the federal farm board, and Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, through the wheat belt calling on growers to reduce their plantings, while the governor argued that they were preaching agricultural heresy, the controversy is pushing other issues off the board.

Big Crop in Prospect.

Kansas has prospects of big crops, but wheat is bringing only 58 to 65 cents, and farmers in general are making only such sales as are necessary for harvest bills. A dry harvest is making storage safe and a feature of thrashing is the unexpected high yields and quality.

The farm board has urged farmers to sit tight, expressing the view that if they refrain from dumping the market will improve 25 cents a bushel. The state agricultural college and other agencies have been pointing out that wheat can be fed profitably to live stock. Some raisers report selling wheat "on the hoof" by feeding it to hogs. Gov. Reed's newspaper, the Parsons Sun, announced today it would take wheat at $1 a bushel on subscriptions to the paper.

Throughout the state there is dispute as to whether Mr. Legge or the governor is right on the acreage reduction idea. Politically, the governor's stand is estimated to have brought him support from the farmers. Some of the agricultural leaders are supporting the Legge views.

Call Meeting for Tuesday.

Farms groups are trying to crystallize sentiment and to get the low down on how the wheat raisers themselves are feeling. Interest centers in a meeting to be held next Tuesday in Kansas City to take some sort of stand on the plea for reduced acreage. The Kansas Farm Bureau, Equity union, Farmers' union, the Grange, the wheat pool and the state board of agriculture are arranging the discussion.

Gov. Reed is opposed in the Republican primaries by Frank Haucke of Council Grove, popularly known as "Chief." He is an honorary Indian chief, and so is Reed, for that matter. Haucke is a former head of the Kansas Legion, and in the last two weeks is reported to have been making such headway that the contest is now in doubt.

Senator Capper has no opponent in the primaries, while Senator Allen has three antagonists: James F. Getty, an ex-state senator; Ralph Snyder of Manhattan, head of the farm bureau, and Congressman W. H. Sproul of Sedan. Politicians express little doubt that Allen will win.

A Complex Situation.

The acreage dispute has brought about some complexities somewhat diverting to the politicians. Neither Senator Capper nor Allen has taken sides on the acreage controversy, but both instead have been urging that the federal farm board buy part of the new wheat crop, a hundred million bushels or so, to stabilize the market.

Gov. Reed takes the position, backed up by statistics, that there is no surplus above the capacity of the world to absorb, so why reduce acreage?

One question they are asking out here is whether Capper and Allen, who are close to the administration, will follow Reed in case their request that the farm board buy a hundred million bushels of the 1930 wheat crop is turned down in the conference they are to hold with Mr. Legge in Washington Monday.

Gov. Reed was secretary to Allen in 1919 when the latter was governor and he served as member of Gov. Allen's court of industrial relations. Two years ago Gov. Reed appointed Allen senator to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Charles Curtis as Vice President. Senator Allen has been a strong Hooverite. He was publicity manager at Chicago Republican headquarters during the presidential campaign, is regarded as an administration spokesman, and is one of President Hoover's fishing companions on the Rapidan.

Science Seeks to Unravel Puzzle of Mixed Babies

Bar Report Hits Farm Relief as "Vicious Treasury Raid"

An attack on the farm relief bill is contained in a report of the committee on American citizenship of the American Bar association. The report, made public yesterday, will be submitted to the bar association at its annual meeting in Chicago from Aug. 20 to 22, inclusive.

The convention will be addressed by leading American lawyers and judges and will be attended by delegations of attorneys from Canada, England, France, Scotland, and the Irish Free State. The English bar, returning a visit of the American bar members in 1924, is expected to send a delegation of 250 distinguished lawyers.

Sees Program as Failure.

The committee citizenship report, signed by Chairman F. Dumont Smith and four committee members, declares that the "farm relief experiment was foredoomed to failure." The avowed purpose of the bill, the report asserts, is "to raise the price of bread to 90 per cent of the people in order that ten per cent may have a larger profit in producing it." The bill is characterized as an "unconstitutional and vicious attempt to debase our great republic into a soviet commonwealth."

"Under this act," the report continues, "congress has appropriated $250,000,000 and the farm board and its subsidiaries, as agents of the government, have engaged in a purely private business of buying and selling wheat on which a loss of more than $20,000,000 has already been incurred, and the present result is a decline of one-third in the price of wheat since these operations were commenced. In our judgment it is a dangerous assault upon the form, the ideals, and the purposes of our government.

Predicts "Treasury Raids."

"If one crew of mendicants can come to the doors of congress and with a threat of votes loot the treasury, other groups will follow the example. These groups will combine to aid each other, trade, and swap votes until each one gets its dole out of the public funds.

"Congress has become a national soup kitchen where every mendicant industry, every greedy, begging group brings its empty bowl to receive its treasury soup directly or indirectly.

"When the other industries begin to get their dole the farmer will have to pay his share of it, pay his share of the dole to the coal man, the oil man, the steel man, and all the rest of them, and they in turn will pay their share of his dole, and so this country . . . will be reduced to the condition of that happy community where all inhabitants make a living doing each others' washing."

Urge Inaugural Date Change.

Among the other committee reports which will be submitted is one recommending a change in the date of inauguration of the President so that be may take office within one or two months after his election.

A large gathering of the visiting lawyers will be held on the evening of Aug. 21, when the convention will meet in the Civic Opera house to hear an address by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States Supreme court. Representatives of the bars of England, France, Scotland, the Irish Free State and Canada will respond.

Silas H. Strawn has been appointed host to the visiting foreign lawyers, and Walter H. Eckert, vice president of the Chicago Bar association, has been delegated to go to London and conduct the foreign delegations to Chicago.

Belgian Envoy to Attend Celebration Here Today

The 100th anniversary of Belgium's independence will be celebrated today by the Belgian societies of Chicago with Prince Albert de Ligne, Belgian ambassador to the United States, as their guest. Prince and Princess de Ligne will arrive this morning at the Union station from Washington. They will be welcomed by Dr. Cyrille Vermeren, Belgian consul general, and representatives of 10,000 Chicagoans of Belgian descent. At 11:30 they will attend high mass at St. John Bercham's church, 2517 Logan boulevard, and will review a parade of 1,500 members of Belgian societies. A banquet will be held at 7:30 p. m. in the Stevens hotel.

and the sum total would be the same for each infant.

Pigmentation of the eye and of the skin will be studied thoroughly by experts. The weights will be considered, but cannot be regarded as legal proof of identity, Dr. Kegel said.

One mystery is that of the adhesive tape labels. The custom of the hospital is to "tag" the babies within four minutes after their arrival. The Bamberger and Watkins babies arrived in the late afternoon. The day shift of nurses uses black ink; the night shift, red ink. Yet both labels are in red ink. Nurse Schultetus said she labeled them both, and within the prescribed four minutes, but that she used red ink.

Mothers Are Satisfied.

Dr. A. E. Paul, hospital superintendent, said he was "confident the right parents had the right babies and that the hospital was not responsible." And the mothers agree with Dr. Paul.

"I am satisfied that this is my baby," Mrs. Bamberger remarked with some defiance, hugging her child.

"And I am convinced this is mine," Mrs. Watkins echoed.

"That's a good boy," Mr. Watkins said. "I won't give him up until Mr. Bamberger proves that the one he has is mine. And the next time we have a baby, Mrs. Watkins, I'm going to be right on hand and put a chain and lock on its ankle so there'll be no doubt about its being ours."

Word of the tangle is being kept from mothers now at the hospital.

TRIES TO PUSH AUTO CLEAR OF TRAIN; KILLED

Joseph Frane, who lived at 56th avenue and 23d place, Cicero, was killed last night when struck by a C. B. & Q. passenger train at the Hollywood station crossing in Brookfield while trying to push his stalled automobile off the track.

Hilmuth Rolke, 5420 22d place, Cicero, and Mrs. William Kaufman, 1637 South Austin boulevard, who had been riding with Frane, leaped clear of the car just before the crash and were not injured. The wreckage was strewn along the right of way for more than a hundred yards.

Eleven year old Nero di Filippe, 1729 North Lorel avenue, died yesterday at the Keystone hospital from injuries received Friday night when struck by an auto at Bloomingdale road and Lorel avenue. Louis Mattson, 22 years old, 2517 North Hamlin avenue, the driver, was held by Cragin police.

These deaths and two others yesterday raised Cook county's motor toll for the year to 528.

Mrs. Amale Dorl, 60 years old, 7943 South Paulina street. Died yesterday at the Auburn Park hospital from injuries received on Wednesday when a machine driven by Val Schenmyer, 5340 South May street, struck her while crossing 79th street near Ashland avenue.

Frank Rizner, 18 years old, 3730 South Lincoln street. Died in St. Anthony's hospital of injuries received Friday when struck by an automobile driven by Harold Clothier, 3615 North Troy street, as he alighted from a street car at 16th street and Western avenue.

Slayer Ends His Life as He Awaits Death on Gallows

San Quentin, Cal., July 19.—(AP)—William ["Red"] O'Brien, Oakland bank robber and slayer sentenced to hang next Friday, cheated the gallows today by committing suicide in his cell in condemned row.

Guards found O'Brien's body at breakfast. Warden James Holdhan believed poison had been smuggled into the cell.

TURK, 156, TALKS OF WASHINGTON AND NAPOLEON

Hugs Girl Reporter at First Interview.

New York, July 19.—[U. P.]—Zaro Agha, whom 156 years of life [his count] have looked upon kindly, rose from his bed in the Hotel Commodore amid the roar of a great city in a strange land today, and turned his face toward Mecca.

And when he had declared, according to his faith, that there is no god but Allah, he breakfasted upon a glass of milk and a soft boiled egg and then desired to look upon the beautiful women of this land, because, as he says, the greatest joy in this world is woman.

This ancient of Turkey is toothless and bald of head, but still strong and sturdy. In his youth, he said, he could throw an ox. He carried a musket through fourteen wars. He has outlived eleven wives, and left the twelfth at home in Istanboul, which infidels call Constantinople.

George Washington? Sure.

With the assistance of his manager and interpreter, Zaro Agha met and overcame his interviewers. He recalled how the news of George Washington's election had stirred him and his townspeople. He remembered how Napoleon was defeated at Waterloo, placing the time as coincident with his second marriage. He married again at the time of the congress of Vienna. He has worn out three sets of false teeth and is sadly in need of a fourth.

Zaro Agha denied he was here to display himself as an example of the fruits of abstinence from liquors. True, he has never tasted liquor. The law of Mahomet forbids it. When his picture had been taken by photographers who showed him little respect and called him "Pop," the ancient Turk gave of his wisdom of 156 years.

Hugs Girl Reporter.

Paris is his favorite city, he said and the Paris women—words failed him.

Clasping a pretty young girl reporter affectionately about the waist, Zaro Agha said: "I like most in life the ladies. But my wife, she doesn't understand me. All my life I have been looking for a woman to understand me."

KILLED BY BULLET WOUND.

Harry Hoffman, 53 years old, grocery proprietor, 3940 South Dearborn street, who last week shot Mrs. Julienne McDaniels, a Negress, and then turned the gun on himself, died yesterday at the County hospital.

SCENIC PICTURES IN TRIBUNE ROTOGRAVURE INSPIRE NEW GUIDE

Widespread interest is reported by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce in scenic and historical pictures of Illinois which have appeared recently in the rotogravure section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

The photographs, for the most part collected by the publicity department of the chamber of commerce, represent a comprehensive effort to assemble pictorial data covering the state. Other pictures from the collection will illustrate a tourists' guide to Illinois written by the state chamber and being assembled for publication by H. L. Williamson, chairman of the publicity committee.

The guide will be distributed to more than a quarter of a million motorists during the next few months.

Turk Troops Invade Persia to Wipe Out Kurd Raiders

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 19.—(AP)—Turkish forces have penetrated Persian territory in the region of Maku, stronghold of the Kurdish raiders, and wiped out all Kurds in the area. Dispatches from Trebizond state that after exterminating the Kurds the Turks withdrew toward their own border. The dispatch adds that the Persian forces offered no opposition to the Turks.

BOY DROWNED IN GRAVEL PIT.

Plymouth, N. D., July 19.—[Special.]—Clarence Jackson, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson of Bourbon, Ind., was drowned last night when he leaped into a gravel pit at Bourbon on a dare of his companions. Jackson, who was unable to swim, was pulled from the water an hour later by one of his companions. The parents and four brothers and sisters survive.

HOOVER IS ASKED TO BAN WAGE CUT AT VET HOSPITAL

Union Men Are Working Under Scale.

President Hoover's intercession was asked yesterday to prevent the United States War Veterans' bureau from employing skilled union building trades mechanics and laborers to build additions to the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital at wage scales below those specified in union agreements.

The appeal was made by E. M. Craig, executive secretary of the Building Construction Employers' Association of Chicago, who also is head of the American Construction council. Mr. Craig said there are two groups of building mechanics engaged in the alteration and construction of additions at the Maywood veterans' hospital.

45 Cents Under Scale, He Says.

One group was employed by J. W. O'Leary, who is supervising the work for the veterans' bureau, and these skilled workers were hired by federal agents at the rate of $1.25 an hour, while the union agreement calls for $1.70 an hour, Mr. Craig said. Common laborers on this work receive 50 cents an hour, while the union rate is 97½ cents an hour, he asserted.

"My attention was called to the hospital condition by representatives of Chicago building trades," Mr. Craig said.

"It is just another case of government in business, a practice American builders have opposed for years. On sections F and G of the same hospital J. McHugh & Son has the contract, employing union men at the specified wage scales embodied in agreement between the building trades and builders."

Sees Danger to Industry."

Mr. Craig told President Hoover the action of the United States veterans' bureau in reducing wages has a tendency to upset the economic structure in the local construction industry. He pointed out that when he attended the President's Washington conference on unemployment as head of the American Construction council the industrial leaders agreed that during the business depression there should be no reduction or increase in wages.

"Today the American construction industry is striving to stimulate activities and reduce unemployment for the building workers of the nation," Mr. Craig said. "Some of the shrewdest prognosticators of American business conditions now say the turn in the road has been reached and that early fall will see a fairly active revival of construction.

Cites Building Campaign.

"There has been an active response to the appeal made by the American Construction council to eradicate tenement and slum districts in large American cities. Participating in these campaigns are civic bodies as well as organizations of builders and architects and engineers. It is a recognized fact that American construction is the barometer of national prosperity and a general stimulus in building now will soon be reflected in other lines of industry."

It was said the mechanics engaged at the Hines hospital are union men who accepted the reduced wage rate of $1,25 an hour because protracted unemployment had made their action necessary.

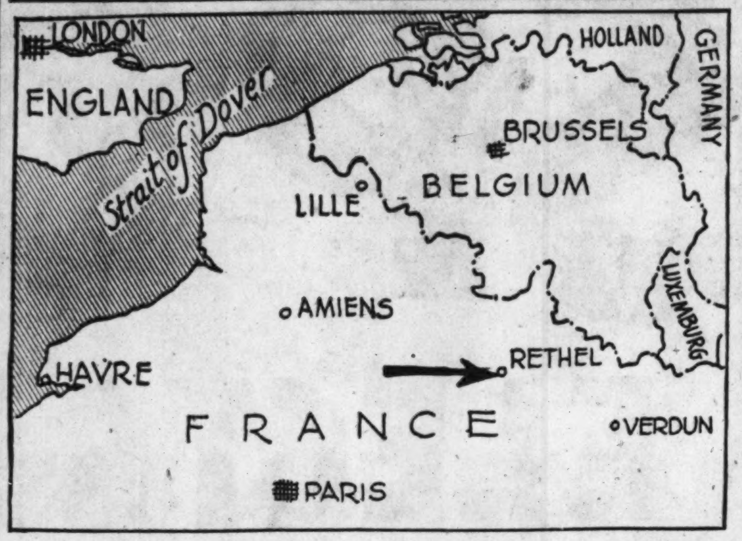
If you have received a letter from an interesting or little known place send the envelope to The Tribune, stating name of place where it was mailed and some information about the writer of the letter. If you have a picture of the original sender or the place inclose it also.

FROM RETHEL, FRANCE

(Picture in rotogravure section.)



This interesting letter comes from the ancient village of Rethel, situated on the Aisne river in the department of Ardennes. According to Mr. La Rue, the writer was Robert Fay, a French school boy. Mr. La Rue adds that with the exception of its cathedral, Rethel was practically destroyed during the war, and has since been rebuilt. According to the gazetteers, Rethel is an ancient place, once noted for its many quaint homes. It is also famous for its fine merino cloth.

Sergt. Woodfill, A. E. F. Hero, in Hines Hospital

Sergt. Samuel Woodfill, 47 years old, of Fort Thomas, Ky., who was characterized by Gen. John J. Pershing as the "outstanding soldier of the A. E. F.," is under observation at the Hines Memorial hospital for a stomach disorder. He entered the institution on July 12. Woodfill has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the medal of the French Legion of Honor, the croix de guerre, and many other decorations.

Hoover Calls on States for Sanitation in Floods

Washington, D. C., July 19.—(AP)—President Hoover has requested Surgeon General Cummings of the public health service to call a conference of the boards of health of Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Illinois to discuss carrying on sanitary work in the flood areas. Heretofore the government has coöperated with the state on a fifty-fifty basis, but the appropriation failed at the last congress.

9 OF 22 ACCEPT CHANCE TO QUIT ALIMONY CLUB

13 Prefer Jail Quarters to Paying Up.

Nine of the 22 members of the Alimony club, the exclusive circle of men imprisoned at the county jail for defiance of court orders to pay alimony to their ex-wives, were freed yesterday by Superior Judge Sabath. Thirteen members held out for their principles and were returned to their clubrooms in a patrol wagon.

The entire group were brought to the courtroom at the order of the judge just before he starts on his vacation, in keeping with a semi-annual custom. A similar ceremony is held each Christmas eve. The prisoners, some accompanied by their former wives, were lined up as the judge took the bench, radiating cheer.

Nine of them assumed a penitent expression. They promised to find employment and to pay up and were sent on their way to earn the money. The others refused to obey the court orders or indicated they preferred to remain as guests of the county until their six months' terms were over.

Those freed were John Van Gallen, John W. Bard, Otto Bock, John Manka, George Reckrodt, Frank Engert, Stanley Rentfleisch, James Tesinsky, and John Ripalis. Van Gallen and Bock had been in jail only three days.

One of the discordant notes came from Theodore Cook, who was sent to jail last June 17 because he was $3,800 behind in his alimony payments, ordered for the support of his former wife, Edith, and their baby. He declared he would rather stay in jail than find a job. The judge granted his wish.

All of the judges, with the exception of Charles A. Williams and Robert E. Gentzel of the Superior court and Joseph H. Fitch of the Circuit court, left the bench yesterday for the remainder of the summer. Judge Williams will continue until the end of this week, while Judge Gentzel will hold emergency court until Aug. 16, when Judge Fitch will relieve him for a four weeks' period.

Boy, 14, Admits Slaying Mother Who Scolded Him

Ida Grove, Ia., July 19.—[Special.]—Lester Mohr, 14, confessed to the sheriff today that he killed his mother, Mrs. Gus Mohr, at their farm home near Holstein, Thursday. She had scolded him for drinking. He shot her with a shotgun, a rifle, and then clubbed her with a gun stock.

DELBONO FREED ON CHARGE OF KILLING THREE

Frank Delbono, alias Dale, was liberated yesterday on a charge of killing three men in a saloon at 2901 South Wells street on Easter Sunday. The state's attorney's office entered an order striking off the murder charge against Delbono, with leave to reinstate. The order automatically gives him his liberty without bond, although the state reserves the right at some future time to reinstate the case if additional evidence is found.

Delbono was indicted solely on ballistic testimony. The bullets which killed the men were fired from a revolver found in Delbono's possession, according to experts.

Delbono was charged with the murder of Walter L. Wakefield, one of the three men found murdered in the saloon. The others were Frank Dei Re and Joseph Special.

'STARVED' VIRGIN ISLES CALL DRY LAW A 'CURSE'

Hope for Day When Rum Trade Is Restored.

BY LEON A. MARSAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. THOMAS, V. I., July 19.—The local press sees in the nomination of Dwight W. Morrow, advocate of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, who was swept to victory in the New Jersey Republican senatorial primary elections, a ray of hope for the Virgin islands, who are being styled here "the three little starving brats."

The contention of the press is that the islands have been reduced practically to a state of miserable want by the enforcement of the dry law here. These islands that once boasted of their riches and splendor are now stripped bare and left miserably to themselves to await the turn of the dice, it is claimed.

The American government is declared to have erred when it included the Virgin islands under this ban. It virtually robbed them of their sole support and on which they had depended for more than a century.

Depended on Rum.

Delving into the colorful history of these three islands it is shown that the manufacture of rum, particularly in the island of St. Croix, contributed seven-tenths to the support of the islands, and unquestionably placed them independently above the paths of poverty, to which they have now been hauled.

While it is known that the United States has expended over $3,500,000 since the purchase of these islands from Denmark in 1917, and more than two-thirds of that contributed by the Danish government following their occupancy of the then Danish West Indies in 1670, yet the people contend that they are now experiencing greater hardships and difficulties than when under the former régime.

The Emancipator, one of the local papers, in presenting the situation as it now stands in the Virgin islands, contends:

"We are so small that almost every one knows every one else's opinion here. Stop five men or women in five different parts of our little city and ask their opinions about prohibition. They are American citizens. They should be, anyway, if our immigration laws mean anything.

"Prohibition Is a Curse."

"As American citizens they should also have some say in the formulation of their own laws. Ask their opinions. They are the ones concerned. Are they not? If not, then our form of democratic government is only a farce.

"They will tell you that prohibition is a curse to the Virgin islands. It is strange, too, how acquainted they are with the word 'prohibition,' and with what bitterness they will mention it. To them it seems like a thing clamped on, a fetter. Something that they could not even protest about. They did not know how, and there is no way of throwing it off."

Stunt Flyer Killed at Dedication of Airport

Creston, Ia., July 19.—(AP)—Joseph Londergran, 30, of St. Joseph, Mo., was killed today when his airplane crashed during the dedication of Creston's airport. The accident occurred when he was unable to bring his machine out of a spin. Londergran was rushed from the field but died on the way to a hospital. His exhibition was part of an aerial circus.

ITALIANS PROTEST VISIT OF YANKEE M. E. PILGRIMAGE

ROME, July 19.—(AP)—La Tribuna today protests editorially against the visit to Italy of an Italian-American Methodist pilgrimage reported to have sailed from New York today on board the steamship Conte Grande.

The newspaper headlines the protest "an undesirable American pilgrimage." The article says "this does not seem a very opportune time to have this Protestant Italo-American pilgrimage with us, in the eighth year of the Fascist régime, which composed differences between the church and state.

"Protestants in alliance with Masonry gladly availed themselves of that difference until the day when Fascism, restoring the fortunes of Italy, restored its full value to the Catholic faith, which is so large a part of the history of civilization of Italy, and dismissed all adulterations, which, in darkness and in light, were poisoning the life of our country."

Referring to a statement that the pilgrimage intended visiting spots in Italy "memorable to Protestantism," Tribuna ironically adds: "This news teaches us something we did not know—that there are in Italy places memorable to Italian Protestantism. In truth, we did not know until now that there was Italian Protestantism, and much less that it had memorable spots on our soil."

Wife Divorces Synnerdahl, Former Loyola Professor

Mrs. Ethel Kesner Synnerdahl yesterday won a divorce from Joseph M. Synnerdahl, former professor of astronomy at Loyola university, before Superior Judge Sabath. The case has been before the judge for six months. The decree directs Synnerdahl to return the property which his wife alleges he took from their home, on penalty of a contempt of court citation, and a judgment of $3,324. Mrs. Synnerdahl charged cruelty.

HEIR TO SPANISH THRONE, ILL SINCE BIRTH, IMPROVES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 19.—The prince of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, now visiting in Paris, is showing considerable improvement in his health. He has been delicate since childhood.

The prince, like the former czarevitch of Russia, suffers from hemolithic trouble, which is a common malady in the Hapsburg royal house. The disease involves a weakness of the skin and arterial walls, so that hemorrhages are likely. Once the bleeding starts, it is extremely difficult to stop. The blood refuses to coagulate. The sufferer might bleed to death at the slightest scratch which breaks the skin.

The prince is also recovering from an impediment in his speech, and stammers less than formerly. He is now able to make speeches on formal occasions.

ORDERS INQUIRY ON DEATH.

The coroner's office yesterday ordered an investigation into the death of Alger Johnson, 60 years old, who was found dead in his home, 5807 South Rockwell street, supposedly from the effects of rat poison.

BEAUTY that is an inspiration

A flair for good taste and an eye for the conservatively modern, make the New Sparton cabinets things of new beauty. Uncannily, Sparton designers have created radio casings which, for the first time, fit any room in which they find themselves as though they were comfortably at home.

TONE that has been tradition

From the standpoint of sheer musical merit, even previous Spartons are far surpassed. Radio's Richest Voice remains so beyond doubt and the Face-to-Face Realism that has thrilled millions of owners is more brilliantly evident then ever before. Sparton engineers in this achievement offer you a new conception of radio tone.

DISTANCE beyond your dreams

The New Sparton, without sacrifice of it's golden quality of tone, has now been made into one of the most far-reaching of radio receivers. Amazingly sensitive, it penetrates to extreme distances and it's great selectivity permits you to use power without restraint or interference from close-in stations.

AN ECONOMIST'S OPTIMISM.

Mr. J. M. Keynes, whose book, "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," caused a sensation after the Paris treaty, has just made an interesting comment upon the state of British affairs today. There is so much pessimism in England that the optimism of his views is rather refreshing and doubtless will be very welcome, especially at home.

Mr. Keynes told his hearers that "all the waste and so on that you hear about in this country amounts to about a shilling in the pound. The other nineteen shillings are going on much as usual." And he added, "The trouble is about the shilling we ought to be earning, and it does not come from our failure or decay, but of a sort of malaise of wealth." England is far and away the richest country in Europe, he said, and by no means at the end of progress. It is supporting a standard of living 45 per cent higher than that of France. It is four times as rich as it was a hundred years ago, and Mr. Keynes predicts confidently that a hundred years later it will be eight times as rich as it is today.

What is overlooked, he thinks, is that for a quarter century Great Britain has been carrying on successfully one of the greatest social experiments in history—namely: the equalization of wealth and the abolition of the worst kinds of poverty. The well-to-do classes are relatively poorer than they were, but the common man is much better off. This great change, which is not realized because we are in the thick of it, has been going on under all parties and in spite of the great war. He discussed the present situation, which is a part of a world-wide depression, and thought that unemployment would probably increase. But though recovery would be delayed and public opinion alarmed and still more depressed, the trouble is temporary, and progress would eventually be renewed.

This expression might be pondered by American pessimists, who, many of them reversing their mood of last year, now foresee gloomily a long decline of American prosperity, if not its final decay. Mr. Keynes' analysis of English conditions applies rather closely to American. He said that England had been saving money rather faster than finding ways of using it; economizing labor faster than finding outlets for it; and perhaps raising the standard of living a shade too fast. This seems to us in a large measure and in some respects with greater force to apply to our own American experience. But, in spite of the pains incident to such a tremendous readjustment, we think with Mr. Keynes and with more reason for optimism that our troubles are temporary, since they are not caused by fundamental weaknesses, but, on the contrary, by an excess of vitality and resource. They are the pangs of readjustment; growing pains, not disease.

Of course, there are deep shadows in any complete picture of British conditions. The vast wealth of that country was chiefly amassed during a period in which competition with British industry, trade, and finance was less formidable than it is now and will continue to be. Her reserves of capital have been depleted and her burden of debt increased. The profound conservatism of English character resists changes in method and policy which changing conditions make imperative. Her problems are difficult of solution. Nevertheless we think there is much that supports Mr. Keynes' optimism and believe that the best aspect of the vast process is not merely the increase in the total production of wealth, through science and industry, but also in its increasingly better distribution. There has never been in modern ages nor outside of primitive society so great an equalization of the benefits of real wealth as we have seen in the last half century. The great discoveries of science and the improvement in living they have made possible are now generally available and the average man has more comfort and even luxury as well as more security than the kings and magnates of only a few centuries ago.

THE CLIMATE BOYS SCORE AGAIN.

The interstate commerce commission has authorized the railroads operating between Pacific coast ports to slash their interport rates to meet the competition of the shipping lines. Thus the railroads are permitted to charge less for a longer than for a shorter haul.

There can be no justified complaint over this seeming discrimination. As matters stand, the railroads have lost a great share of their interport business because of the steamship competition. The only way the railroads can recover this business is to place their services on something like a competitive basis.

If the commissioners can recognize the fact of competition along the Pacific coast, it is difficult to understand why they cannot recognize it also with respect to Chicago and the central part of the country. The situation is parallel, though relief to the central states is of vastly more importance to both railroads and shippers. When the Panama canal was built this section of the country was cut off from the Pacific slope by cheaper rates by water from Atlantic ports. If another mountain range had been thrown up in Iowa the result could not have been more costly to our railroads, our farmers, and our manufacturers.

The commerce act specifically authorizes the commission to approve rates which take water competition into account. The commission has refused to consider such rates from Chicago to the west coast, although it has not hesitated to give relief to the west coast cities. There is no difference in principle between the two cases. The difference, we suspect, lies in political influence. The coast gets what it goes after.

VOICE OF THE OPPRESSED.

Sixty-eight members of the British parliament, of the Labor and Liberal parties, have petitioned the prime minister to bring the woes of the nationalist minorities in Europe to the attention of the league of nations. The petition points out that the league is the only existing machinery for the redress of the grievances of these minorities who, it is estimated, number about thirty-five million souls. Last year 42 petitions for redress were presented to the league, of which two were treated by the league, but even those were left unfinished and undecided.

In America we do not hear these cries of distress, or very faintly. Geneva, we are told, is full of Americans who are ardent for world peace and freedom. There are more of them by far than any other nationals and they leave with the enthusiasm they took with them unimpaired. They have been shown around by the secretariat and are much impressed with what the league is doing, but not with what the league is not doing. And what the league is not doing and will continue not doing is a plenty. The fate of minorities is in point. There are as many oppressed minorities since the peace of Paris and the establishment of the league as before, although the league was offered us and, by its champions of the American intelligentsia, is still offered as the patent device for international law and justice. In the tall talk of our leaguists we hear nothing of them, while the league chucks their petitions into cubby holes where the breath of no inconvenient enthusiasm will blow off the dust they are quietly accumulating.

There is the case, for example, of the Ukrainian minority in Poland. They are living under an iron dictatorship, which at times uses terroristic methods. There are arrests on suspicion, long terms of imprisonment without trial, beatings and maltreatment in prison or upon arrest. The Ukrainians have appealed repeatedly to the league without result. Other minorities, as the 42 petitions reveal, are suffering in various degrees.

The situation has not changed in its fundamentals, only the oppressed in some cases have become the oppressors, as has happened before in human history. We are not denying that there are plausible reasons, in Poland especially, for the imposition of a strong control. Poland has had enough of the miseries of dismemberment and her restoration to nationality has left in her lap several recalcitrant minorities passionately devoted to their own racial personality, Germans, Jews, White Russians, and Ukrainians. If Poland is not to fall apart these minorities must be conciliated or dominated, and the prospect is not very bright.

Therefore the petitions of oppressed minorities are like so many hot bricks for the league, which wants to maintain the status quo and was established for that purpose and not for the purposes our ingenuous American leaguists imagine.

What happens, if anything, to the appeal of the sixty-eight M. P.s will be worth watching. They want a permanent commission on minorities in the league and an early investigation of the whole subject. They may very well get both, but it is very improbable that they will bring substantial relief wherever a minority's rights or interests are incompatible with the stability or security of a state which is a part of the balance of power established in Paris in 1919.

THE SPANISH SCENE.

Jay Allen of the Tribune Foreign News Service is giving SUNDAY TRIBUNE readers vivid pictures of Spain together with some acute comment. Spain, in spite of our important historic contacts on this side of the Atlantic with her civilization, has been visited less by our enthusiastic tourists than other countries of western Europe. But their numbers, we believe, are increasing, and Mr. Allen's colorful and significant impressions will encourage more. There are, indeed, many reasons why Americans should be interested in Spanish life and character, in Spanish arts and manners, in the setting from which so much that is romantic and dramatic not only in the history of Europe but in that of the western hemisphere has its inspiration. Columbus and the conquistadores, the Moors and their splendid hour, the Spaniard in America from California to the Argentine, soldier and explorer, conqueror and missionary, the sword, the brand, the crucifix, the mantilla, and the guitar, these enter into the rich tapestry of our past and remain still in changing forms in the picture of our western world. The American sense of kinship is enriched by this inheritance. In this western hemisphere we are engaged in a common destiny, however various our local sources and character may be, and the American of the north should know his neighbors of the Spanish tradition as an observant tour in the mother country will help him to do.

Editorial of the Day

WHY NOT A POLL?

[Boston Transcript.]

The American Bar association is said to be threatened with something of a "revolt" because its executive committee, after much debate, has decided to request the opinion of its members as to the advisability of a referendum on the prohibition law. Incidentally, the committee, "to avoid delay," has included in its circular a resolution to the effect that the association favors the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, thus actually invoking a referendum. In all fairness, we do not see the objection to this procedure. Without reference to what the referendum may disclose in way of member sentiment, we believe that the country would welcome the massed conclusions of these trained minds. A lawyer's business is with law, and the question of largest import is whether these lawyers, or a majority of them, believe that the eighteenth amendment is a good law. The American Bar association has some 30,000 members, most of them standing well in their profession, otherwise they would not be admitted to membership, we assume. Whatever their majority opinion is, it would have weight with us and, we believe, with the country.

AMERICAN HEROES

ROGER WILLIAMS

A Brief Review of His Contribution to Our Country.

(The articles of which the following is the ninth are intended as five minute sketches of early Americans of particular achievement and distinction, each flashed briefly against the background of the times and conditions in which the subject made his contribution to the nation. Their names may be well or may be little known now to the generation which has inherited the benefits of wise, laborious, and, in many instances, heroic work.)

(Picture in Rotogravure Section.)

ROGER WILLIAMS had word in January, 1635, at his home in Salem that he was to be seized and put on a ship for England.

The previous October he had been tried and convicted before the general court of Massachusetts and ordered out of the jurisdiction of the colony, "enlarged" in the language of his prime enemy, John Cotton. He had been allowed a stay of sentence with permission to remain at Salem until spring, but later it was reported of him that he was not refraining from teaching in his home and that he had beguiled some score of persons with his doctrines, intending to plant a colony with them in the Narragansett bay region.

Thereupon the authorities undertook to deal with him summarily and sent a sloop under the command of Capt. Underhill with orders to seize him for deportation. Williams had been warned by friends and had flown, leaving his wife and children behind. He went out in the New England winter to found the colony of Providence Plantations for a state without a church and churches without a state.

He had been accused on four points which, as declared, seem highly technical. He held that the magistrate ought not to punish the breach of the first table unless there was a disturbance of the civil peace; that he ought not to tender an oath to an unregenerated man; that a man ought not to pray with an unregenerated person; that a man ought not to give thanks after sacrament, meat, etc. The essence of the charge is in the first score. The Ten Commandments were divided into two tables by the Puritans, four in one table and six in the other. The magistery was civil. The first table was religious. It had to do with the relation of man to God. When a civil magistrate administered the first table, except because of an involved disturbance of the public peace, he was a state servant in ecclesiastical duties. Williams' philosophy of government and doctrine of conscience opposed this. He declared the principle of the American state a hundred and more years before Thomas Jefferson was born. A civil authority could not have a religious source. He did so in the presence of theologians who thought otherwise and who were able to punish him at will. He had, then, to make his escape into a winter wilderness to carry out his purpose and serve his principles.

The formal and technical charges against Williams do not include all causes of annoyance he gave the authorities. He was a radical. It is probably easier now to admire his moralities and indorse his doctrines than it was in his time to endure them. He denied that titles to land could be obtained validly by crown grant, with a side denial that the Christian prince, King James I. of England and Scotland, had anything to do with the English discovery of America and another denial that Europe in general had the aspects of the Christian world. All three touches were either altruistically or realistically true and consequently disturbing to a moral order. With the first of his three propositions he touched the money nerve of the Puritans, as reformers frequently do, and then he made sport of some of the decorations of their economic and ecclesiastical order. Williams held that the Indians owned the land and that neither James I. nor Charles I. had title to it.

The Puritans did not like a challenge of their titles any more than any other holders of land would, and as a highly moral people they disliked a valid moral objection to their property rights. Williams not only proposed a separation of church and state, but he was challenging the basis of property rights. A Puritan saint who resented Williams' objection to church government might also feel that the man was uncomfortable or impossible in a moneyed society. There has always been this secular touch.

Then it also must be remembered that when Europe lost the secular empire of Rome it lost all cohesive form, and when it staggered and lurched back from barbarism it was under the church. The apostolic church was the only common denominator. It was the only influence which could be used to reduce Europe to order. Consequently church and state were one. Also, therefore, heresy was treason. It was not merely religious nonconformity. It was sedition.

A theory so valid when it was actually good in fact became valuable to the feudal and church aristocracy when it was no longer the absolute requirement of ordered life. Individualistic tribes destroyed the charm and power of the secular Roman empire. The apostolic church brought the tribes together again, and when the modern nations had begun to arise out of feudalism and sacerdotalism the individualistic religious conscience made its rough way back to the tolerance of secular Rome when the affairs of Cæsar were of Cæsar.

Williams had a vision far into the future. In fact, this future has not yet been fully arrived at. He was singularly fortunate in his friends in England. He had been in youth, in a fashion, the ward of Sir Edward Coke. He was started in training for the law, but preferred theology. On his return to England he had the support and friendship of Henry Vane, Milton, Cromwell, and the chiefs of the independent movement against the prelacy of the established Anglican church and against its rival, the Presbyterian church of England.

He was able to get a charter from friendly authority in 1644 and a renewal in 1652. He was thus protected in the Providence Plantations against the church government of Massachusetts bay. [Plymouth, as a Separatist and not a Puritan community, had been friendly in the days of his greatest danger.] Williams' property ideas had offended the solid men of early Boston, but his regard for Indian equities made him a valuable protector of English life in New England. His fair dealings with Indian sachems and their people gave him an influence with them which he used to prevent Indian combinations against the settlers.

Quakers driven out of Massachusetts after torture found refuge at Providence. Radicals and malcontents took advantage of its liberalities. It became involved in unavoidable Indian wars, but it stood as the highest spot reached by men in their search for liberty of conscience and freedom under government and in religion.

[The New England ecclesiastical commonwealth under the Puritans was a clergy governed electorate. The Puritans in England were not Separatists. They were Church of England reformers, purifiers. No radical change in the doctrine of church and state was expectable under them. Their reformations were not of such character. If the Presbyterian church could have supplanted the Anglican in England it would have been merely a prayer book reform. The clerical government would have been even more than ever the state. Luckily Cromwell was not a Presbyterian but an Independent, and Williams was a friend of Cromwell. In Puritan New England a franchise holder and voter was a member of the church, and no one could become a church member against the decision of the teacher or pastor. The church was the state. Williams was a force of conscience and of public policy far beyond his time and the philosophy of it.]

Rhode Island was the state founded by Roger Williams, who outthought Milton, whose state outlived Cromwell's, and whose principles need some reaffirmation even now.

CARBON MONOXIDE POISON.

MRS. S. writes of an experience through which her son went in which he was seriously poisoned by carbon monoxide gas. He was driving a loaded truck. He felt himself going and, recognizing the cause, he stopped the truck, got out and sat on a stump until he had recovered. One week later he was again poisoned with gas. He managed to get out of the truck and into his home before he became unconscious.

REPLY: The dangers are far greater than you realize. After the experience in your family you are ready to believe the newspaper accounts of people who have been overcome while driving in closed cars and of others who have succumbed while working in garages. You may not be aware that others are overcome by leakage from furnaces, heaters, and stoves. Some die in bathtubs and are thought to have drowned. Others succumb on the floor of bathrooms. Some get their dose of poisonous gas in bathrooms and nurseries, and some in kitchens and laundries.

But while the deaths from acute intoxication are dramatic, the harm due to chronic poisoning is even greater. Many workers in garages develop headache before the end of the day's work. Some people awaken with the same symptom caused by exposure during the night. Others are pale, have lack of appetite and other symptoms caused by chronic carbon monoxide poisoning.

Traffic officers directing automobiles in closed spaces and in pocketed air are great sufferers from chronic carbon monoxide poisoning.

A recent report was to the effect that Prof. Fraser of Johns Hopkins had perfected a method of making carbon monoxide fumes harmless. By the addition of something, gases in process of burning were made to form fairly harmless carbon dioxide instead of deadly monoxide, with gain in power produced by the machine as a something extra. If this is found to be practical and comes into general use we may hear no more of carbon monoxide poisoning.

The first essential is to get the subject into the fresh air. It is sometimes necessary to give him oxygen. In this case some carbonic acid is added to the gas in order to keep the unconscious patient breathing naturally. It, in some measure, takes the place of artificial respiration.

RINGWORM OF THE FEET.

V. P. writes: Some time ago you published an article on ringworm of the feet and at that time you gave a prescription. The druggist I went to could not find the formula, but gave me something else, which I have used faithfully. Now that the warm weather is here, I find that the little, white, itchy blisters that form in circles are just as bad as ever. I contracted this trouble about three years ago by going barefoot on one of the local beaches. Will you be good enough to publish this formula for ringworm of the feet, or athlete's foot, as some call it?

REPLY:

The recipe for Castellani's carbol fuchsin paint is: 100 parts carbol fuchsin solution (such as is used for staining tubercle bacilli):

1 part boric acid.
5 parts acetone.
10 parts resorcinol.

Whitfield's paste is old and druggists know the formula.

Danish itch ointment is on the market under various trade names.

A good ointment, somewhat akin to Whitfield's paste in its principle of action is:

12 per cent acid benzoic, 6 per cent acid salicylic, 1¼ per cent thymol.

This also can be bought under a trade name. Care should be taken in its use.

EXCEPTION TO THE RULE.

Mrs. F. Z. writes: You told a mother that her child was not likely to have a second attack of whooping cough. How do you get that way? My little girl had whooping cough when she was five weeks old. She had it again when she was fifteen months old.

REPLY:

Assuming that you are right and your child had whooping cough twice in fourteen months, that shows no more than that a child can have a second attack. The rule is that they do not, and we must follow the rules, not the exceptions.

EVEN SECOND ATTACK RARE.

Mrs. L. H. writes: I had whooping cough when I was one year old. When I was 22 I had it a second time. Am I likely to have it again?

REPLY.

A second attack is rare. A third would make of you a museum curiosity.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 20, 1865.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The trial of Miss Mary Harris, formerly of Chicago, for the murder of Burroughs, a brother of Dr. Burroughs of Chicago university, ended with a verdict of not guilty. The closing speech in defense of Miss Harris was made by D. W. Voorhees. District Attorney Harrington closed for the prosecution and a violent clash between him and Judge Wylie occurred when he reflected upon the character of the millinery house conducted by Miss Mary Devlin in Chicago. The judge said the attack was not justified by the evidence, but Harrington persisted in it.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gen. Ewell, having taken the oath of allegiance and given bonds that he will respect it, has been permitted by President Johnson to return to his home in Virginia on parole, to report once a week to the secretary of war.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The National Intelligencer contains the report that Charles O'Connor of New York has been retained as senior counsel for Jeff Davis. The time and the mode of his trial are as yet unknown.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Army of the Shenandoah is virtually discontinued. The little village of Charleston, where Gov. Wise hanged John Brown, is visited by many northerners who have carried off everything movable from the field where the hanging took place. Harper's Ferry is rapidly rising from its ruins.

CHICAGO.—John McAfee and Miss Caroline Maidhof were married on June 29 at the home of the parents of Mr. McAfee by the Rev. Dr. Sheiling.

CHICAGO.—Robert E. Craig, president of the National Typographical union, is in the city and stopping at the Revere house.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 20, 1900.

CHICAGO.—James Nicol, first vice president of the Board of Trade, was suspended from the privileges of the floor for one year after trial on charges of "making false and fictitious trades."

LONDON.—The Daily Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent says: "I learn from a source to be regarded as thoroughly trustworthy that the Russian government is in possession of definite news to the effect that all the ministers and foreigners in Peking have been massacred. The terrible event took place, according to the information received, on July 6." In contradiction to this news Li Hung Chang claims the legations were safe on July 9.

WASHINGTON.—An informal draft of an agreement for a modus vivendi between all the powers over the Chinese crisis has been presented to all the nations, including the United States. By its terms the question of partition of China is held in abeyance until present military operations cease. President McKinley has assented to the concert. It is reported the allies in Tientsin are unable to agree upon a commander in chief of the allied forces. Russia refuses to serve under Marshal Yamagata. William W. Rockhill, director of the bureau of American republics, has been appointed by President McKinley a special commissioner to go to China and report upon the situation there.

CHICAGO.—Alexander Pam, 4547 Oakenwald avenue, for many years a leading wholesale millinery dealer in Chicago and father of Attorneys Hugo Pam and Max Pam, died suddenly of heart disease at the Randolph street station of the Illinois Central railroad. He was 65 years old.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 20, 1920.

CHICAGO.—After more than 40 years in the legal field, either as a practicing attorney or in a judicial position, Judge William Fenimore Cooper of the Superior court resigned. He asked Gov. Lowden to call a special election so he can leave the bench by the first Monday in December.

CHICAGO.—Lieut. Carl Wanderer, despite his confession of having killed his wife and the "ragged stranger," will make a fight for his life. He will plead not guilty and rely on Attorney Benedict Short to save his neck.

DESPOILERS.

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 9.—Your editorial of several days ago criticizing Wisconsin for its alleged inability to keep the state attractive to fishermen and other tourists reflects Chicago's usual attitude toward the rest of the country. You evidently think that Chicago must be served, regardless of the cost to others. Before offering advice to your neighboring state you should try to educate your own people.

Yes, Wisconsin was a wonderful place to fish and rest ten years ago, and it would still be so if tourists from the large cities would only learn to conduct themselves properly when visiting this great outdoors. Let me mention only one of hundreds of instances I have witnessed of the 14 carat fishhog in action.

Several years ago we headed for a small lake in upper Wisconsin. This was strictly a bass lake, and the fishing had always been excellent. As we pulled up to our old camping ground we found it occupied by a judge from Gary and several other potbellied politicians. They had built a live box about the size of the Navy pier and were filling it with bass and bluegills. When they left for home they carried with them about 300 pounds of the finest fish I have ever seen.

Next, let us examine your complaint regarding the lack of restful surroundings, etc. About ten years ago the writer and several friends built a cabin in Wisconsin's wilderness. This section of the country was unspoiled; the fishing was fine; the quiet of the forest was broken only by the songs of many and various birds; and the final touch of a perfect wilderness retreat was added by the cry of loons at night and the fear inspiring howl of the timber wolf. This peaceful spot was soon to be overrun by the hordes from "Chicagoland." One day a squad of workmen arrived and proceeded with the erection of an imposing log residence for one of Chicago's prominent politicians, and this proved to be the beginning of the end.

Go up there today and visit this once restful and primitive retreat. The loons and other water birds are gone, chased off the lake by hell roaring speedboats manned by samples of modern big city youth. Where are the songbirds? Killed and scattered by the guns and racket of groups of Chicago's roughneck kids. And where are the fish? Ask the fishermen from the big town—pigs at home and pigs wherever they go.

FRED KALWITZ.

SCREECHING BRAKES.

Chicago, July 10.—Has any one ever sought to ascertain by what license the motorist imposes his screeching brakes on a noise worn public? I, for one, am a sufferer from an ear malady which makes these noises almost unbearable. No doubt there are others in a like situation. Why is this tolerated? If any one of us were to make other noises equivalent in sound volume to the noise of the screeching auto brake we would soon have a lot of explaining to do. The number of motorists who can drive without screeching brakes testify that such noise is unnecessary. Even a heavy vehicle like a motor bus can avoid it.

The health department talks much about noise and its effect on health. Why not start reducing noise at a possible point?

EARITATED.

WHY CHICAGOANS ARE EXCLUDED.

Wilmette, Ill., July 11.—No one can blame people of Chicago for wanting to use the clean and sanitary beaches on the north shore, since the majority of Chicago beaches are littered with rubbish, glass and an abundance of hungry beach flies that breed there. Beaches on the north shore are kept sanitary and clean and properly restricted by money from the residents on the north shore. They had no restrictions until Chicagoans came out and abused the privilege by making the beach unsafe, insanitary, and undesirable for people with caution for health and their well-being. It would not be amiss for the people in Chicago who desire such fine beaches to move there or else clean their own beaches and force people to keep them clean and desirable like all north shore beaches. People at Evanston pay personally for the upkeep of the beaches and they pay more taxes per capita to the city of Chicago than the average Chicagoan does.

ROBERT E. HOLMES.

TWO HEROES.

Chicago, July 11.—From my tower office window I can look out over the loop and see the flags flying and watch the roaring fleet of airplanes. I can see strings of tape rippling from wires and windows over toward La Salle street. All the show is to honor a hero visiting our town.

In this morning's TRIBUNE there is a picture taken at the funeral of Bruno Schustek, who risked and lost his life in a true example of human heroism. He is already forgotten.

Here is my idea of the genuine and the spurious in heroes. The one a hero by virtue of money, materials, and preparation for heroing coupled with press agenting of high degree.

No ballyhoo for the other. No hundreds of thousands of dollars invested before going into the hero business. No fortune in the movie rights. No small army of others aching for his chance. Death only for him if he faltered. There was not even a gallery to look on and applaud. There were no cheers as he took off. The few people near shuddered as they watched.

For the spurious brand the town turns out today and celebrates. For the genuine, a quick requiem and oblivion.

F. J. BRENNAN.

COL. BATTEY OF THE 57TH.

Chicago, July 10.—I noticed with much interest in THE TRIBUNE of yesterday certain reprinted items from the issue of July 9, 1865, among which was one relating to the return to Chicago of the 57th regiment, Illinois Volunteers, under the command of Lieut. Col. Frederick A. Battey. Col. Battey is my father and now resides in Miami, Fla., and will be 92 years old next November. He is in good health and active, at least for one of his years. Naturally, I am going to send him the clipping, which I know he will read with much interest.

R. B. BATTEY.

HOW WRONG HE WAS.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 10.—Writing from Chicago in his younger days, Mr. Kipling said: "I have struck a city—a real city—and they call it Chicago. Having seen it, I desire urgently never to see it again. It is inhabited by savages."

ROYAL SPAT ENDS AS CAROL TAKES TRAIN WITH WIFE

Make Public Appearance Together.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 19.—(AP)—King Carol and Queen Helene of Rumania rode out to Curtea de Arges today to a requiem memorial for King Ferdinand, Carol's father, and there for the time being, at least, put the marital troubles, which had separated them since the crown prince chose a path away from the mother of his small son, Michael.

Appearing for a journey together for the first time in public since Carol's return, the royal couple were believed by the populace, which had awaited such a gesture, to have composed the last of their differences.

Carol Calls Cabinet Meeting.

Support was given to that belief when, aboard the private train, which took the pair together with Queen Marie, Prince Nicholas and Princess Ileana and others to the ceremony, King Carol called a cabinet meeting for the purpose of drafting the legal formula announcing annulment of her divorce.

For many days the people of Rumania had awaited public appearance of Carol and Helene so that they might accept as fact the many rumors, which had gained circulations regarding the reconciliation.

Friends of both had pressed them to settle their troubles and officials close to the king had emphasized that Mme. Magda Lupescu, titian haired companion of Carol's exile, would not come to Rumania to mar their marital happiness.

Expect Dual Coronation.

Announcement of annulment of the divorce is generally expected by court circles on the return of the royal couple to Bucharest. The public hopes their marital problem will be officially settled in time for Helene to share the throne with Carol at the coming state coronation.

It was announced tonight the king within a few days personally would broadcast a speech to the nation.

JUDGE RESIGNS

JUDGE GEORGE T. PAGE.

The resignation of Judge George T. Page of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals was announced at Washington yesterday by Attorney General Mitchell. He will retire from the federal bench on Oct. 1, at the age of 71.

An Illinois District judge is expected to be elevated to fill the vacancy on the Appellate bench and Senator Charles S. Deneen may have an opportunity to name the successor for the district vacancy. Senator Deneen was deprived of at least one judicial appointment when the bill to create two additional Illinois judges was blocked recently in the house.

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville has been mentioned as a prospect for the appellate bench. He has sat frequently at Chicago.

Judge Page was born at Spring Bay, in Woodford county, in 1859. He began the practice of law at Metamora and later practiced at Peoria, where he now makes his home. A Democrat in politics, he was appointed to the federal bench by President Wilson in 1919. He has served as president of the Illinois and the American Bar associations.

HOPE BUILDING CAN REPLACE 2 TENTS AT CAMP

Plan Improvement After Annual Inspection.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Official visitors tramped about Camp Algonquin's 43 acres yesterday on their annual tour of inspection and found the Fox river valley camp for Chicago's underprivileged children in need of improvements.

Headed by Samuel Insull Jr., chairman, the summer outing committee of the United Charities appeared not to mind the 102 degree temperature as they considered things which must be done to assure comfort for the camp's 500 mothers and children. Two points were agreed upon. First, the two tents and a shack which house about 30 vacationists must be replaced with a modern permanent building. And, second, Camp Algonquin should be converted into a year round camp.

Charity Workers in Party.

Others in the party were Miss Naomi Donnelley and Charles Winslow, also members of the board of directors of the United Charities and members of the outing committee; Dr. Benjamin Goldberg, director of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium; Wilfred S. Reynolds, director of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies; Dr. Henry C. Niblack, head of the infant welfare department of the Chicago health department; Miss Claudia Wannamaker of the Institute for Juvenile Research; and Miss Florence Nesbitt, Mrs. Gudrun G. Rom, and Mrs. Florence Blanchard, district superintendents of the charities. Following a luncheon and a tour of the camp conducted by Joel D. Hunter, superintendent of the charities, and Mrs. Astrid Save, camp superintendent, plans for the camp were discussed in an informal meeting.

"The United Charities is nonsectarian and nonspecializing," said Mr. Insull. "It must take cases which cannot go anywhere else. The camp work is necessarily part of the work conducted by the ten districts, and it is important that all cases those districts find in need of camp vacations be well taken care of here.

Says Shack Should Go.

"The tents and shack should be torn down and replaced by a permanent building, equipped with modern conveniences as in the rest of the camp. In spite of the fact that the United Charities has no funds for erecting a new building, which would cost about $25,000, the need for the new building exists and must be met. Outside of that, Camp Algonquin appears to be in excellent running order."

Mr. Insull said, and the committee agreed, that if the new building is a permanent one, it will remove the main obstacle which has kept Algonquin from keeping open all year. He spoke of the need in the Chicago area for a winter convalescent camp. He pointed out that it costs $22,000 to keep the camp open twelve weeks a year, while during the other 40 weeks it would operate on much less than twice that amount, making a yearly budget of $40,000. During winter, however, but 40 children and ten workers would be accommodated at a time.

Reynolds Backs Proposal.

"It is a wise procedure to extend the equipment Camp Algonquin has to use during all the year," declared Mr. Reynolds. "When we view the social facilities of the city we find a great lack for care and building up of children predisposed to weakness."

Dr. Goldberg declared himself heartily in support of a year round camp. He called the camp one of the best equipped in the country.

While plans were being formulated for Algonquin, more gifts rolled in to the free ice fund, boosting the total over the $1,000 mark.

YASUKATA OKU, HERO IN WAR WITH RUSSIA, IS DEAD

TOKIO, July 19.—(AP)—Field Marshal Count Yasukata Oku, last surviving commander of the Russian-Japanese war, died of kidney trouble here today at the age of 84.

Field Marshal Count Oku won his first military distinction in the civil war of 1877 for having cut through the besieging lines of the rebels around Kumamoto. Later he commanded the fifth army division in the Japanese-Chinese war. He was made commander of the Tokio bay defense committee of the eastern military districts and held other high posts. In 1903 he was made a general. During the Russian-Japanese war he led the second division. From 1906 to 1912 he was chief of the general staff.

Count Oku was born in 1846 of a Samurai family in the Fukuoka region. He was one of the few elders permitted to carry a cane in the presence of the emperor, although he was so enfeebled in the last two years he was unable to exercise this privilege.

Protest Digging in Indian Graves

INDIANS TO ASK GOV. EMMERSON TO HALT DIGGERS

Draft Protest Against U. of I. Excavators.

Utica, Ill., July 19.—[Special.]—Arguing that it is no more right for white men to dig up Indian graves than it would be for Indians to start excavating in the whites' cemeteries, a group of some 250 Winnebagos which is encamped at Starved Rock state park, is drafting a protest to Governors Emmerson of Illinois and Kohler of Wisconsin asking that the digging work be ordered stopped.

The protest was decided on after the Indians, who came to the Rock to spend a few weeks camping on the grounds over which their ancestors roamed and fought, found University of Illinois excavators busily engaged in digging into the burial mounds which abound in this section.

Graves Are Sacred, Chief Says.

The protest is to be read and formally signed at a pow-wow to be held at the Indian camp near the Rock the last week in July.

"Whites cannot comprehend the sacredness with which an Indian regards the mounds in which his dead are placed," Chief Knows-Their-Thoughts, who is the official interpreter for the camp, declared.

The chief said that the graves of Winnebagos, Sacs and Foxes, Ottawas, Illini, and Pottawattamies are scattered throughout the Illinois valley. Many of the Indians are related by intermarriage and the Winnebago protest will cover the other tribes' burial mounds as well as their own.

Excavators Find Spear Point.

In the excavators' camps, where Prof. A. R. Kelly, assistant professor of archæology at the University of Illinois, is superintending the expedition that is uncovering the mounds, little concern is expressed over the Indian protests. Valuable information on the construction of the mounds and life of the tribesmen has been secured, it was said. The digging has been going on now for two years.

BOY, 10, FOUND CHAINED TO POST IN HIS HOME

Detroit, Mich., July 19.—(AP)—A 10 year old boy was found today chained to a post in the basement of his home.

Rescued by police, the lad, Clifford Peters, told them he had been chained up for more than 12 hours every day since school was dismissed early in June and that prior to that he was confined in the basement dungeon on Saturdays for a year.

An investigation revealed that the boy's father, John, is a night watchman and sleeps by day. His stepmother, Rose, left home for her work each morning at 6, chaining the boy before she left and releasing him when she returned at 6:30 p. m.

6 Grandsons Carry Casket of Civil War Vet to Grave

St. Joseph, Mich., July 19.—[Special.]—Six grandsons carried the casket of James F. Skinner, 82, the last civil war veteran in Berrien Springs, when military funeral services were held there today. Mr. Skinner spent sixty-one years in that village. He joined a volunteer Indiana regiment at the age of 14, and was the youngest soldier in Elkhart county to enter the army.

DEATH TOLL RISES IN JAPAN STORM; LOSS $50,000,000

TOKIO, July 19.—(AP)—Still counting dead and injured and adding up property losses as rapidly as faltering communication lines could report them, Japan and Corea set about rehabilitating regions swept yesterday by the worst typhoon in a generation.

The storm swept over the Loochoo islands, Kiushiu island, across the inland sea from the main island of Japan and into Corea at a velocity reaching 100 miles an hour.

Seventy persons were known to have been killed on Kiushiu. Injured in Japan had reached 737 and more than 100 were missing. It was estimated by officials 4,200 houses were destroyed and 13,000 homes damaged. Japanese houses as a rule are of flimsy construction compared with western residences. Damage estimates ran as high as $50,000,000.

Margaret Root, Mother of Kenneth, Dies in West

Mrs. Margaret Root, mother of Kenneth E. Root, 1052 Loyola avenue, an executive of Montgomery Ward & Co., died yesterday after a brief illness at Glacier Park, Mont., where she recently had gone in the hope of regaining her health. Mrs. Root is survived also by her husband, Frederick K. Root and another son, Fred K. The body will be brought to Chicago for burial.

Woman, Member of Church 83 Years, Is Dead at 99

Brownfield, Ill., July 19.—[Special.]—Mrs. Agnes Hannah Crawford, 99, pioneer citizen and school teacher of Pope county, died here this morning. She had been a member of the First Presbyterian church of Golconda, Ill., for 83 years.

DESERTED AFTER 33 YEARS.

Quincy, Ill., July 19.—[Special.]—Deserted after thirty-three years of married life, Mrs. Lydie Mollenhauer today obtained a divorce from Edward A. Mollenhauer in Adams county Circuit court. The Mollenhauers, prominent Quincy residents, were married in 1895. Mrs. Mollenhauer testified her husband left her July 6, 1928.

E. E. CRITCHFIELD, FOUNDER OF AD FIRM, IS DEAD

Elmer E. Critchfield, president of the First National bank of Wheaton and a resident of that suburb since 1893, died suddenly yesterday of a heart attack at his home at 204 Seminary avenue, Wheaton. Mr. Critchfield returned on Thursday from an automobile trip through the south and the southwest, and it is believed that fatigue, together with the heat, superinduced the attack. He was 69 years old.

Mr. Critchfield for nearly forty years was identified with the advertising business in Chicago, being at time of his death the chairman of Critchfield & Co., 14 East Jackson boulevard, which company he aided in founding in 1893. He was a native of Ohio and before coming to Chicago was a professor of agriculture in an eastern college. At one time he held the rank of major in the Ohio National Guard.

Mr. Critchfield is survived by the widow and three sons and four daughters. He was a member of the Union League and other clubs and was active in lodge circles. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam.

SARNER—Rosalie Sarner. In loving remembrance of our dear mother who passed away 28 years ago today.
SARNER FAMILY.

ZISOOK—Bessie Zisook. In fond and loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away July 20, 1927.

Friends may think the wound is healed,
But little do they know the grief that within our hearts is sealed;
Mother, dear, we are lonely, and though
you're not beside us,
We know you'll always guide us.
We miss your beautiful and loving face,
but you left us to remember
That none on earth can take your place.
DAUGHTER AND SONS.

Tee off with golf balls your tooth paste pays for

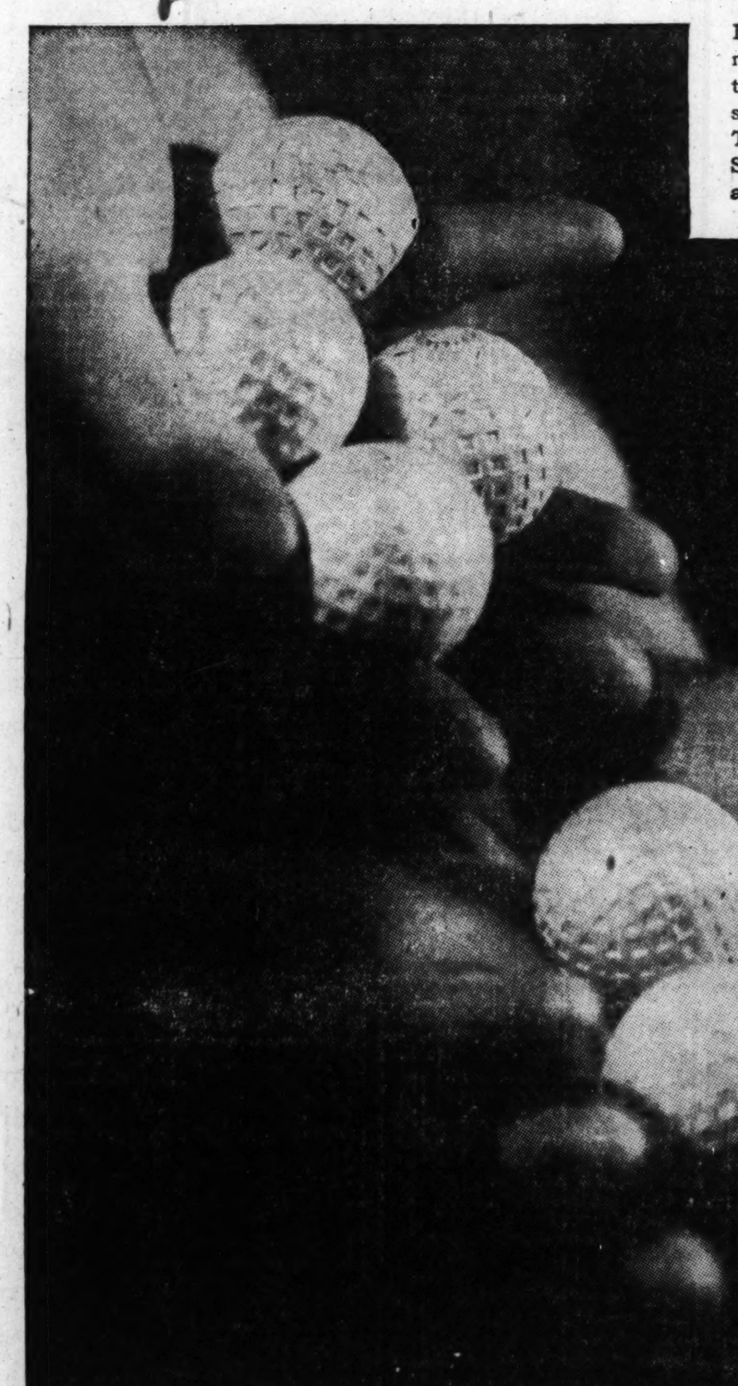
Intelligent people, recognizing the remarkable cleansing powers of Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢, buy it instead of dentifrices in the 50¢ class. The average saving is $3 a year. Spend it as you please. Golf balls are merely a suggestion.



See teeth whiten!
Feel your mouth grow healthier

EVEN those whose teeth are hard to whiten comment on how swiftly, yet how gently, Listerine Tooth Paste performs this task. Such action is due to new cleansing and polishing agents, harder than tartar and so, capable of removing it, but softer than enamel and therefore harmless to it.

And regular users assert that this dentifrice definitely improves mouth hygiene. The gums grow firmer. The entire mouth seems fresher, exhilarated, and healthy.

Buy a tube of Listerine Tooth Paste and give it a thorough short trial. Compare it with any paste at any price—and judge by results alone. After such tests, more than a million people have switched to Listerine Tooth Paste. We can think of no greater tribute to the product.

Incidentally, Listerine Tooth Paste saves you about $3 per year, over dentifrices in the 50¢ class. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

BOMBAY HUMANE LEAGUE CHARGES POLICE BRUTALITY

Protests Use of Clubs on Civil Resisters.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, July 1. — [By Mail.] — With troops and police using clubs, lathis, and even firearms to suppress the popular demonstrations incident to the Gandhi campaign neutral onlookers often wonder how long the natives of India will be content to meet force with what is still called civil disobedience.

The only organized body thus far to protest against the armed and physical attacks upon unarmed men and women, though they are defying the present laws of India, has been the Bombay Humanitarian league, a representative and nonpartisan body.

Calls Police Heartless.

This organization has protested in the following telegram to the viceroy:

"The Bombay Humanitarian league, nonpolitical humanitarian organization, is terribuly shocked at most torturous brutalities committed by heartless police officers and constables at Dharasana, Wadala, and elsewhere. We wonder more at the deliberate connivance of the government in such unwarranted atrocities, especially on those who are unarmed and extremely nonviolent in their actions.

"The league reminds you that such actions of police are highly detestable and display barbarity not expected in this age of civilization. We emphatically condemn the government policy and request you to instruct police everywhere to deal humanely and thus show due regard for humanity. Rational human beings cannot brook such inhumanity, which, if continued, will only bring further shame on government and result in disaster for the government and public."

Medics List Injuries.

An official communique from medical practitioners, who were in attendance at the Untadi and Bulsar hospitals, definitely challenged the report issued by the authorities of the Bombay district with reference to the alleged brutalities at the salt raids and states:

"Out of about 850 volunteers sent out for raids during these days [May 30 and June 1] about 450 injured volunteers had to be treated at the Bulsar hospital. We give below an analysis of the different types of injuries recorded:

"Injuries on head, 27; on face, eye or ear, 16; on nose, 12; on shoulder or arm, 16; chest, 73; abdomen, 57; back, 229; thigh and leg, 193; scrotum, 21; fractures, 15 [perhaps more], dislocations, 10; injuries by horses' hoofs, 25; rendered unconscious, 40.

"We leave to the medical world and the general public whether such injuries could ever be caused by the minimum force the government claims to have employed."

Four Hurt by Police Fire.

MADRAS, India, July 19.—(AP)—Four persons were injured today in rioting at Madura, when police fired into a crowd of Nationalist demonstrators.

REPORT MISSING FLYER SAFE IN JUNGLE VILLAGE

LONDON, July 19.—(AP)—A Rangoon dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company today said villagers near the Bali river insisted that Eric Hook, missing British airman, was being cared for in a certain village. The report was being investigated, although floods were making the search difficult. No other trace of the aviator was found in the region where his companion, Jimmie Matthews, said he left him after their England to Australia plane crashed more than a fortnight ago.

WALES PLANNING TO SEE U. S. FROM PLANE THIS YEAR

LONDON, July 19.—(AP)—The early edition of the Sunday Express today said that the prince of Wales is planning to visit the United States this year. No date was given, but the Express said the prince would take an airplane and have a "camping holiday."

"The prince of Wales is planning an unusual adventure this year," the paper says. "He intends to visit the United States and Canada accompanied by Sir Philip Sassoon.

"They will take an airplane with them and will go to various parts of the North American continent on a free and easy camping holiday."

Portugal Bans Gambling Except Roulette, Baccarat

LISBON, Portugal, July 19.—(AP)—Roulette and baccaret today were recognized as Portugal's only authorized games of chance. The home office put under band the Tombola lotteries and all other games, imposing severe penalties against players and operators. Licensed casinos and health stations, where the two permitted games are the attraction, alone were excepted.

EGYPTIAN ARMY MAY AID 'REBELS' IN UPSETTING KING

Crisis Due Tomorrow in Parliament.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 19.—News reached the Egyptian agent in London today that the Nationalist leaders have now consulted all branches of their party throughout Egypt and have secured unanimous approval of the program for the meeting of the dissolved parliament Monday in defiance of the king to demand his abdication or surrender of a large part of his powers. Much depends on the attitude taken by the king and the loyalty to him of the army and the police.

Rely on Army.

It was stated here that the Nationalist party is relying on the support of at least three-quarters of the army, only the guards regiments remaining loyal to the king. The party is not so sure of the police, as the higher officers are all Europeans and are expected to remain loyal to the king.

"The deputies are determined to sit in parliament or die in the attempt," was the text of one telegram received here today.

Ex-Premier Answers Britain.

CAIRO, Egypt, July 19.—(AP)—Former Premier Nahas Pasha, leader of the Nationalist party, today followed the example of his sucessor, Premier Sidky Pasha, in replying to the British government's warning that he, equally with the Egyptian government, would be held responsible if foreign lives and interests were endangered.

After welcoming the British government's declaration of neutrality in the present situation, the Nationalist leader says:

"The Egyptian nation, which by its very nature, is inclined to peace and tranquillity and which has always warmly welcomed foreign guests, occupies itself increasingly with their security, surrounds them with care and lavishes solicitude upon them.

"It profoundly deplores the sad events which have happened in the country against its wishes; these events have been caused by the conduct of the ministry in the present constitutional crisis and the nation is only defending the constitution against a ministry which is encroaching upon its authority."

TROOPS TO GUARD CANADIAN LINERS IN CHINA WATERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 19.—All the palatial trans-Pacific liners on the Canadian Pacific ocean services hereafter will carry heavy military guards against pirates while sailing in far eastern waters. The announcement, made here today, caused considerable speculation, due to the fact that piracies heretofore have been confined to small British coastwise ships and no attempt has ever been made to capture a trans-Pacific liner carrying world tourists.

According to the announcement, the guards will consist of White Russian soldiers, but they will wear British military uniforms, carry British military rifles and will be subject to the strict military regulations of the British colonial government at Hongkong. The guards will be recruited and trained here from the members of the White Russian community who have done volunteer military service in the Shanghai international settlement.

Officials of the Dollar steamship interests here said today that a careful inquiry had disclosed no evidence of piracies and they did not believe the situation justified the use of armed guards, particularly since no American shipping heretofore had been affected. According to the announcement of the Canadian Pacific lines, guards will be stationed on all their liners cruising between Shanghai, Hongkong, and Manila.

Despondent, He Dives Into Cauldron of Molten Iron

MEUSELWITZ, Germany, July 19.—(AP)—Oscar Woetzold, proprietor of a foundry, despondent, the police said, over industrial reverses and credit losses which were wrecking his business, dived into a cauldron of molten iron in his blast furnace and perished.

ADDING TO HUMAN LIFE ..AND.. HAPPINESS

ANNOUNCEMENT

This advertisement has been submitted to and been approved by the Medical Advisory Board which has been formed at the invitation of the Trustees. It is published by a health agency established for public service to inform the public of the dangers of "social diseases", of the importance of securing good medical care, and of the facilities whereby this can be obtained.

BABY'S arrival is an event of great importance in any home. Many problems must be talked over and dealt with. None is more important than that of health—the health of the child and of the expectant mother. They must have the best advice and protection possible and this must start long before the birth of the child.

Syphilis is a most serious threat to the health of both mother and infant according to medical authorities. In studies of more than 5,000 expectant mothers in the clinics of Chicago, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and New York, about ten out of every hundred were found to have syphilis. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur says "When we can keep the spirochete of syphilis out of the body of every new-born babe, we shall have added enough to human life and happiness to heal the wounds of the Great War."

Good medical treatment of an infected mother before the birth of her child will insure a baby free from syphilis and a mother improved in health.

The United States Public Health Service tells us that "If no treatment is given during pregnancy, a mother with active syphilis is almost certain to give birth to a syphilitic child or to have a miscarriage on account of her disease. With adequate treatment, especially during the early months of pregnancy, a healthy child can be assured in almost every instance, even though the treatment is not sufficient to eradicate the disease in the mother."

No health examinations of expectant mothers can be complete and thorough without Wassermann and Kahn blood and other laboratory tests for syphilis and gonorrhea. These diseases often exist without the knowledge of the infected individual. In one great hospital where all expectant mothers are examined for their health before their babies are born, at least one-fourth of those found to have syphilis had no idea that they had been so infected, and showed no evidence of the disease on their bodies.

Good medical treatment and care of syphilis and gonorrhea can be secured within your means from an experienced family physician or from the Public Health Institute. Treatment is available, also, through the Institute and many free clinics, for those without funds.

The Institute was organized more than ten years ago to combat "social diseases" in Chicago. Members of its medical staff are experienced and are registered by the state. All treatment and advice is given by these men and women physicians.

The fees are within the reach of all. Treatment is available to those without immediate funds—no one is turned away because of inability to pay.

DOWN GO PRICES!

~to the Lowest Levels in Years

~in This Great MID-SUMMER SALE

We are prepared with big stocks of lumber, millwork, plumbing material, heating equipment, and everything you will need for building, remodeling, and repairing—the result of far sighted purchases and recently completed contracts made at rock bottom prices.

Manufacturers and distributors of raw materials have been forced to reduce their bulging stocks at stupendous price sacrifices. These savings are reflected in our prices to you, which have been marked down to the lowest levels in years.

Our most skilled carpenters, masons, plumbers, steamfitters, and construction men in every field are available. And you get free service from our building experts and engineers, who plan every job and relieve you of all building worries.

During this sale we are offering special inducements and unusual economies in all materials and all branches of our construction service, enabling you to complete your building program with big economy—a small cash investment and under most liberal terms.

Buy liberally—let your savings help you pay!

CUBS NEAR FIRST PLACE; WHIP ROBINS, 5 TO 4

BLUE LARKSPUR WINS $25,200 ARLINGTON CUP RACE

PETEE WRACK 3 LENGTHS BACK; TORO IS THIRD

Buddy Bauer Scores for Bradley Also.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Blue Larkspur, Edward R. Bradley's champion 3 year old of last year, won the Arlington cup and $25,200 before a crowd of 25,000 at Arlington Park yesterday.

Showing the same marvelous speed which has marked all his races and dashing into the lead on the last turn Blue Larkspur came galloping down the stretch three lengths in front of J. R. Macomber's Petee Wrack. The mighty Toro staged one of his famous stretch rallies, but the best he got was third money.

Has Won $272,070.

Sun Beau was fourth and Reveille Boy, the American Derby winner and the only 3 year old in the race, brought up the rear in the five horse field. When he raced to his cup triumph at the end of the mile and a quarter struggle Blue Larkspur became the third highest money winning horse of all time. He has now accounted for $272,070, and only Zev and Gallant Fox are ahead of him.

Blue Larkspur scored his triumph before one of the most notable gatherings ever to assemble at a Chicago race course. Those in the crowd of 25,000, both the great and the near great, sweltered in the intense heat. An occasional breeze from the direction of Lake Michigan provided the only relief.

Blue Larkspur had the backing of nearly everybody in the crowd and was an odds-on choice at post time. In the mutuels he paid $3.72 to win, $2.84 to place and $2.32 to show. Petee Wrack was at $9.62 to place and $4.16 to show. Toro, with his old time backers refusing to desert him, paid $3.50 to show.

Equals Fox's Time.

Blue Larkspur flew over the mile and a quarter course in 2:03-4-5, which was a fifth of a second short of the track record. It was exactly the same time hung up by Gallant Fox a week earlier when the Fox won the Classic.

Shortly after Blue Larkspur won the cup, a second Bradley victory was rolled up by Buddy Bauer in the Cherry Circle claiming stakes, which was worth $6,950 to Owner Bradley. Buddy Bauer beat Equation by two and a half lengths, while Juggler from the Rosedale stable landed third.

Blue Larkspur was so good in the cup it looked as if he could have made a runaway of it at any stage of the contest, although in the early part of it he permitted Petee Wrack to make the pace.

The small band of five was at the post for four minutes, the delay being caused by Reveille Boy, which refused to go into one of the stalls and finally had to be taken to the outside of the gate. But when Starter Dickerson gave them the word they were away in fine alignment, with Blue Larkspur's nose showing in front. Toro was second, Petee Wrack third, and Sun Beau fourth.

Petee Wrack Takes Lead.

They rounded the Post and Paddock turn closely grouped, but Petee Wrack had fought his way to the lead next to the rail, Blue Larkspur was running second, and Reveille Boy had moved into third place. Sun Beau was right with them.

Down the back stretch Petee Wrack led all the way, but Smith was having a hard time keeping Blue Larkspur from going to the lead. Blue Larkspur made his move as they hit the lower bend. Smith took him to the outside of Petee Wrack and rushed on past the Macomber color bearer in less than a dozen strides. Blue Larkspur came right back to the rail and it was a romp for him for the rest of the way home.

Petee Wrack was losing ground and when Toro started to move it looked as if it would at least take him on past Petee Wrack. But Petee had something left and saved second money. Sun Beau also was coming fast, but Toro headed him for third money by half a length.

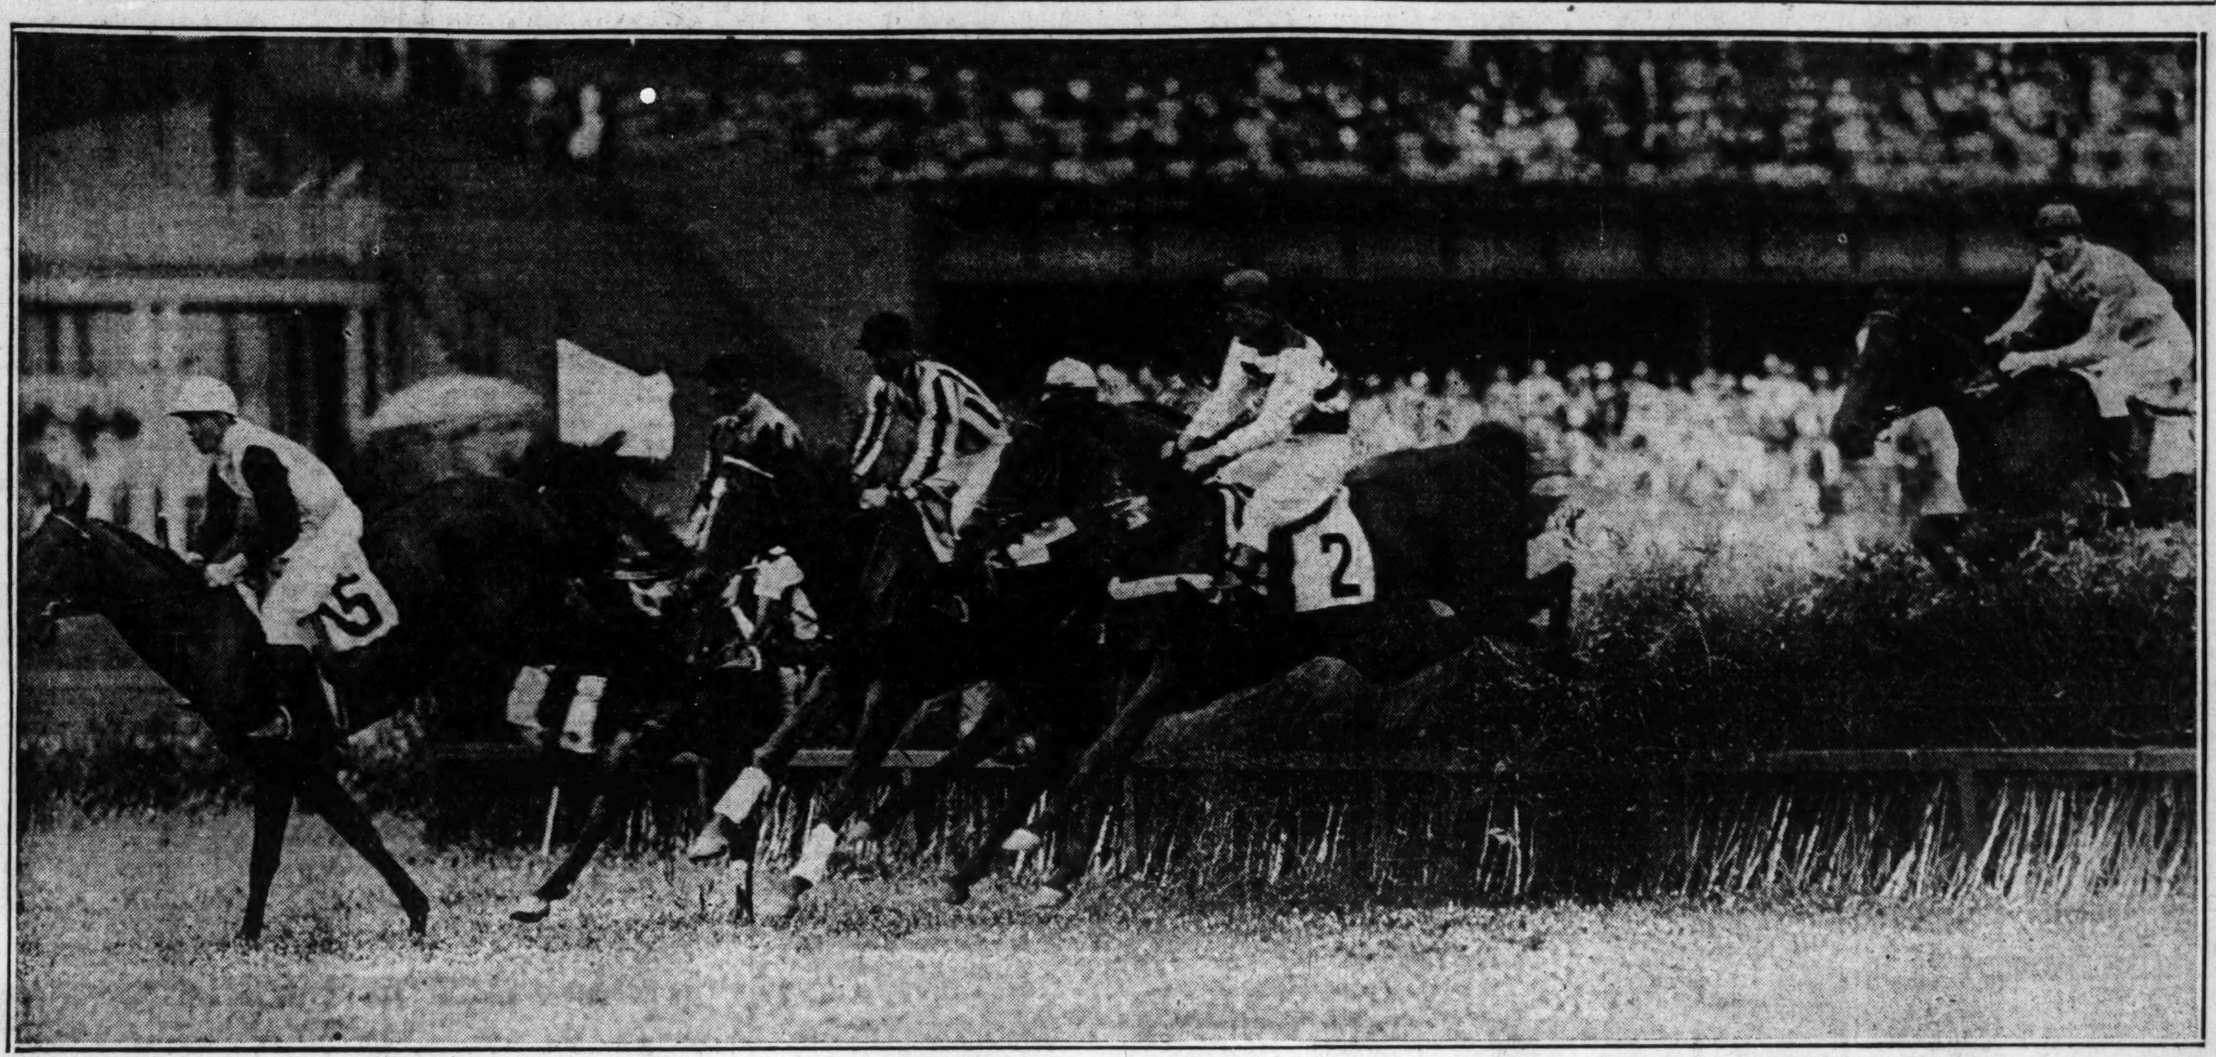
As the race was run Blue Larkspur looked even better than his margin of victory shows. He proved in this race that he is easily the best of all older stake stars. Gallant Fox might trim him, but the latter will have to hold the same sensational form that has carried him to his six straight 3 year old victories.

Bring Trophy to Bradley.

Owner Bradley, who has been ill for almost a year, was unable to go into the stand and receive the cup. Gov. Emmerson presented the trophy to Trainer Dick Thompson in the stand. Then the governor, with Trainer Thompson and Jockey Smith made their way to the Post and Paddock club, where Mr. Bradley had viewed the race and presented him with the cup.

The cup is 105 years old and was acquired in England by Christopher J. Fitzgerald, presiding steward at Arlington. The inscription on it reads "Ascot Heath, 1825, the Right Honorable Lord Mayborough, Steward."

OVER THE TOP—ONLY 12 MORE TO CLEAR



Arc Light, owned by Joseph E. Widener, and five others clear the first fence in the steeplechase at Arlington Park. The eastern sportsman's jumper had not been in a race since last November, but that did not prevent him from winning and breaking the track record for the two mile course. All the horses sailed over the 13 barriers without mishap, an unusual occurrence in this hazardous sport. Two other track marks were lowered and another equaled during the eight races.

U.S. BEATS ITALY; TO PLAY FRANCE FOR DAVIS CUP

Allison and Van Ryn Win Doubles Match.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GEORGE LOTT.

PARIS, July 19.—The United States won the right to challenge France for the Davis cup today by defeating Italy three straight matches—two singles and one doubles. The American victory stands regardless of the outcome of tomorrow's singles, when the Americans hope to make a clean sweep.

George Lott of Chicago completed yesterday's match with Baron Humbert de Morpurgo, taking the deciding set, 6-3, by playing masterful tennis against the Italian wizard, and then Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, in a gruelling five set battle, nailed a victory against Placido Gaslini and Morpurgo, who, at the last minute, was substituted for Alberto Delbono. The scores were 5-7, 6-2, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3.

Lott Breaks Foe's Service.

In the singles, Lott stepped out by immediately taking his own service, but Morpurgo duplicated. George then grabbed the next two games, making it 3-1. The baron then rallied and drew to a level, 3-all. In the seventh game Lott broke Morpurgo's service and then ran out the next two games.

Morpurgo consistently overdrove, misjudging distance, especially when he tried to kiss the side lines.

When Allison and Van Ryn opened their doubles match against Gaslini and Morpurgo, Gaslini was obviously worried by his spectacles, for when the Americans drove red hot ones toward him, he frequently ducked and shielded his face, losing points as a result. Morpurgo was the strength of the Italian side throughout the play.

Displaying fine teamwork, the Americans won the opening game on Morpurgo's service and then Allison took his game. The play zig-zagged to five-all. The Italians won the eleventh game on Gaslini's service and Morpurgo's placements. Then Van Ryn lost his service by driving outside, giving the Italians the set, 7-5.

Italians Win Fourth Set.

The Yanks cleaned up the second set, 6-2. In the third set they broke through Gaslini for a 4-3 lead. Van Ryn lost on service, but in return crashed Morpurgo's service. Allison's ace helped capture the tenth game and the set, 6-4.

After a rest, the Italians displayed better teamwork and took the fourth se easily, 6-1.

The Americans opened the fifth set by winning three straight games and won, 6-3, to take the match.

White Sox Get Bob Fothergill from Detroit

Bob Fothergill, the portly outfielder who has worn Detroit flannels for six years, will tuck himself into a White Sox uniform Tuesday, which is the earliest date at which a garment sufficiently large can be delivered. He was obtained from the Tigers yesterday via waivers, according to announcement by Harry Grabiner, the Sox business manager.

Fothergill always has been regarded as a heavy hitter. This season his mark has been in the neighborhood of .260, but he has not played regularly. For the time being, Manager Bush intends to employ him in a pinch hitting rôle.

22 Yachts Sail to Mackinac in 331 Mile Race

Twenty-two yachts swept out of Belmont harbor at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon headed for Mackinac island, 331 miles away. The race, sponsored by the Chicago Yacht club, is the longest fresh water event in existence.

Scarab, a boat from Chesapeake bay, entered in the cruising division, sank Friday night in a crash with a speedboat, while owners of Patsey, Comat, Stellar, and Freya decided not to sail.

Bagheera, owned by Robert Benedict of Jackson Park, is a heavy favorite to repeat its 1929 victory in the cruising division. In the event of heavy weather Sterling Morton's sturdy Volante will be hard to beat, old traps predicted.

Vagabond, a P class sloop from Milwaukee, is generally favored to win the racing division, although Intrepid, defeated by Vagabond at Milwaukee two weeks ago, is conceded a chance. Malcolm Veil, who has been winning races with his R class sloop Ariel, was aboard Intrepid to help its owner, Frank Hough.

FAVOR BRITONS, MOE IN WESTERN AMATEUR GOLF

Tourney Opens at Beverly Tomorrow.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

On the eve of the opening of the western amateur golf tournament, half a dozen players stand out apparently with an even chance of victory, while in the field of 200 there are many dark horses whose luck and spirit may bring about the overthrow of one of these favorites.

Preliminaries will start tomorrow at the Beverly Country club and will continue Tuesday until 36 holes have been played. Then the low 32 will qualify to enter match play for the title and the champion will be crowned after a 36 hole final on Saturday.

Nearly all those who qualified for last year's tournament at Kansas City will be back for another attempt this season, and together with them are several newcomers who are considered formidable.

Tolley Also Contender.

Among these are Cyril Tolley, who held the British amateur title last year, and T. P. Perkins, who won the same championship in 1928.

Perkins has been in exceptionally good form the last few days, shooting 65 for a course record at Edgewater and following this with a 67 at Glen View. In his first attempt at Beverly, however, he was inclined to be erratic and took a 78.

Cyril Tolley also is shooting in his best form and is expected to be up among the leaders when the qualifying scores are posted. Both of these Englishmen now reside in New York.

The defending champion, Don Moe is another who stands out as a prime favorite. It was in this event last year that he first came into national prominence and as a reward for his victory was given a place on the American Walker cup team.

He made good in decisive fashion by defeating Stout in the singles matches of the Walker cup play at Sandwich. Then he entered the British amateur ot St. Andrews, only to be beaten in the first round, but he came back strongly to finish well up in the British open at Hoylake.

Chicagoans Seek Title.

Another who will challenge him is Chick Evans, who has held the title eight times. He has not taken it, however, since Harrison Johnston, national amateur champion, broke his string of victories in 1924.

Among other leading local golfers who will be right up in the running are Jack Westland, who holds the Chicago district title, Gus Novotny, Burton Mudge, John McKinley and Dick Martin.

Another dangerous contender is Johnny Goodman, who proved his mettle by defeating Bobby Jones in the national amateur last season at Pebble Beach. He has a large assortment of shots under his control and has proved that he can stand up under pressure.

After shuffling off the first three games of the series, the White Sox enjoyed a free ride yesterday at the expense of the title holding Athletics. Free transportation was provided in the form of eight passes, seven of which the Bushmen converted into runs that flattened the champions by 10 to 9. It was the first defeat suffered by the Macks in nine starts.

As might be guessed by the above count, there were pitchers in quantity, but not in quality. Mack selected a fourth mound worker before finding one who had a semblance of effectiveness. The troubles of Donnie Bush, the Pale Hose pilot, were almost as complicated. First he had to yank old man Faber. Then, when it looked as if Hal McKain was about to reach the finish of the program, the visitors popped up with a belated rally and Ted Lyons had to lend assistance in a hectic ninth inning in which the tying run was on third base.

Score Tied, but Not for Long.

Once the Sox got wise to the trick of turning loose hits in the wake of passes, they were never headed. They jumped off with three runs in three innings against Mahaffey, but in the fourth Cochrane exploded a homer when two mates happened to be on base. This tied the score in a knot. The Sox, however, bounced along with four in their half, and in the sixth they cashed in three times to complete their scoring. The last three runs left them with enough to be safe, despite three by the Macks in the sixth and the same number in the ninth.

Lyons will be back in action for part of the twin bill today. Caraway will handle the other half. Russell and Smith may appear for the Red Sox.

Timely intervention by Crouse enabled the Sox to move into a two run lead in the second inning. With one out, Barnes drew a pass from Mahaffey. With two out Ryan scratched a hit toward third base. Crouse then slapped a two base liner to the board in right center, Barnes and Ryan hurrying over the plate. In the next round Reynolds doubled with two out and scored when Jolley singled. This provided the Sox with a 3 to 0 lead, but their feeling of security was soon disturbed.

Cochrane Hits Homer.

For the first three innings Faber gave such a pleasing performance that nobody reached base on him. The fourth was different, however, three scoring because Cochrane stepped in at the right time with a hit into the stands. Faber started the inning poorly by hitting Bishop on the knee. Haas was walked. Then Cochrane, selecting a cripple Faber tried to sneak past him, crashed his homer to right field and the score became knotted at 3 apiece.

The Sox got the maximum of results from their hitting in the fourth, when they jumped into the lead with four runs. The first happening was a pass to Cissell. After Ryan had fouled out Crouse shot his second two bagger into right and Cissell scored. Faber walked and Mr. Mack figured the time ripe to remove Mahaffey. The first thing Rescuer Walberg did was to pass Watwood, filling the bases. Mulleavy doubled to right, scoring Crouse and Faber. Watwood carried home the fourth run of the inning while Dykes was throwing out Reynolds.

The scoring of three runs by the Mackmen in the sixth started with Haas' single which Jolley fumbled, giving the runner an extra base. Cochrane bounced out to Watwood, but Simmons was credited with a triple on a fly Reynolds should have caught, Haas scoring. Simmons tallied on a two bagger bounced off the center field bricks by Foxx. McKain relieved Faber at this point and Miller singled Foxx across. This reduced the Sox lead to one run.

More Walks—More Sox Runs.

The three tallies that put the Sox safely in the lead again in the home sixth were principally gifts. McKain walked with one out. So did Watwood. Quinn relieved Walberg, but was no improvement. He passed Mulleavy. Reynolds singled to right and McKain scored. Jolley whacked a single to left and two more went home.

Here's the way in which the Athletics put on their disturbing finish. McNair batted for Rommel and singled. McKain walked Bishop, who was forced by Haas. Cochrane was safe on Mulleavy's fumble, McNair scoring. Simmons poked a single through short and Haas tallied. Lyons then appeared. He forgot himself on his first pitch and wound up, so the runners pulled a double steal, putting themselves in position to tie the score on a single. Foxx, however, grounded out, Cochrane scoring, and the affair broke up with Miller popping to short.

SENATORS SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER WITH INDIANS

Burnett, Cleveland Third Baseman, Injured.

Cleveland, O., July 19.—[Special.]—The Indians and Senators divided today's double header, Cleveland winning the first behind the steady pitching of Wesley Ferrell, 5 to 2. Carl Fischer and Irving Hadley hurled for the visitors. The Senators won the second, 17 to 4.

In the nightcap, Fred Marberry had a rather easy time of it as his mates scored 11 runs in the third and fourth innings. Johnny Burnett, Cleveland's youthful third baseman, suffered a fractured wrist in the first game, and will be lost to the team for the remainder of the season. He was hurt when a ball hurled by Pitcher Carl Fischer struck him. Score:

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune News Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 19.—Dazzy Vance was proud enough today to think he could come back after a day's rest and get even with the Cubs for the spanking the boys gave him in the thirteenth inning of Thursday's Chicago victory.

But he failed ignominiously, and, moreover, dragged his ancient battery pal, Hank Deberry with him. The Cubs made it four out of five against Brooklyn by winning, 5 to 4, and went into a virtual tie for first place.

Three of the five Cub runs were made in the sixth purely off Vance's pitching. Up till that time he had been nursing a 1 to 0 lead supplied by Babe Herman's homer in the first inning. Then English tripled and, after Cuyler had lined out, Hack Wilson, once Dazzy's favorite victim, made the score 2 to 1 in favor of the Cubs by knocking the ball over the right field wall for his 26th homer of the year. But that wasn't all. Stephenson followed with his third hit, a single, and, after Grimm had been retired, Hartnett drove him home with a double.

Vance Flees Scene.

Vance, notorious as a front runner, held on for a while, but in the eighth, when he saw Wilson coming up swinging three bats and grinning fiendishly, he rammed his glove in his pocket and dashed to the dugout.

Then it became Deberry's turn to suffer. For several years Hank has been in the majors just to catch Dazzy. When Dazzy went, the Brooklyn fans opened a brutal razz and it obviously rattled Hank from the outset. The punishment showed definitely, however, when Hank, in trying to complete a double play which would have retired the side, threw the ball to the right field wall, allowing two runs to scamper home.

The Robins rose up in the last of the eighth and made three runs, so it wouldn't be amiss to say that the famed team of Vance and Deberry lost the game single handed.

Osborn pitched a great game until the eighth inning, allowing only three scattered hits up till that exciting session. Teachout and Root were superb in relief rôles.

Open Against Giants Today.

The Cubs came to Brooklyn four days ago trailing by three games. Tonight they go to New York tied for first on a games won and lost basis and with a percentage of .586, as compared with the Robins' .590, the difference being due to the fact the Robins have played four fewer games than the Cubs. The Cubs have won two

CARDINALS HAND GIANTS DOUBLE DEFEAT, 4-1, 8-4

Mancuso's Homer Wins 2d for St. Louis.

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—Atoning for their collapse under a four run lead in the final inning yesterday, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Giants twice, 4 to 1 and 8 to 4, before 35,000 fans at the Polo Grounds, dragging New York back to within a game of themselves in the league standings. With Jess Haines holding the Giants safe in the first game the Cards made their hits off Bill Walker count and won, 4 to 1.

In the second battle St. Louis staged a four run eighth inning rally, featured by Mancuso's homer with two on. Hafey drove out a homer in the ninth to clinch the victory. Scores:

PHILLIES, REDS DIVIDE.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 19.—[Special.]—The last place Phillies defeated the Cincinnati Reds in the final game of today's double header, 4 to 1, after losing the first contest, 10 to 3.

Larry Benton, ex-Giant, won his second straight game from the Phils, scattering the ten hits made off his right hand shoots in the opening battle. Claude Willoughby pitched his best game of the year in the nightcap, holding the Rhinelanders scoreless until the ninth inning. Bob Meusel, former Yank, made four of the Reds' seven hits. Scores:

PIRATES, 9; BRAVES, 4.

Boston, Mass., July 19.—[Special.]—Although outhit Pittsburgh made it four out of five this afternoon, beating the Braves, 9 to 4. The Pirates put the game on ice in the fourth when they landed on Smith for five runs on two hits, one error, a hit batsman, and a base on balls. At this point he was relieved by Wee Willie Sherdel, who held them to one run thereafter. Brame yielded eleven hits, but kept them scattered. Score:

Robins Buy Former Yank Hurler from Mudhens

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 19.—[U.P.]—Freddy Heimach, former New York Yankee pitcher, now with Toledo of the American association, has been obtained by the Brooklyn Robins.

Homeward Bound

Sammy Mandell returns from New York, where he lost his lightweight title to Al Singer. He left immediately for his home in Rockford.

3,000 Greet Sammy

Rockford, Ill., July 19.—(AP)—Sammy Mandell, though deposed as lightweight boxing champion by Al Singer in New York Thursday night, still retains his hold on his following here. More than 3,000 persons gathered at the depot to meet him tonight when he returned from New York. Cheers, automobile horns, and firebells provided expression for their feelings.

Cubs Make It 4 Out of 5 by Beating Robins

more games than the Robins and they have lost two more.

The boys will open a five game series against the Giants at the Polo grounds tomorrow. The set will include a double header Tuesday. Malone will pitch for the Cubs. In their present exuberance, they don't care who pitches for the Giants.

In each of the first two innings the Cubs got a runner to second, but to no avail. In the first inning, Cuyler was hit by a pitched ball and ran to second for his 22d theft of the year. Wilson supplied the third out with a tap to Vance. Stephenson opened the second with a double off the right field wall, but Grimm and Hartnett fanned and Beck popped to Deberry.

Herman Gets to Osborn.

Brooklyn made only one hit in the first three innings, but it was Herman's homer, a nice rainbow over the right field wall with two out in the first.

Stevie got his second double and the Cubs' second hit with two out in the fourth, but he again died on second, for Grimm tapped to Bissonette for the third out. Herman made the second hit off Osborn with one out in the fourth, but it was followed immediately by a double play in which Beck played a stellar role.

In the fifth Hartnett led off with a futile triple. It was a great smash off the wall in center field. Beck was called out on strikes. Osborn grounded to Bissonette, and Hartnett was out at the plate. Gabby's disappointment was tempered, perhaps, by the fact that in the collision at the plate, Umpire Stark was sent sprawling on his shoulder blades.

English Starts Big Sixth.

And now comes the detail of the big sixth: English started it with a triple to deep right center and held on while Cuyler lined to Wright. Vance's first two pitches to Wilson were called strikes, but when Dazzy laid in the next one, Hack smacked it over the right field wall, scoring English ahead of him. Stephenson got his third hit, a single to center. Then Grimm sent Frederick to the edge of the stand in left center to grab his fly. Hartnett doubled to left center, scoring Stevie, but was out trying to stretch it into a triple.

The Cubs' eighth was pathetic in more ways than one. English started it with a single to left and Cuyler walked. Old Dazzy saw Hack coming up with his bats and fled the premises. When Vance went out, the crowd started riding Deberry. Phelps went in and walked Wilson, filling the bases. Stephenson forced English at the plate, and Grimm forced Cuyler at the plate, but in trying to complete a double play, the hard ridden Deberry threw the ball to the right field wall, Wilson and Stephenson scoring and Grimm pulling up at third. Hartnett popped to Wright.

Root Wades Through Robins.

While the ancient battery deserved sympathy in the first of the eighth, the same cannot be said of their teammates on their showing in the last of the same inning. Bressler batted for Deberry and walked and Flowers, who batted for Phelps, singled to left, Bressler stopping at second. Frederick popped to Beck, but Gilbert tripled to left center, scoring Bressler and Flowers. Herman fanned, but Boone doubled to right center, scoring Gilbert. So the score was 5 to 4, and the tying run was on second. Teachout relieved Osborn and made Bissonette fly to Wilson.

Root pitched the last inning. Wright struck out. Pinch Hitter Hendrick fouled to Hartnett, and Lopez fanned.

YANKEES POUND BROWNS HURLERS FOR 13-7 VICTORY

Lazzeri and Goslin Clout Homers in Ninth.

St. Louis, Mo., July 19.—(AP)—Pounding three St. Louis pitchers for 17 hits, the New York Yankees defeated the Browns, 13 to 7, today, avenging yesterday's defeat and winning the series, 3 to 1.

Collins, Kimsey and Holshauser worked for St. Louis and none was effective against the Yankee slugging. The Yanks scored five runs in the seventh to clinch the victory and added three more in the ninth. Pennock started for the Yanks but gave way to Johnson in the second when the Browns scored four runs. Ruffing finished the game effectively.

Lazzeri and Goslin hit home runs in the ninth. The former accounting for two runs and the latter for three.

STORMS HOLD UP LIPTON YACHT AT ISLE OF WIGHT

GOSPORT, England, July 19.—[U.P.]—Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, Shamrock V, challenger for the America's cup, started for the United States today, but got no farther than Ryde, on the Isle of Wight, when storms at sea and in the channel caused the craft to anchor for the night.

The start was made amid great enthusiasm from thousands of people on shore and on yachts at Cowes, and in the Solent, who cheered the trim, green craft as it glided away in quest of the cup which has been in the United States since 1851.

Sir Thomas Lipton, ill at his home near London, could not be present to witness the departure of the yacht which he had pronounced the best that English craftsmanship and English money could produce.

A half gale was blowing, necessitating a towing yacht as far as Spithead, where instruments were given their final checking, sails were hoisted and Shamrock V. rode away free before the wind. When the Ryde pier was reached the storm had reached such proportions that the Shamrock hove to, dropped anchor and word was sent ashore that she would remain there for the night.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime no matter the size of the rupture, and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. "The Spermatic Shield-Complex" in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 747247, No 1237709 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method of operation and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. See Booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure."

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

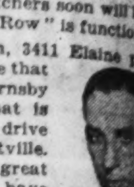
The Question.

Do you think Rogers Hornsby will help the Cubs?

The Answer.

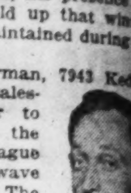
Louis Rosenfeld, 134 North La Salle street, lawyer—The return of Rogers Hornsby surely will enable the Cubs to fight their way to the top and keep them there when the curtain descends this fall. I believe that within a few weeks the champs will be roosting on the top rung and the Rajah will be hitting near .400.

Wenzel J. Love, 6551 North Mozart street, broker — The Cubs will be back in their old stride when Hornsby gets back into the lineup. His timely hitting and great fielding is certainly needed now. National league pitchers soon will know that "Murderers' Row" is functioning.



Joseph Eissman, 3411 Elaine place, attorney—I believe that the return of Hornsby will add just what is lacking in their drive toward Pennantville. His hitting and great fielding always have had an inspirational value.

Herman P. Scher, 6336 North Rockwell street, counselor—Since when can't a .375 hitter help a team? The Rajah socked it with an ailing heel, and he undoubtedly will aid the club. Moreover, his presence will build up that winning spirit the Cubs maintained during last season.



Edward M. Herman, 7943 Kedvale avenue, bond salesman—The answer to that question is the 1930 National league flag again will wave over Wrigley field. The Cubs certainly will be hard to beat when the Rajah gets back in the lineup. His absence has been felt in the pinches.

BLUE LARKSPUR, CHAMPION 3 YEAR OLD OF 1929, BREEZES HOME IN ARLINGTON CUP RACE AS CROWD OF 25,000 SWELTERS. Jockey Jimmy Smith pilots Bradley colt to victory by three lengths. Petee Wrack is just good enough to get his nose into the picture. Toro wound up third, Sun Beau fourth and Reveille Boy, American Derby winner, last. Blue Larkspur took the lead from Petee Wrack at the last turn and went on to win the mile and quarter struggle in 2:03 4-5, which equaled Gallant Fox's time in the Classic.

FADS CAPTURES 3 CHAMPIONSHIPS AT FT. SHERIDAN

Fads, 7 year old bay gelding owned by Ralph J. Hines of Chicago, yesterday won three outstanding horse show championships at the closing session of a two day exhibition at Fort Sheridan. Fads captured the 1930 grand hunter championship of the North Shore circuit, the officers' challenge cup, and the Fort Sheridan hunter championship.

Ridden by Miss Elizabeth Chase, Fads led a band of 45 in the challenge cup event. Behind her came Maj. Harry D. Chamberlin, riding Tan King, which took the cup two years ago. Top Weight, property of Col. Pierce, and entered with Good Friday, winner of last year's cup, took third prize. Good Friday failed to stay with the leaders. John T. Pirie's Irish Lad won fourth prize.

Thompson Horse Second.

Winning second prize in the Fort Sheridan hunter championship and the 1930 grand hunter was Flying Andy, owned and ridden by John R. Thompson of Chicago. Flying Andy won the reserve champion title in both events. Thompson also rode his 6 year old gelding to victory in the Corinthian class, feature event of the morning.

Miss America, member of the United States Army Olympic team, took the $250 jumpers' stake. Twenty-six competed. Miss America was ridden by Lieut. Thompson. Joe Aleshire, Lieut. Gordon Rogers up, won second prize, and Rolla Reed, owned by Chester Baird and ridden by Miss Elizabeth Chase, won third prize. Jumping Jack was fourth.

Army Team in Exhibition.

A former United States army horse, Pathfinder, owned by Miss Frances Richardson of Wheaton, won the amateur owners' jumping event, leading a field of 59. Miss Richardson also rode Pathfinder to second prize in the Corinthian classic. The officers' pair jumping class was won by Arabella and Antere.

The United States Army Olympic riding team, under the direction of Maj. Harry D. Chamberlin, staged an exhibition. The horses in the team are Tan Bark, Miss America, Muskogee, Dick Waring, and Babe Wortham. An exhibition of bareback riding also was given by Troop A, 14th cavalry. Results:

Jumpers, touch and out—Won by Rolla Reed; Flying Andy, second; Craps, third; Golden Prince, fourth.

Signal cart, one mile—Won by Molly; Logan, second; Dock, third; Blackie, fourth.

1930 Grand Hunter championship—Won by Fads; Flying Andy, second.

AIDAN ROARK OFF BRITISH TEAM IN FINAL POLO TEST

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

MALMESBURY, England, July 19.—[Special.]—Aidan Roark is not included in England's lineup for the final international trial match which will be played at the Beaufort club near here Wednesday.

The lineup, which Capt. Charles Tremayne announced tonight, probably will be the final selection for the international contests at Meadowbrook. These are Tremayne's selections for Wednesday: Capt. Richard George, No. 1; Gerald Balding, No. 2; Capt. Pat Roark, No. 3; Lewis Lacey, back.

The rest in Wednesday's match will be a team of the 17th and 21st lancers, winners of the army polo championship every year since the war except 1927.

The Lancers' four will be B. B. Cookes, No. 1; Desmond Mill, No. 2; Hugh Walford, No. 3; Col. Vivian Lockett, back. The army men play in combination so well that they will show up any weak points in England's armor.

CANADIAN POLO 4 INVADE U. S. FOR NORTHWEST MEET

Fort Snelling, Minn., July 19.—(AP)—Polo activities in the northwest took on an international tinge today as the Winnipeg team wound up practice preliminary to the annual northwest polo torunament starting tomorrow. The Canadian team will compete with five others from Lake Forest, Ill., Pierre, S. D., Fort Snelling and the twin cities for the famous Sifton and Northwest trophies.

The Canadians are here for the first time in four years in an attempt to capture the northwest title from the Pierre quartet, last years winners. The series of matches will start tomorrow and the end with the finals July 27.

Winnipeg will open the tournament against the Fort Snelling Blacks of the Third U. S. Infantry. Monday St. Paul's civilian team will cross mallets with the Pierre four. A special challenge match between two teams yet unannounced is planned for Tuesday and the Onwentsia club team from Lake Forest clashes with Minneapolis Wednesday.

WANT TO TRY THIS?

You perhaps wouldn't want to trade places with the soldiers forming the hurdle, but they don't mind because they are confident Lieut. James B. Quill and his horse will go through their performance without a slip. This was one of the exhibitions which enlivened the Fort Sheridan horse show yesterday.

BACK LOG WINS HAROLD STAKES ON LATONIA TURF

Latonia, Ky., July 19.—(AP)—Gallagher and Combs showed a smart pair of two year olds today, when Back Log and Oswego finished one and two, in the forty-eighth running of the historic Harold stakes at Latonia.

H. Fisher got Back Log away from the barrier a length in front of the large field. With that advantage he was never headed for the five and one-half furlongs. Oswego trailed his stablemate throughout and managed to stave off the rush of R. W. Collins' Don Leon in the homeward drive.

The Gallagher-Combs entry was installed the favorite in the mutuel machines, but paid $5.74 for a $2 mutuel ticket. The one-two combination added $7,460 to the purses of its owners while Don Leon earned $1,000 for running third and Aerial Price saved his entrance fee with fourth.

Foreman Gets Decision in Third When Zivic Stalls

TORONTO, Ont., July 19.—(AP)—The 10 round bout between Al Foreman of Montreal and Pete Zevic, Pittsburgh veteran lightweight, was halted in the third round last night by Referee Lou Marsh, who disqualified Zivic for not trying and awarded the decision to Foreman.

WOMAN BEATS MEN IN KING'S RIFLE SHOOT

BISLEY, England, July 19.—(AP)—A woman who drove an army motor car during the world war, Miss Marjorie Foster, defeated many of the crack marksmen of the British empire to win the king's prize for rifle shooting on the famous Bisley ranges today.

Not only is Miss Foster the first woman ever to achieve this feat, but she is the only member of her sex ever to place among the final 100 competitors in the event. She is the manager of a chicken farm near Bisley. Her score of 280 was a point better than that of Lieut. A. E. Eccles of the Seafoard Highlanders, who shot 279.

Miss Foster won a cash prize of $1,250

Moller Guest of Honor at Notre Dame Club Golf Meet

Larry Moller, Notre Dame senior, runnerup in the National Intercollegiate Golf tournament last month, will be the guest of honor at the annual golf tournament of the Notre Dame club of Chicago to be held next Thursday at the St. Andrew's Golf club, West Chicago. Edward W. Gould, '23, is in charge of the arrangements.

QUESTIONNAIRE IS VICTORIOUS IN YONKERS STAKE

Beats Flying Heels by 4 Lengths.

New York, July 19.—[Special.]—James Butler's Questionnaire set at rest all doubts of his superiority over Gifford A. Cochrane's Flying Heels when he beat him by four lengths before 10,000 persons at Empire City this afternoon in the Yonkers handicap. Striving gallantly, although soundly beaten, Flying Heels landed second place. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Comstockery was third.

Questionnaire defeated Flying Heels by half a length last Saturday in the Mount Vernon handicap when he had a six pound weight advantage. Today Questionnaire was as good as 9 to 5, while Flying Heels was favorite at 7 to 5.

Around the clubhouse bend Flying Heels and Questionnaire were nose and nose. All the way down the back stretch and around the bend these positions were maintained. A furlong of hard running down the straightaway and Flying Heels gave way. Bill Kelsay whipped to see if Flying Heels would respond and he did, but soon Kelsay stopped for he saw it was hopeless to try to hold Questionnaire. The time was 1:47 1-5.

CANOEISTS END COMPETITION FOR SAILING PRIZES

Members of the Lincoln Park Boat club, Columbia Canoe club, and South Shore Canoe club finished their week of competition in sailing races for the Lipton, Clinch, and Gardner cups in the basin off the Naval armory at the foot of Randolph strteet yesterday. The events were sponsored by the western division of the American Canoe association.

In the Lipton cup races, J. B. Bergeson, South Shore Canoe club, was first; A. C. Ebbeson, Columbia Canoe club, second, and Henry Worthman, Columbia, third. Bergeson also won first in the two other events, winning the Clinch cup and the western division championship race in the Gardner series.

Le Roy Coombs, Lincoln Park Boat club, took second in the Clinch cup event with Worthman picking up another third. The two reversed their positions in the Gardner cup race, Worthman taking second and Coombs third.

HOLLAND TAKES LEAD IN WORLD CHESS TOURNEY

HAMBURG, Germany, July 19.—(AP)—With the exception of two unfinished games, nine rounds of the team tournament of the International Chess federation were completed today. Holland, with 25 points, assumed the lead. Poland was tied with Germany for second place. England is fourth, and Hungary, Austria, and the United States are in a triple tie for fifth place.

The Americans, in their match with Sweden in the ninth round, came through with a 2-2 tie. They also won an adjourned match with Rumania in the eighth round, 2½ to 1½. Poland suffered its first defeat in the ninth round, losing to Holland by 2½ to 1½.

Canadian Davis Cup Player Retains Ontario Net Title

HAMILTON, Ont., July 19.—Gilbert Nunns, Canadian Davis cup player, retained his Ontario amateur tennis championship today by defeating Ted Ludlow of the University of California, 6-1, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

William Wrigley Jr. Sees His First Horse Race

Disinguished personages who saw the Cup inaugural at Arlington Park yesterday were State Senator Richard Barr, who was a luncheon guest of Charles A. McCulloch, chairman of the board of directors of the Arlington Park Jockey club; Edward Riley Bradley, Maj. John F. Wall of the remount division of the United States army; Col. John Sullivan of New Orleans, and Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, the weekend house guest of Warren Wright, Arlington director, came over with Mr. Wright, Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Charles A. McCulloch. It was Governor's day and Gov. Emmerson presented the cup to Owner Bradley.

William Wrigley Jr., boss of the Cubs, who was elected to the Arlington directorate six weeks back along with Samuel Insull, saw his first horse race yesterday afternoon. Other directors present were Silas H. Strawn, John R. Thompson, Lawrence F. Stern, William M. Wright, Gen. Roy D. Keehn, Edward N. Hurley, Charles F. Glore, Leonard S. Florsheim, Edward H. D'Ancona, Albert D. Lasker, Vincent Bendix Weymouth Kirkland, Earle H. Reynolds, Charles S. Pearce, Thomas E. Wilson, and Britton I. Budd.

A visitor from New York was Mrs. R. Penn Smith, proprietress of the Rolling Plains stable, of which Sandy and Milkman are the most useful members. She is a sister of William Averill Harriman and Mrs. Robert Livingston Gerry.

Still another New York visitor was Mrs. Victor Emanuel, whose husband owns the Dorwood stable. Mrs. Emanuel is in the sport on her own this year with that stout selling plater, Sun Forward, as her principal bread winner.

Thomas T. Taggart, of French Lick, Ind., brought a party of friends to the inclosure dining room for luncheon. All supported Blue Larkspur.

Distinguished breeders among those present were Bernard B. Jones, whose Audley Farm stud of Northern Virginia has given Gallant Knight to this season's American racing, and Hal Prince Headley, among leaders in production in Kentucky.

Display looked like another Arlington handicap possibility as he galloped a mile in 1:42 flat, late in the forenoon after the going had been cut up considerably by earlier workouts.

Peter Coyne, trainer of the main division of the stable of Joseph E. Widener, has gone to Kentucky to look over 28 yearlings, bred by the president of the Westchester Racing association, which will be racing next season as 2 year olds. The Kentuckians are having a hard time this year. Almost two months of hot weather has burned up pasturage everywhere and dried up creeks and springs.

In retrospect the performances of Gallant Fox and Gallant Knight in the second Arlington Classic looked better than ever yesterday as Ned O. turned seven furlongs in 1:23 1-5, setting a new track mark in front of Pansy Walker, High Foot, Dark Entry, Maya and Morsel in the Rockford handicap. Ned O. was floundering hopelessly behind Gallant Fox and Gallant Knight for every jump of the Arlington Classic mile and a quarter. And it takes a pretty good horse to beat Pansy Walker this summer.

Arc Light's race in the steeplechase was his first since he defeated Beezlebug, Crumpler, Huffy, Rubigney, Brieul, and Red Rocket II. at Pimlico last Nov. 14.—in the Manly Memorial steeplechase, picking up $8,775. A son of Archaic and Felicity, Arc Light is a half brother of Sporting Blood, winner in 1921 of a Latonia championship and a Traverse.

Lativich and Live Oak, which are to bear the silks of Herbert Bayard Swope and George Clark in the Arlington handicap next Saturday, worked well yesterday. Lativich breezed a mile in 1:55 3-5, Live Oak a mile and a quarter in 2:04 3-5. Live Oak has been working briskly right along, but he hasn't been reacting to his work.

While Blue Larkspur did not crack any records when he won the cup, three other track records were shattered during the afternoon and another was tied. Arc Light, Joseph E. Widener's jumper, hung up a 2 mile steeplechase track record when he was around the course in 3:57. Ned O broke the seven furlong mark when he beat Pansy Walker running the distance in 1:23 1-5. Comet broke the mile and a half record as he won the last race. His time was 2:32 2-5. My Dandy tied the six furlong mark when he won the Mount Vernon purse in 1:10 3-5.

CARACCIOLA IS VICTOR IN IRISH GRAND PRIX RACE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, July 19.—Rudolf Caracciola scored a sensational victory in the Irish International Grand Prix senior road race in Phoenix park today. His average speed was 85.88 miles per hour over a 300 mile course which he covered in three hours 28 minutes and 24 seconds. The Italian, Campari, was second with 78 miles per hour, and Karl Howe was third.

Caracciola, who is the most daring driver in Europe, drove brilliantly and magnificently, time and again missing dangerous collisions by inches. The biggest thrill occurred towards the end of the race, shortly after a downpour of rain, when Caracciola, refusing to slow down, skidded while traveling 100 miles per hour. His car spun around like a top five times. When it straightened up he continued his way toward victory amidst the cheers of the spectators.

BEST HORSES AT ARLINGTON STAY FOR HAWTHORNE

18 Day Meeting Booked for Aug. 4-23.

Several leading racing establishments now at Arlington Park will stay over for the 18 day summer meeeting that starts at Hawthorne Aug. 4 and runs through till Aug. 23.

According to Joseph A. Murphy, general manager, the entries for the stakes for the summer meeting have exceeded all expectations and unless all signs fail some new records for attendance should be established.

The Chicago Business Men's Racing association officers have remodeled the plant and made improvements that are complete in every detail. Officers of the plant are steadily improving it at each meeting until today it stands as one of the prettiest and coziest in the country.

Hawthorne has been exceedingly lucky in being able to get the pick of the older division for the $25,000 Hawthorne handicap which will be decided on Aug. 9. All the best horses in training have entered with the possible exception of Gallant Fox, and it is doubtful if this three year old champion wants to contest with the older brigade which will be running at Hawthorne.

The fact that Blue Larkspur, Misstep, Sun Beau, Reiville Boy, Lady Broadcast, Pigeon Hole, Pansy Walker, Paul Bunyan, Toro, and a flock of others have entered the Hawthorne handicap indicates another great race. The weights for the $25,000 handicap will be announced on Aug. 2.

Hawthorne will introduce an innovation at the coming meeting when two pony boys will be used in escorting the racers to the post. One boy will lead the parade while the other will be one-eighth of a mile ahead of the field to intercept any horse that may escape the control of the jockey. Another innovation will be the setting aside of individual box seats and a section of the reserved seats at nominal cost, so that on crowded days patrons may be assured of a reserved seat when leaving the stand to go to the mutuel department.

READING WOMAN BEATS MRS. HURD FOR GOLF TROPHY

Groton, Conn., July 19.—[U. P.]—Miss Edith Quier, young Reading, Pa., golfer, today won the Griswold trophy for the second consecutive year, defeating Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia, former American, English, French and Canadian champion, 4 and 2, in the 18 hole final at Shanecosset Country club.

The defeat prevented Mrs. Hurd from winning permanent possession of the trophy. Mrs. Hurd, who won the cup in 1927 and 1928, lost to Miss Quier in the semi-finals last year.

Tribune Book Tells How to Protect Birds

BY BOB BECKER.

A happy family of catbirds which nested near our home this spring had their lovely songs hushed a few days ago when a house cat stalked the young and practically wiped out the chicks. There have been several of these casualties up our way, because so far this cat has led a charmed life in spite of an armed resistance against the marauder.

Uses Poisoned Eggs.

Up in north eastern Wisconsin we know of one outdoor enthusiast who in order to secure a fair percentage of returns on the mallard hatchings on his place, had to fight the crows with poisoned eggs. Nest after nest was raided by the black "pirates" until they fell for artificial nests of poisoned eggs.

These are just two examples of the constant fight which useful birds [both song and game] must wage day in and day out against their enemies. This problem of controlling vermin is an interesting and important one. It is treated at length in THE TRIBUNE's new bird book, "Birds and Birdhouses," which went on sale a few days ago. This new handbook on the feathered inhabitants of Chicagoland sells for twenty-five cents and may be obtained from the public service office of this newspaper at 1 South Dearborn street. Copies will be sent by mail if the purchaser will remit 28 cents to the public service office.

It's Well Illustrated.

"Birds and Birdhouses" is illustrated with many plates made from both drawings and photographs of birds, nesting boxes, traps used in reducing bird enemies, winter feeding contrivances, etc.

One of the chapters in this new page book gives many practical tips to the surburbanite, estate owners and farmer who wishes to combat roving house cats, great horned owls, crows and other vermin which inflict heavy damage upon pheasants, quail and song birds.

LOWEST PRICED EIGHT IN THE WORLD

PRICES on the new Marmon-Roosevelt straight-eight have been reduced as much as $180.

Not a clean-up on obsolete models but an attractive new price on Marmon's new 1930 low-priced straight-eight—introduced last spring.

It is the improved, refined and more luxurious successor to the "first straight-eight in the $1000 field"—the car which set the world's non-stop endurance record, which won the Pikes Peak Climb in its class, which traveled 48 states in 30 days (average 600 miles per day) with a repair cost of eight cents!

In addition—remember that the new Marmon-Roosevelt is guaranteed for a full year instead of the usual ninety days.

Of course you want your new car to be an eight. A Marmon-Roosevelt is the only time-proved, low-priced eight in the world, backed by four years' experience building straight-eights exclusively. Try it today for its extra performance, extra comfort and its extra value.

Tribune Book Tells How to Protect Birds

BY BOB BECKER.

A happy family of catbirds which nested near our home this spring had their lovely songs hushed a few days ago when a house cat stalked the young and practically wiped out the chicks. There have been several of these casualties up our way, because so far this cat has led a charmed life in spite of an armed resistance against the marauder.

DEADLINE NEARS FOR ENTRIES IN TRIBUNE SWIM

Nominations Pass 900; Lists Close Tomorrow.

SWIMMING ENTRY BLANK.

Please enter me in The Tribune amateur swimming races to be held in the Lincoln park lagoon Sunday, July 27. My parent's or guardian's signature attests I have his permission to compete and that The Tribune will not be held responsible in case of accident.

Name ....

Address ....

My age is..............................

Boys' division..............................

Girls' division..............................

Parent or guardian ....

Print name plainly in pencil. Place cross after division. Entries close with Wilfrid Smith, Sports Department, Chicago Tribune, tomorrow.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Chicago's boys and girls have two more days in which to enter THE TRIBUNE's 100 yard swimming tests next Sunday in Lincoln park. The entry lists close tomorrow. All letters postmarked July 21 will be accepted.

Nine hundred entries have been received. Some of the swimmers are coming from as far as Champaign. Many have entered from suburban towns in Illinois and Indiana, but for the main, Chicago furnishes the contestants.

While several pools and parks have sent in a group entry list, individual entries account for the greater majority. Ninety per cent of these boys and girls are swimming in competition for the first time. And all, apparently wish to earn a TRIBUNE merit badge. These will be given to all who finish the 100 yard course.

Sixteen Prizes Offered.

In addition sixteen prizes are offered, four in each division. The four champions, two boys and two girls, will receive 12 inch statues of a swimmer. Second, third, and fourth places in each class will be awarded medals.

With the assurance that the entry list will total approximately 1,000, plans are being made to print 25,000 programs. These will be distributed without charge to those who attend the races. All contestants will be numbered and corresponding numbers will be provided for each swimmer. The number clerks will hand pass these to contestants beginning at noon. The first race starts at 2 o'clock.

Start Work Friday.

Oscar Knop, director of small parks and recreation for the Lincoln park system, will commence work Friday to prepare the lagoon for the swimmers. Two barges, the smaller 115 feet in length, will be moored across the lagoon 100 yards apart. Cord lines with wood floats will mark the 15 lanes for the swimmers. Each lane will be six feet wide, more than sufficient for a swimmer.

With 15 lanes no contestant will be forced to swim more than twice.

Four championship events of the Central A. A. U. will be held in conjunction with THE TRIBUNE's races. The best speed swimmers, men and women, in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, which compose the central division, will compete in the 100 yard free style races.

Two Diving Events.

The other events, the ten foot diving championships, for men and women, will be held from the finish barge. Each contestant is required to perform eleven dives, varying from the swan dive to the two and a half forward somersault.

Members of the Tribune Athletic association and leading swimming instructors and athletic directors will conduct the races. Frank W. Blankley, chairman of the national A. A. U. swimming committee, will referee. Sheldon Clark, vice president of the Lincoln park commission, is honorary referee.

Coen, Grant Clash Today in Net Final

Kansas City, Mo., July 19.—(AP)—The three ranking tennis players of the Missouri valley, with two easterners and a player from the old south, will compete tomorrow for the singles and doubles championships of the twenty-first annual national clay courts tennis tournament.

Championship pairings were determined today. Wilbur F. [Junior] Coen, Kansas City, advanced to the singles finals, with a straight set triumph over Herbert L. Bowman, New York City, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3. The defending doubles champions, Frederic Mercur, Harrisburg, Pa., and J. Gilbert Hall, Orange, N. J., defeated Frank Shields, New York, and Emmett Pare, Dayton, O., 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Coen to Meet Grant.

Coen will play Bryan Grant Jr., 19 year old Atlanta, Ga., star, and Mercur and Hall will meet Wray Brown, St. Louis, and Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines.

Grant went to the finals yesterday after a hard fought five set struggle with Bruce Barnes, Austin, Tex., and Brown and Coggeshall eliminated Fred Royer and Louis Thalheimer, Chicago in straight sets.

Coen and Bowman today played three sets of orthodox tennis, with no spectacular shots to arouse the calm gallery. The doubles play was more entertaining, but both teams were erratic and the tennis displayed was far from championship caliber.

Bowman Ranks 17th in U. S.

Bowman's straight set elimination was a surprise, as he is the 17th ranking player in the nation. Coen played perhaps his best tennis of the tournament and his accurate placements could not be equaled by the New Yorker, who appeared sluggish and reluctant to exert himself.

TUNNEY GIVES APPROVAL TO NO FOUL RULE

Charleston, W. Va., July 19.—[U.P.]—Gene Tunney believes the New York "no foul" rule would be a success if restrictions were adopted to prevent a return to the old "everything goes" type of fighting.

Tunney stopped off here between trains yesterday while en route to White Sulphur Springs and discussed current pugilistic affairs with reporters.

The former heavyweight champion also said he regarded W. L. "Young" Stribling as the outstanding contender to win the heavyweight championship. He said it was a "shame the Sharkey-Schmeling fight ended in a foul."

"The tendency to hit low is Sharkey's main fault," he said. "He loses his head at the crucial moment."

SUTTER TAKES LONGWOOD BOWL TENNIS TOURNEY

Brookline, Mass., July 19.—(AP)—Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, intercollegiate champion, came from behind to win the 38th Longwood Bowl singles tennis tournament here today from Sidney C. Wood, young New Yorker, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

Sutter was unable to make many earned points, but his steadiness forced Wood either to net or out enough points to lose the required three sets.

Army Beats Elkwood, 15-2, in Junior Polo Tourney

Rumson, N. J., July 19.—(AP)—The U. S. Army polo four defeated the Elkwood club here this afternoon, 15-2, in a first round match for the national junior polo championship. Play in the tournament is limited to 20 goal teams, Army today being rated at 19 and Elkwood 16.

Beverly Wins Chicago Class B Tennis Title

Beverly Hills won the class B tennis championship of Chicago yesterday when it defeated the Chicago Town and Tennis club, 8 to 1, in the last dual match of the series on the Beverly courts.

TRACK OLD GUARD PASSES, BUT NEW STARS PLUG GAPS

U. S. Well Equipped for Clash with Britons.

If the United States retains its track and field championship in the fourth meet of the series with the British empire the stars developed in the last two years largely will be responsible for the victory. The two squads meet at Soldiers' field on the night of Aug. 27.

The first meet between the nations was held in 1920 at London following the Olympic games. The events, under the auspices of the Achilles club, were composed largely of relay races to promote team competition and each event counted one point. This resulted in a tie.

Six Relays Listed.

The competition was repeated following the Olympic games of 1924 and 1928 and the United States won 11 to 3 and 8 to 6, respectively.

Six of the 14 events scheduled next month are relay races. They are the 400 yard relay, one mile relay, 480 yard shuttle hurdle relay, four mile relay, two mile relay and one mile medley relay. The other track event is a three mile team race in which 12 men will participate. An eight lap steeplechase also is included.

The field events are the pole vault, shot put, hammer throw, high jump, broad jump and javelin throw. A special 100 yard dash will be held, but it will not count in the scoring.

Make Up Team at Pittsburgh.

The A. A. U. championships, which will be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 22 and 23, will determine the American team to meet the empire's invasion. And it will be the college stars who will win places on the team, for the two years since the last Olympics have found many of that winning aggregation retiring or losing their victorious form.

Lloyd Hahn, America's leading half miler at Amsterdam, has retired definitely. Joie Ray, once a star miler and who earned a berth on the 1928 squad as a competitor in the marathon, is through. Herman Phillips, finalist in the 400 meters in 1928, is now coaching at Butler university, and Ray Barbutti, winner of the race, probably will not essay a comeback at Pittsburgh after an unsatisfactory indoor campaign.

Four Sprinters on Shelf.

Jackson Scholz, Henry Cummings and Charley Paddock, who competed in the 200 meters at Amsterdam, and Bob McAllister, in the 100 meters, will not try for the American team.

John Romig, veteran of two Olympic meets, competing in the distance runs, and Dave Abbott, Illinois' national collegiate champion, have retired. Morgan Taylor, who finished third in the 400 meter hurdle race in the 1928 Olympics, will not try in his specialty, although Johnny Behr, his coach at the Illinois Athletic club, reports he will seek a place on the mile relay team. Taylor is training at the University of Illinois this summer.

All four place winners in the pole vault are through. They are Lee Barnes, Bill Droegemueller, Sabin Carr and Charles McGinnis. Bob King, winner of the high jump, is studying medicine and will not compete.

Newcomers to Carry On.

Despite these losses the younger stars will carry on. Pete Bowen, national collegiate quarter mile champion; Orval Martin, mile winner in the same meet; Tom Warne, victor in the pole vault; Leo Lermond, Boston A. A. miler; Ed Hamm, Olympic broad jump champion; Steve Anderson, University of Washington's great hurdler, and Lee Sentman, Illinois' ace in the barriers, will be the mainstays on the 1930 squad.

The National A. A. U. is sponsoring the meet under the jurisdiction of the committee on foreign relations. The executive committee is headed by Avery Brundage, president of the national association, and George Getz. Sheldon Clark is chairman of the finance committee which has underwritten the $25,000 expense.

BARTON DEFEATS LASCHE TO TAKE IOWA GOLF TITLE

Waterloo, Ia., July 19.—(AP)—Paul Barton, veteran Davenport golfer, won the Iowa amateur championship today by defeating Johnny Lasche, 16 year old Waterloo caddy, 4 to 2.

Barton stopped the march of the youth through the ranks of Iowa's golfing stars by his steady shooting over the final sixteen holes. Lasche held a one hole lead as they ended the first 18 and twice fought off Barton's bids for leadership before succumbing on the 26th, when Barton went one up.

The new champion then won the 27th, 30th and 34th, getting halves on the others. Lasche, apparently tired from his matches of the previous two days, when he defeated Art Bartlett, former trans-Mississippi champion and defending titleholder, and Bob McCrary, present wearer of the trans-crown, seemed off his game, while Barton, seasoned veteran of several state tournaments, was at the heighth of his form.

LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPIONS.

OLD-TIME ring followers profess to rate slightingly our present crop of lightweight boxers. That is not unnatural, for there is a certain glamour about the past which makes the heroes of yesteryear loom up as does Hercules compared to our modern strong men. The Wake has not seen Al Singer in action. However, we always enjoy watching Sammy Mandell in the ring, for we appreciate cleverness. Cleverness does not at this time draw as much attention (or gate receipts) from boxing fans as sockology.

Looking back through the list of lightweight champions within our memory, two stand out. They were Joe Gans and Benny Leonard. This is said with all due respect to Jimmy Britt, for not all can stand out. Jack McAuliffe, who retired undefeated in 1893, really was before our time. We did not see Kid Lavigne in his more important bouts.

Our reason for picking Gans and Leonard is because they had both cleverness and punching ability. It was a treat to watch Gans, colored, pick off blows in the air or on his forearms, to watch him sidestep or headslip. He was a master. And how Gans could hit, his blows carrying terrific power for the distance they traveled! Making weight bothered Gans eventually, and probably his reducing efforts were responsible for his death.

Benny Leonard was one of the greatest boxers the lightweight ranks have known. He also had punishment in his blows. That is, in our opinion, the ideal combination for a champion as contrasted with men of the Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast type, who won more by tearing in and taking punishment better than their opponents could take it. Nelson earned the ring nickname of "Durable Dane." Frank Erne, Willie Ritchie, and Freddy Welsh were all clever boxers, but without a devastating finishing punch, more like Sammy Mandell.

If boxing is boxing and not prize fighting—which, we understand, is against the law in all states—perhaps we may be pardoned for still liking to see two clever masters of the art of hit and getaway, even if they do not knock each other for a goal.

Easiest Shot in Golf.

We note where a contemporary credits us with the bon mot of "the easiest shot in golf is the conceded putt." Now, really, it is, but we had forgotten we said it. Possibly we're not so dumb in our golf, after all.

A Plea.

O, mother, you may scold me,
Condemn me, call me down,
Point out my faults, denounce my ways,
On all my vices frown.
Go tell the masses of my flaws,
My errors, all my sins,
Before my eyes. Say what you will,
Tell every one, my kins.
Go tell them that I cannot cook,
I cannot mend a sock,
My home would be an awful mess.
O, go ahead and knock.
Inform them, dear, of all the dirt,
How wild I am, untamed,
And say you think me moralless—
I shall not be ashamed!

There's just one thing I ask of you,
Dear mother, heaven forbid—
Don't tell them the cute tricks I pulled
When I was just a kid!

Do You Remember Way Back When:

"We he fellers" went out to the stockyards, armed with a piece of wire crooked at the end and mother's sewing machine screwdriver, to find bulls with copper rings in their noses, carefully hook the ring and draw the bulls close enough to the fence to unscrew the copper rings, which we proudly displayed to the girls and the "sissies"?—Billy O.

MAROON NINE TO SAIL AUG. 20 FOR GAMES IN JAPAN

Members of the University of Chicago baseball squad are practicing for their quadrennial trip to Japan. The Maroon squad will sail on Aug. 20, after playing en route to the Pacific coast, and will sail from Yokohama on Oct. 2, reaching San Francisco, Oct. 22. Games will be played in Tokio with Waseda, Keio, and Meiji universities and a trip to Osaka will be made to meet one of the three college nines in a series of games.

THERE'S APLENTY TO BE SAID ABOUT GLEN VIEW CLUB

Difficult Course Dates from 1850.

(Pictures in rotogravure section.)

(This is the second of a series of articles on golf clubs of the Chicago district.)

There are many angles from which golfers might discuss the Glen View club. They might speak of the brilliant players who make up its team. They might tell of the skill required to shoot par on the rolling fairways which are flanked by woods and crisscrossed by the north branch of the Chicago river.

They might grow eloquent over the vista which unfolds from the veranda of the clubhouse, which is itself a replica of what one might find in the most picturesque sections of rural England. Or they might consider the history of the club which has a connecting link with the early annals of Chicagoland.

Log Cabin Near 17th.

Set upon a hill near the 17th green is a log cabin which was built by the Dewes family between 1840 and 1850. From its doorway the pioneers used to shoot waterfowl as they came down into the river which is now one of the most formidable hazards of the course.

When this family grew and prospered they built a brick house a few hundred yards away and abandoned their little log hut. Then in 1897 they sold the dwelling, together with the surrounding 180 acres, to William Holabird, Frederic Arnd, and George P. Merrick, who formed a corporation called the Glen View Golf and Polo club. This name was changed in 1900 to the Glen View club. The price paid for the property was $18,000.

For a short time the Dewes home was used as a clubhouse until the new one was completed, in May 1897, at a cost of $18,000. Another $28,000 was spent in 1909 to enlarge the kitchen, dining room, and locker room and install steam heat and electric light.

Fire Destroys Clubhouse.

The brick house still stands near the 16th green, and in it lives Dr. William A. Pusey.

The clubhouse was almost entirely destroyed by fire on May 28, 1920, but a new and more beautiful structure was started in the following July and formally opened on May 7, 1921.

David A. Noyes, W. Irving Osborne, and Philip R. Shumway, who played on the course in 1897, still are regular members. Four others who played with them at that time have special memberships. They are Martin M. Gridley, George P. Merrick, Harry P. Pearsons, and Oliver T. Wilson.

Knowlton L. Ames, who won the club championship as long ago as 1904, still can be seen teeing off, and his son, John D. Ames, is captain of this year's team. Royal C. Vilas won the club championship last year.

River Crosses Fairways.

Among the foremost women players are Virginia and Ariel Vilas and Louise Fergus.

The Glen View team has won the championship of the North Shore league for the last two seasons. It is made up of Ira L. Couch, Jack Couch, E. M. Barnhart, Kenneth Burns, John Ames, Harry Bishop, Jack Vilas, R. C. Vilas, and Charles Yegge Jr.

Since the course was remodeled several years ago it is considered one of the most difficult in the Chicago district. Seven times on the last nine holes the river cuts across the fairways.

The club's biggest annual event is the invitational tournament knows as "Twa Days."

POLICE START TRAINING FOR ANNUAL MEET

With less than a month remaining until they meet in competition on the cinder paths of Soldiers' field, policemen of the city and south parks departments have started intensive training. A special series of track and field events has been arranged between the two departments as a feature of the ninth annual police field meet to be held Aug. 16 and 17.

Tuning up exercises also have been ordered for the mounted men who will participate in the drills which are a part of the police meet and for the motorcycle men, who will meet in polo contests.

Kenora Boat Club Wins Northwestern Regatta

KENORA, Ont., July 19.—(AP)—The Kenora Boat club today won the Northwestern International Rowing association's annual regatta for the first time in the local club's history. Kenora scored 133 points and won the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy, held last year by the Minnesota Boat club, St. Paul. The St. Paul entry was second today in points, with 87. The Winnipeg club was third, with 73.75 points.

Chicago Golfers Tie for First in Green Lake Meet

Green Lake, Wis., July 19.—[Special.]—The women's blind bogey nine hole meet at the Lawsonia Country club today was won by Mrs. Lawrence A. Wagner of Milwaukee, with a score of 85—40—45. The men's event, a medal play handicap of eighteen holes, was won by T. Shelby Black and Louis E. Yager, both of Chicago, who tied with a net score of 78.

Tigers Give Cash, Trade Two for Toronto Hurler

TORONTO, Ont., July 19.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs today announced the sale of Guy Cantrell, right handed pitcher, to the Detroit Tigers. The Toronto club is to receive cash, Pitcher Art Herring and an outfielder, preferably Eckhardt of the Beaumont Texas league club.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, July 19.—Some of the ball players in the major and minor leagues and some retired ball players who are unable to play in any leagues any more are strangely bitter on the subject of Florida real estate nowadays. It is a remarkable change, because I distinctly recall that in the boom times of 1924 and 1925 these boys were all enthusiastic about their holdings in Royal Terrace Heights and Versailles Gardens and East Poinsettia Manor and places with all such fancy and alluring names which had been palmetto flats only a short time before.

Just a few days ago old Joey Judge, first baseman of the Washington club, pressed the blotter on a check of his for $100 for taxes on his holdings down yonder and muttered a distinct swear word, indicating that he was deeply moved by his thoughts, because Joey doesn't express himself in swear words often.

Swears Once a Year; That's Taxes Time.

"Why, Joey," your correspondent exclaimed, "did you say that?"

"I did," Joey allowed. "I say one swear word every year. I say it when I write my check for the taxes on those lots on that island down by Tampa. I wish we hadn't ever trained in Tampa. I think our proprietor, Mr. Griffith, ought to reimburse all us boys for the sums we spent for lots down there, because he took us there in the line of our duty, and if we hadn't gone there the real estate salesmen wouldn't have ketched us.

"One ketched me one day after we had received our world series money. He took me out in a skiff and showed me where this island was going to be. There was a big scow anchored there with a long snout, like an elephant's nozzle, stirring around on the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico. This scow would breathe in the mud from the bottom and squirt it out on a little sand bar. Then the water and mud would slide back, but some of the mud would stick and you could see the sand bar getting bigger by the minute.

"The salesman hauled out a beautiful picture of a tropical island with yachts sailing all around it and people dancing on the terrace, with very appetizing drinks on the tables and with exclusive millionaires playing polo, golf, tennis, and all such expensive and exclusive sports all over the place.

Let Him in Because He's a Celebrity.

"He said it was my chance to get in on a great investment and he was only letting me in because I was a famous celebrity from the world series and they only wanted leading citizens because the place was going to be very exclusive. Just then the barge gave another grunt and squirted up some more land onto the bar, and he said that was just about where my lots would be, right in the center of everything. Moreover, he positively assured me that I could sell my lots for fifteen or twenty times the present price if I wished to do so, although he said, of course, a famous, wealthy and exclusive ballplayer like me probably would build a mansion on them instead of selling at any price.

"There is $14,000 of my money on those islands now, not counting the taxes I am paying every year when I use my annual swear word," Mr. Judge said, "and the whole thing was nothing but a deception because I haven't been able to sell the lots for fifteen or twenty times the price or even one times the price, and I assure you that if I could get half the price today I would be very pleased to consider the matter with the utmost seriousness."

There are a large number of others who will understand the state of emotion which moves Mr. Judge to indulge in his annual swear. Walter Johnson states that he also bought a modest expanse of gray, barren baybottom on the same island, paying approximately $15,000 for the same, but he is even more rueful about it all because there came a day down there while the boom was still booming when a gentleman walked up and implored him to sell him one of his lots for $17,000.

Invests in Hotel, Millionaire's Rendezvous.

Not only that, but Mr. Johnson invested some further shillings in a hotel which was certain to be the winter rendezvous of all the most refined millionaires of the eastern seaboard and something seems to have happened to direct these millionaires elsewhere these last few winters.

Altogether, I reckon, the ball players must have invested $250,000 of actual baseball money in Florida subdivisions during those days, when 14 of 16 major league teams and half a dozen of the high minors were training in the state. Some of them paid very little money down, and when the boom went boom they quietly defaulted their notes. Whereupon the land reverted to the last previous owners and also to its old primitive state, with the sidewalks lost in weed growth and vines and the rattlesnakes sunning on deserted pavements, purring with their tail buttons.

Will Doak, the spitball pitcher, laid off his regular employment with the Brooklyn Robins for a whole season, I remember, passing up some $15,000 of practical pay, to spread out wide and important as a real estate dealer and promoter. I haven't heard how Mr. Doak's investments turned out, but if his were like all the rest, no doubt he repents the season that he didn't pitch ball while he still was able to.

Will Klem, the umpire, also set up in business as a dealer over on the Miami shore, and the wreckage bruised him somewhat in the region of his financial nerve when the boom exploded. Old Mr. Klem was a dealer in a large way, and at one stage of the insanity it was common talk in the baseball colony that Will was a millionaire, as maybe he was, on paper.

Miller Huggins, the late manager of the Yankees, became a citizen of St. Petersburg and carried on a lively commerce in footage, acreage, and suburban cottage for a long spell, but Mr. Huggins was a very shrewd man, and I doubt that he held his lands too long. He could anticipate the break of a ball game, and his perceptive mind may have noticed that the real estate men were bearing down too hard just before the end.

Bucky Harris, then manager of the Washington team, bought lands at Lakeland, and also joined a syndicate to promote a town at Homestead, on the east coast, but in the latter case it may be that he, like Walter Hagen and some others, merely got a price for the use of his name, which contained some superficial prestige at the time.

Named Streets After Famous Ball Players.

Dutch Ruether, the pitcher, had an office in Washington, where he sold lots from the maps in a subdivision promoted by John McGraw near Sarasota, known as Pennant Park. The streets of Pennant Park were named after famous ball players, and when it came to naming a serpentine road there was a delicate problem, because, naturally, the athletes all wanted to be identified with straight streets. Presently the boys suggested that the twisting drive be called the Rue Cozy Dolan, but I never heard what the final decision was.

Mr. McGraw suffered no little distress on account of Pennant Park. It was a belated promotion, and the boom blew up at a most inopportune time. Consequently, the business men in charge were put to the terrible necessity of refunding large sums to the patrons, the saddest experience of a promoter.

Dazzy Vance, Hank Deberry, Tom Zachary, Sam Rice, Pep Young, Frank Frisch, Bill Terry, and Al Schacht bought land, and so did the Meusel brothers of California, to their shame back home. But only Schacht and Walter Hagen won money so far as my information goes, and if the Pullman porters and dining car waiters around the land feel resentful about nickel tips from the public heroes on their travels, let them bear with the boys, for they may be paying notes and taxes yet.

OLDSMOBILE OWNERS BUY VIKINGS WITH ABSOLUTE CONFIDENCE

The number of Vikings purchased by Oldsmobile owners is indicative of the confidence which Oldsmobile ownership inspires.

It is, in fact, a compliment that works both ways. It reflects the thorough satisfaction which these owners have received from their Oldsmobiles. It proves that Viking measures up to the high expectations which their previous experience has created.

Oldsmobile owners are not easily persuaded to buy other cars—even when the budget suggests that a larger expenditure is no objection. For their experience has shown that Oldsmobile can be depended upon to serve them long and well under all conditions. That its big, high-compression engine provides acceleration, power, and speed for every requirement. That its staunch, dependable chassis offers features of comfort, safety, and handling ease which add much to genuine motoring pleasure. That its beautiful Fisher Body is designed, inside and out, for style, restfulness, and durability.

These are the qualities which Oldsmobile owners demand—plus the all-important factor of honest value. And they have found them, in generous measure, in the Viking Eight.

For the Viking is a product of the same fine engineering and faithful manufacture which have made Oldsmobile so highly regarded everywhere. It offers features characteristic of cars much higher in price. Its roomy, comfortable Fisher Body is as smartly tailored as the most critical person could desire. Its 81-horsepower, 90° V-type eight-cylinder engine assures performance of the finest character . . . with abundant power and speed . . . with luxurious smoothness throughout the entire speed range.

And in addition to these things, Viking has proved its thorough dependability in every phase of motoring. This thorough dependability, which is the best guarantee of satisfaction you can find in a motor car, explains why Oldsmobile owners buy Vikings with absolute confidence.

MOTORS - TRAFFIC - HIGHWAYS

DETROIT PLANS TO EXTEND ITS SUPERHIGHWAYS

Realizes Urban Needs as Chicago Sleeps.

BY HAL FOUST.

Wayne county, Mich., already far ahead of Cook county in its construction of facilities for metropolitan traffic, will vote in November on an $100,000,000 program for the acquisition of an additional seventy miles of 204 foot rights of way to extend the county's superhighways through Detroit and its suburbs. The $100,000 does not include the cost of pavements and grade separations which would be financed by the mill road tax.

The proposition calls for an $80,000,000 bond issue to be retired by a tax of 95 cents per $1,000 assessed valuation for a period of sixteen years and a special assessment bond of $20,000,000 to be spread over ten years against property receiving special benefits from the improvements.

The plan supplements the project for the city of Detroit and the state of Michigan to share equally in the cost of widening five state highways into and through the city.

Is Forging Ahead.

Thus Detroit is initiating a decade of highway construction that traffic authorities predict must be devoted to concentration upon the improvement of automobile facilities within municipalities. Rural roads have held the attention of pavement planners and builders for the last decade until today the motoring public's problem is no longer the country mud but the mire of urban congestion.

Thus Detroit is forging ahead while Chicago, with a weak city administration and with a rural controlled state administration, is lagging farther and farther behind the requirements of traffic. The Chicago Plan commission has carefully considered sketches and maps for a super boulevard system for the city but no governmental agency has sold them to the public. The work of south park and Lincoln park on the outer drives is the only exception to this indictment.

An electorate distrustful of its public officials defeated the Austin-Kinzie and the Avondale projects. The state administration, under farmer domination due to the unconstitutional organization of the general assembly, does not lay any pavement in Chicago.

Heeds Motorists' Cry.

Michigan is heeding the cry of the motoring public for improved facilities through cities and villages and there is even a movement to amend the state constitution so that the larger centers of population, especially Detroit and Grand Rapids, can get more power in determining highway expenditures.

"Our constitution perpetuates a rural control of highway expenditures," said Lee H. Bierce, secretary of the Grand Rapids chamber of commerce, "by providing for representation in legislature by area rather than by population. This has resulted in the construction of beautiful concrete highways, closely paralleling each other, in cut off timber waste lands whose representatives in the general assembly have sold their votes for pavement, and the built up sections of the state have not received in road construction their portion of the taxes paid to the highway fund.

"Politicians, however, are beginning to appreciate that Michigan is no longer a strictly agricultural state, and as the industrial centers are getting more political influence they are getting more pavements. The proposed constitutional amendment, apportioning legislative representation by population, will do much to solve the 1930 traffic problem, the relief of congestion in municipalities."

Highway Commissioner's View.

Frank V. Blakely, field secretary of the Michigan Tourist and Resort association, without reflecting on the state administration which contributes to the support of his organization, gave the same opinion as to the relative importance of rural and municipal paving during the next few years.

Grover C. Dillman, Michigan state highway commissioner, shares this view.

"In the development of our highway transportation system for quite a long time after the use of the motor vehicle became general," he said, "the weaks points of this system were on our rural highways and in the smaller cities and villages. The weakness at that time was expressed in many cases by total lack of an all weather surface of any sort.

At the present time in this state and in most of the other states the major portion of the highway system has been surfaced with some sort of material which is usable throughout most of the year. We are now at the stage at which our system must be modernized in accordance with the needs of modern high speed automobile transportation.

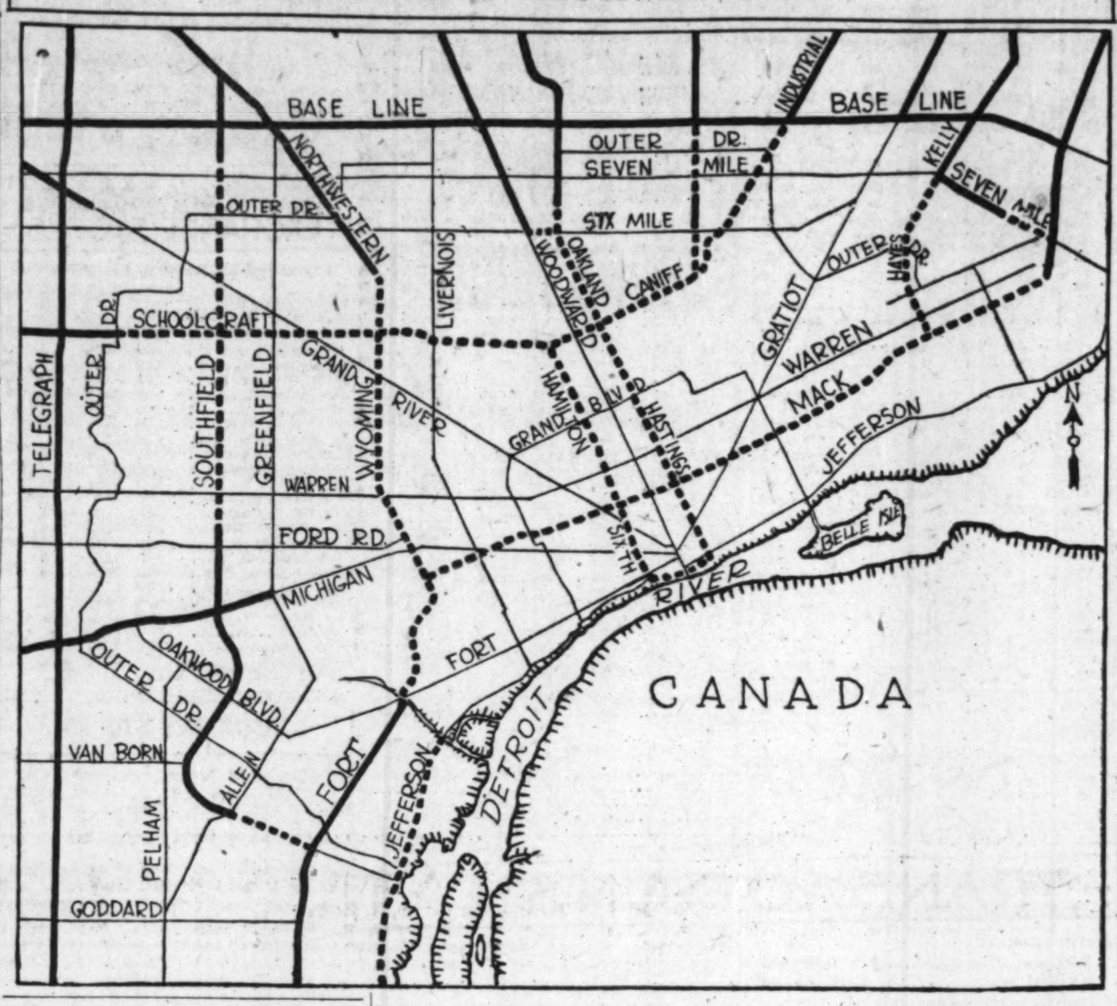
"In many instances the trouble is no longer with the surface, but with the lack of width of the existing surface, and in order to secure sufficient width of surface additional widths of right of way are necessary. Nearly all of the original rights of way of our transportation system were decided upon in an age when the automobile was not dreamed of. Our horse and buggy grandfathers considered a 66 foot right of way ample for all transportation uses to which a highway could be put."

Chicagoland Benefiting.

Chicagoland is benefiting from the progressive thinking of the Michigan highway department. The main highway is being widened and straightened up the east coast of Lake Michigan from the Indiana line. The four lane pavement will be extended to Muskegon, 196 miles from Chicago, by 1933.

The Michigan superhighway will connect with the forty foot pavement that Indiana has started this year between the Michigan line and Gary. There is no adequate connection between Chicago's business center and the Indiana metropolitan district; several are proposed but none definitely projected.

DETROIT'S HIGHWAY PLAN



The map shows how Detroit proposes to take the leadership in the new era of highway construction, the improvement of traffic facilities within centers of population. The heavy black lines indicate 204 foot rights of way acquired during the last decade, in which highway improvements have been concentrated upon rural roads. The dashes indicate 204 foot rights of way that would be acquired under a $100,000,000 program to be submitted to the electorate of Wayne county. Note how the program would carry the superhighways into and through the city.

THE ROAD'S YOUR OWN WHEN YOU TOUR IN AUSTRIA

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA. — [Special Correspondence.]—If you don't mind such things as having the road to yourself or shooting through unsurpassed Alpine mountain scenery on well kept asphalt and gravel highways or stopping at night at pleasant little inns where you can get a spotlessly clean room for a dollar or two and plenty of good food and cooling beer and wine to wash it down with for a dollar more, then Austria may be the motoring paradise you've been looking for.

Austria has plenty of good roads, but as yet few cars to run on them. Consequently the road is yours when you go excursioning, and you never have to take anybody's dust either going or coming. There are 2,500 miles of arterial highways paved with asphalt or gravel and kept up by the state and about that much more mileage of good roads maintained by the various federal departments.

Only 19,791 Autos.

In all of Austria there are but 19,791 passenger cars. Even in Vienna, a capital of 2,000,000 people, there is not as much street traffic as in Peoria or Decatur. Motorists used to the traffic jams of Chicago, New York, London, or Paris will find it novel to drive through the streets here for an automobile is still almost a curiosity. Their only problem will be avoiding a few jay walkers and a handful of cab drivers with their mutton chop whiskers and their tumbled down fiacres which are holding out till the last breath against these new fangled American contraptions called automobiles.

There are not so many American cars here as is popularly supposed. Austria manufactures 10,000 cars a year itself. So far it has been unable to dispose of all of these either in the home market or abroad. As a result not only a high tariff is imposed on foreign cars, but their importation is strictly limited. Dealers handling 25 makes of American automobiles are permitted to sell but 300 cars a year. Last year the figure was raised to 400 cars through special concessions granted by the government. But the total of American cars running in Austria today is only 2,000.

Would Abolish Quota.

There is a strong movement to lower the tariff on foreign cars, or at least abolish the quota system. But as long as Austrian manufacturers such as the Steyr works are unable to sell the cars they actually produce the government hesitates to ruin them completely by letting in outside competition.

As a result the automobile is still considered a luxury, a fact which strike Americans first visiting here as very odd. Austrians cannot understand how American workmen can afford to have a car. Cars which sell for around $1,000 in the United States cost more than twice that here.

At the present the Steyr works is planning to produce a cheap car under $1,000. Whether it will be successful remains doubtful. Its chief difficulty heretofore has been its inability to manufacture its cars on a large enough scale to make them cheaply.

While the motorist in Austria meets very few fellow atuoists, he is liable to be accompanied by plenty of motorcycles. Though they cost as much as the small cars in America, they are tax free. There are over 50,000 of them in use, and on Sundays they flock out of Vienna like flies with the usually dignified head of the family in the saddle, his wife in the side car and his daughter balanced behind.

100,000 Bicycles.

Bicycles did not pass out here with the coming of the automobile, or at least they have not yet. There are 100,000 of them licensed, and those who cannot afford to tour by auto or motorcycle do it by bicycle.

You have the left-hand drive here, as in England, but it shortly is to be replaced by right hand driving. Already in the Tyrol and around Salzburg right hand driving is now in effect, and though the Austrians are finding it difficult to forget a habit of many years they have accepted it as more natural to speed down the right side of the street than the left.

Every foreign motorist on entering the country is given a set of instructions in his own language informing which side of the street to drive on and where.

Speed limits are something new to these people. The sky has always been the limit and speed cops were unknown. In response, however, to protests from certain towns and villages a new national law has just been made regulating the speed within towns to 25 miles an hour. On the open highway the law respectfully asks only that the driver be master of his car at all times. His speed is left to his better judgment. There are no speed traps such as used to characterize many an American hamlet.

The roads are well marked with signs in colors and numbered, and the foreigner who does not speak German will have no trouble finding his way. There are now filling stations in every little town, thought not nearly as many as in America. Gasoline costs an average of 28 cents a gallon and oil a correspondingly higher price than at home.

Austria, though the fact is not generally realized, is a second Switzerland. Eighty-five per cent of its territory being mountainous. It has its share of beautiful Alpine peaks and charming lakes set in the mountains and winding everywhere there is anything to see are good, safe roads.

The beauty of touring is that the distances are not long. In two hours driving from Vienna you can be in the heart of the Alps. Driving south from the capital you are in the foot hills of the great Alpine chain almost as soon as you leave the city limits. In an hour you are climbing steadily but the grade is not too stiff even for the smallest powered car. Along the road are hundreds of picturesque little wine houses with plump little girls in peasant costumes ready to pour you a glass of cold wine at 10 cents a glass. There is no need to be thirsty driving in Austria, and yet drunken drivers are wholly unknown.

A couple of hours more and you are at Semmering, the most fashionable of Austrian Alpine winter and summer resorts. Viennese business men drive up there after work in the evening and return the next morning. It has several fine hotels, a charming little mountain golf course, and all the other attractions of an international mountain resort. Nearby are a hundred little villages with very good inns for those who prefer a more quiet stay.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

MUNICIPAL PARKING LOTS.

Chicago, July 15.—Having been a reader of your paper for many years, during which time I have never inflicted my views on the people, I beg the privilege of employing a few lines in your column to express my views on a very important matter.

The parking of automobiles in congested districts has become such a problem that in many instances this means of transportation is impracticable. Streets are widened at tremendous cost and then about fifteen feet of this widened street is rendered useless by the practice of parking cars at the curb, a benefit to the few to the general disadvantage of traffic. Many of our narrow streets would be sufficiently wide if the cars parked at the curb were somewhere else.

We cannot forbid this practice unless a substitute that is equally satisfactory is found. To do so would hurt business in the places where this restriction were enforced.

Not far from each congested district is a neighborhood of cheap homes or vacant property. In most instances it is not more than one block away. Where property values for business frontage run up in the thousands of dollars a foot, around the corner the value is reckoned in hundreds or much less. The city could condemn sufficient property there to accomodate all the automobiles that would be parked in that district.

A few of the many benefits that would result from this arrangement follow: Greater road surface for vehicles on the road, with less traffic delays; safer and more convient parking; safer crossing for pedestrians because the view of the street would be clear; merchants would have a better opportunity to display their merchandise to shoppers on either side of the street, due to the absence of cars parked in front of their display windows; easier to keep streets clean; better fire protection; reduce the problem of regulating traffic; fewer bent fenders and damaged cars.

It is well worth while giving this matter a lot of consideration, now, for we will surely be in a fine traffic muddle when the much looked for World's Fair year arrives. A. KRANK.

HARLEM AND NORTH AVENUE.

Chicago, July 15.—I often pass the crossing of Harlem avenue and North avenue and have discovered that there are "stop" signs on three corners, but none has ever been put up on the northeast corner. This creates quite a serious hazard because cars traveling on Harlem avenue, seeing the sign on the west side of the street that causes North avenue traffic to stop, feel that they have similar protection from the east.

I should like to see either four signs at this intersection or merely two signs, which would stop traffic on Harlem avenue and give North avenue the right of way. L. M. T.

ARRESTED IN CICERO.

Chicago, July 15.—While driving on Austin boulevard in Cicero late one evening I was stopped by a flivver squad and forced to drive to their courthouse. After posting a $10 cash bond I was released.

I had been driving slowly, about 20 miles per hour, and failed to stop at 25th street. The Cicero authorities call it a "through street." There are no illuminated stop signs or traffic lights at this intersection. The Chicago Motor club had erected its "stop" signs, but they are hardly visible after dark.

If the fine I paid would go toward putting illuminated stop signs at crossings like this, Cicero is more than welcome to it, but most of us have a fair idea of that town's legislative body.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Walter P. Chrysler last week announced two lines of straight eights, the first eight cylinder cars ever to bear his name. They are to be known as the Chrysler eight and the Chrysler imperial eight.

In appearance neither car has a counterpart. Welded all steel bodies are introduced with the new models, and in designs that symbolize the speed of the machines on a good open road.

The imperial engine will develop 125 horsepower at 3,200 r. p. m., the most powerful motor ever designed by Chrysler engineers. The Chrysler eight develops 80 horsepower at 3,400 r. p. m.

Buick next Saturday will introduce a complete line of eight cylinder automobiles. E. T. Strong, president and general manager, made the announcement last week, confirming rumors have been current in the motor industry for some time.

Studebaker, with its new line of "free wheeling" eights, announces a price cut on its sixes. The "free wheeling," a mechanical device novel to the automobile industry, permits gear shifting at all speeds without touching the clutch.

A new business coupe just announced by Graham is on display at the Bird-Sykes company, Chicago distributor, and associated dealers. Mounted on the standard six chassis the new model has unusual length and width of body and a 66 horsepower motor. Rear windows may be lowered, affording increased ventilation, and all windows as well as the windshield are equipped with laminated safety plate shatter proof glass.

Pierce-Arrow is conducting a service school for its dealers, so that Pierce-Arrow ownership will include the value of expert maintenance.

Production of a new front wheel drive will be underway soon at the plant of the Kissel Motor company at Hartford, Wis. The car will be known as the Kissel-Ruxton.

NEW HIGHWAYS TO CUT THROUGH FOREST RESERVE

Many Bridges Planned Over Des Plaines.

New roads are being cut through the forest preserves west of Chicago as the metropolitan population pushes across the Des Plaines river and overflows into the suburbs on the edge of Cook county and in Du Page county.

The development is meeting opposition from nature lovers who would preserve the woods as the red man left them. This was the original purpose of the county forests as described in the act of the general assembly, passed in 1915, authorizing the county to purchase the land.

But the city's growth has overruled the original intentions of the forest preserve act. Heavy traffic cannot be choked by an unbroken fringe of woods around the city. And the increased population demands the use of the forests for the masses. The preserves are becoming city parks.

Reconciled to Change.

The Cook county forest preserve advisory committee, headed by Brig. Gen. Abel Davis, has become reconciled to this transition and is making plans accordingly. There is agitation for the metropolitan section, including counties in Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, to organize a new and larger forest preserve district for the purchase of acres fifty or seventy-five miles from Chicago to be kept in their natural state for at least the next twenty-five years, until these, in turn, become city parks, just as Cook county's 34,000 acres are gradually being converted into playgrounds, picnic groves, and the like.

"There are those," said Robert Kingery, manager of the Chicago Regional Plan association, "who would not let any one walk on the grass in the forest preserves. They think it is wonderful the way European countries have saved forests in their natural state.

Road to Connect Preserves.

"However, these enthusiastic nature lovers are in the minority. The thought of the majority is that the preserves must be opened, with roads, parking spaces, recreational facilities and comfort stations, so that all might enjoy the public property, even if the woods are trampled like Lincoln park on a warm Sunday. Europe saved its woods by keeping out the public, so that royalty could enjoy nature."

The major project in opening the preserves for further use of the public is a "forest way," a landscaped drive on a minimum right of way of 60 feet, that its planned to connect all of the county's scattered forests. The county has legislative authority to purchase a thousand acres more of preserve and this will probably be sufficient to acquire the links. If not further authority will be sought.

Other projects, to be realized in the more immediate future, include the construction of nine bridges over the Des Plaines river, to the west of Chicago, in the fifteen miles from Oakton street to 47th street. Three of these bridges are to replace old and narrower structures.

New Bridges Planned.

Three spans, on new roads cutting through the preserves, are planned for the now unbroken one and three-tenths miles between North avenue and Lake street. This is where the pressure of traffic, seeking more exits and entrances to the city, is greatest.

The structure on Chicago avenue will probably be the first to be constructed. The county's highway advisory committee put this work on the 1930 program. There was no right of way problem because the county owned the land. The board passed a resolution more than a year ago, ordering the bridge. But there was political juggling, rivalry among the county commissioners, and County Highway Superintendent Quinlan is still without completed architect's plans. The contract will probably not be let until next winter.

Division vs. Chicago.

The board also passed a resolution more than a year ago for a bridge on Division street. There was rivalry between the Division street advocates and the Chicago avenue supporters. The county highway department hasn't started work on the plans. The explanation offered as an excuse is that Division is not a state aid road and that the state would not share in the cost of the structure.

Augusta street, the new west side boulevard, was proposed as a site for a road through the forest preserve and a bridge over the Des Plaines. The citizens' advisory committee decided that the logical rural connection for Augusta is the new forty foot pavement on North avenue to St. Charles.

Augusta is to be connected with North avenue by a pavement on Vinson avenue, paralleling the Soo tracks. The pavement and vehicular bridge are on the county program for construction in 1931, after the paving of Augusta is completed.

To Widen Lake Street Bridge.

The Lake street bridge is to be widened, under the program prepared for the state by Gov. Emmerson's advisory committee. The county, however, feels that this work is not urgent because the existing bridge is thirty-six feet wide and this improvement is being delayed notwithstanding the fact that Lake street is being widened to forty feet and by next year will be accommodating four lanes of fast traffic.

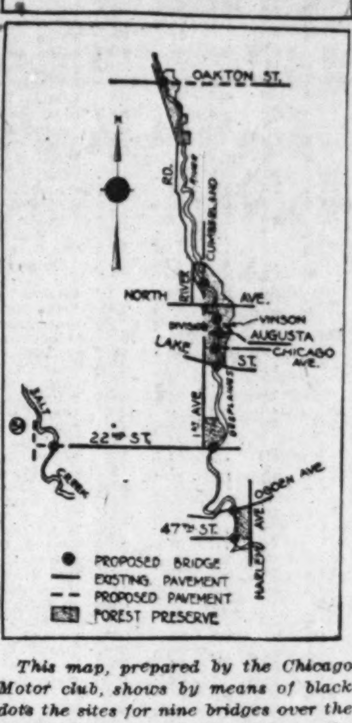
The construction of the Oakton street span awaits official approval of the design by the state highway department.

A bridge for the extension of First avenue to connect with Cumberland avenue is in the same status as the Oakton street span.

The 22d street bridge, replacing an inadequate and worn out structure, is under construction.

The working plans for a new and wider Ogden avenue bridge across the Des Plaines are being prepared. The state is not sure whether a contract for this job can be let this summer. The pavement on Ogden is being widened.

NEW BRIDGES



This map, prepared by the Chicago Motor club, shows by means of black dots the sites for nine bridges over the Des Plaines river to be built in the fifteen miles between Oakton and 47th streets. Those on Lake street, 22d street, and Ogden avenue are to replace inadequate structures. The other six are on new motor trails through the forest preserves, indicated by shaded areas.

LUNDBLAD COMES OUT AS ENEMY OF BRIDGE EVIL

Chicago's open bridge nuisance, which delays thousands of pedestrians and motorists in the central business district daily, will grow more aggravating and more extravagant in waste of the public's time unless measures are taken for further restrictions on the openings.

Henry R. Lundblad, Republican nominee for congress from the Sixth district, sounded this warning yesterday in pledging his support to a congressional fight to reduce the nuisance.

"The most good to the greatest number," he said, "is the principle that must be uppermost in the mind of a representative if he is to serve his constitutents properly. The position must not be used to lonsummate personal ambitions or vent individual views.

Link in Waterway.

"Millions of dollars have been spent and millions more will be spent to complete the Great Lakes to Gulf waterway. Illinois has been fighting for and has spent much time and energy to make this project a reality. It is well on the road to completion and the Chicago river is an important link.

"This waterway in operation will bring benefits to the city of Chicago which now even the greatest optimists of the plan are doubtless underestimating. At the present time the river traffic is very light; when our lake to gulf waterway is in operation this will be multiplied many times, consequently we must find a way to permit free passage of shipping without injury to local street traffic. This is a problem for Chicago engineers in conjunction with the war department to solve.

"Perhaps a plan of access to the canal through the Calumet river will be good thus leaving only barge traffic for the Chicago river.

"Chicago is seeing a little clearer now a subway system. Why not at least two good wide tunnels for vehicular traffic?

Ban in Rush Hours.

"It is apparent we cannot close our river and our street traffic is continually increasing. It is a real problem to make adjustments which are fair to all.

"Nature by its tides at certain hours bans ingress and egress of shipping at most ocean ports. It is accepted because it cannot be changed, therefore let the tide of humanity that passes over our bridges place a ban during the heavy hours on river traffic. Of course this would bring the usual storm from shipping interests that would try to have concessions in their favor, but when placed in operation it would be something to which they would soon adjust themselves.

"Although not within the regular province of the representative to devise the plan, I promise faithfully to support or father action upon the remedy presented for the betterment of Chicago conditions."

Mr. Lundblad is running against Congressman James T. Igoe, Democrat.

Three nominees running against sitting congressmen have not responded to requests for statements on this bridge question: They are: Harry Baker [Dem.], First district; Frank V. Kara [Rep.], Fifth district, and Thomas Rohan [Dem.], Ninth district.

SEVEN MEETINGS ON ROAD PLANS ARE SCHEDULED

Seven meetings of public officials and civic leaders will be held this week by the Chicago Motor club to obtain the views of the motoring public toward the club's program for the state to widen 870 miles of highway and to build 63 grade separations in the metropolitan area in 1932 and '33.

The biggest meeting is expected to be the one scheduled for Bloomington on Wednesday. Bloomington is on route 4, which the motor club proposes to widen from Chicago to Springfield. Other sessions will be as follows: At Milford, on route 1, on Monday; at Mendota, on route 18, on Monday; at St. Anne, on route 1, on Tuesday; at Ottawa, on route 7, on Tuesday; at Momence, on route 1, on Wednesday, and at Beecher, on route 1, on Thursday.

WOMEN FLYERS KICK AT RULES FOR AIR RACES

Want Right to Fly More Powerful Planes.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

The annual cry of discrimination and favoritism in drafting the rules for the national air races was heard last week. Dispatches from New York stated that charges were being made against the Chicago air race committee, but no formal protests have been received. So far the complaints reaching Chicago directors have been merely reports of rumors.

The annual row came a little earlier than usual this year and originated in the female camp of flyers. But nothing is going to be done about it. Maj. R. W. Schroeder, veteran air race official and chairman of the rules committee for the 1930 races, which will be held here from Aug. 23 to Sept. 1, stated last week that no changes would be made in the race rules.

Women Want Change.

The rumble of discontent arose shortly after Amelia Earhart visited Chicago recently with a group of women flyers who took part in last year's woman's air Derby. At a conference with race officials she asked that the rules be changed so as to permit the women to fly higher powered aircraft in the coming race.

The Chicago committee opposed a free-for-all contest for the race of the women flyers. Without power restriction, it was pointed out, the prettiest flyer would probably get the biggest plane of the best manufacturer, and if her luck and her flying skill held out during the race she would reach Chicago first. But the race officials believe that the race can be conducted with more fairness and safety by the restriction of horse power.

Official Makes Statement.

In view of the rumors of discontent Maj. Schroeder and Maj. Luke Christopher, representing the National Aeronautical association, issued the following statement:

"The racing program was arranged to give complete satisfaction to every possible competitor. We have provided events in every specific power category that time would permit. Those in charge of the contest grouped the power classifications to give every pilot an opportunity to compete. Accordingly, eight classes, ranging from 110 cubic inch piston displacement to unlimited power, were provided, which takes care of all engines manufactured to date.

"The program is fair to entrants with planes in all power classes. The committee in charge recognized the fact that the majority of privately owned airplanes are powered by engines of 800 cubic inch displacement or less. This great majority of flyers are recognized in the program according to their representation in the flying world.

High Powered Planes.

"The higher powered planes are provided for principally in the nonstop Derby and the Thompson trophy race. One-third of all prize money will go to such entrants. This is recognition of the greater cost of high powered planes, despite the fact that only one-eighth of the approved type engines manufactured are in that category.

"As regards the women's Derbies, nothing but hearty approval has met the plans for the western Derby. In the east a few girl flyers piloting planes of high power have expressed dissatisfaction verbally because the eastern women's Derby is limited to planes of 500 cubic inch displacement. They naturally dislike the idea of going back to kindergarten, although a race of low powered planes is no less a test of piloting skill. Last year all planes piloted by women were grouped in one classification. We believe we have recognized the increase in girls' by providing two classes this year. by providing two classe sthis year. Provision for a third higher power class must logically wait until next year.

Men Not Quibbling.

"There has been no quibbling of any sort from entrants in the five men's Derbies. We have offered to provide a special speed race for girl flyers in an unlimited power classification so that women flying higher powered planes will have an important place in the meet.

"The approved racing program was drawn up only after due consideration and conference with manufacturers and pilots, and we feel that it is eminently fair, giving opportunity to every licensed pilot to enter some event."

U. S. FORESTS TO BE PATROLLED BY AIRPLANES

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—More than 3,000,000 acres of national forest land in the Santa Barbara, San Bernardino, Cleveland, and Angelus national forests will be patrolled by planes of the Aëro corporation of California, subsidiary of Western Air Express, during 1930 under a contract awarded that company by the government.

The area embraced in the contract reaches from the southern boundary of San Luis Obispo county on the north to the Mexican border, and from the Mojave desert on the east to the Pacific ocean.

Three planes of the Aëro corporation of California will be devoted exclusively to forest patrol service and will be stationed subject to call and ready to fly anywhere in the 3,000,000 acres of southern California forest land.

The planes will be used to fly over forest fires so that ground crews can be directed in battling blazes by a forest service observer aloft. Investigations into fire reports, particularly following electrical storms, and daily patrol of the forests by air, if necessary, will be carried on from the ships.

NEW AIRPLANE AID.

A new visual timed indicator for airplane guidance from radio beacons is being manufactured by an eastern corporation.

QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world's altitude record. Inquiries should be addressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—What is the proper spelling of the name of the planes that land on water or land. It is "amphibion" or "amphibian?"—D. S. K., Oak Park.

A.—Both names are given in the dictionary. Amphibian is the word most often used to name this classification of airplanes.

Q.—Whatever happened to the Borreilli airplane that was going to be used in flying from ships in the ocean to New York?—L. T., Chicago.

A.—You probably have in mind the Burnelli plane. The first Burnelli plane was damaged in taking off from a New Jersey airport a year ago. Since then a new plane has been built along the same lines. It has an unusually wide fuselage and is powered by two 800 horsepower Packard engines.

Q.—I saw a propellor the other day that had a couple of things attached to the hub that looked like a smaller propellor. What was it for?—V. K., Aurora.

A.—The propellor you saw was probably used on a water cooled engine. The smaller "propellor" you saw is sometimes used in water cooled motors to help radiation.

Q. — I had an argument with a friend the other day. He said Kingsford-Smith was an Irishman and I said he was an American. Which of us is right?—E. L., Rockford, Ill.

A. — Wing Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith is an Australian.

NATIONAL AIR RACES HERE ARE ASSUMING WORLD-WIDE ASPECT

The aspect of the National Air races, to be held on the model Curtiss-Wright-Reynolds airport at Chicago from Aug. 23 to Sept. 1 inclusive, is rapidly broadening to assume an international character.

It started last year with the entry of a German girl and an Australian girl in the derby which preceded the races, and was heightened by participation of one of the Canadian Air force's crack acrobatic teams and the visit of the Graf Zeppelin. This year at least two German girls are expected to enter one of the two women's derbies, Fraulein Thea Rasche and Fraulein Strassman. In addition, the race executives have invited principal European countries, through the department of state, to send representatives to Chicago to compete in the speed events. England, Germany, France, and Italy have been urged to enter planes in the speed races.

Miss Amy Johnson, the British aviatrix who recently flew from London to Australia, was invited by Miss Amelia Earhart to attend the air races, in the recent broadcast of greetings from American flyers to the youthful British air trail blazer in Australia. It is expected she will attend the races if she does not actively participate.

N. Y. AIR LINE IS PLANNING HOURLY TRIPS TO PHILLY

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—An airplane line sending out its machines every hour on the hour between New York, Philadelphia and Washington, was announced recently by Miss Amelia Earhart, woman flyer.

This new service, designed to compete directly with the railroads for passengers and express, is to be started Aug. 15. The operating company, known as the New York, Philadelphia-Washington Airway corporation, was formed under the Delaware laws by the Ludington Brothers, Nicholas and C. T., of Philadelphia, who have long been associated with aeronautics. It is capitalized for $1,000,000 and there will be no public stock offering, the company being owned completely by the Ludingtons and others already associated with them in various aeronautical enterprises.

The line, Miss Earhart announced, will use Stinson tri-motored planes, Lycoming powered, and a number of them have been purchased for the start of the system. Others will be added as they are needed. The schedule calls for ten trips each way each day, a total of 4,000 miles a day of flying.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET CLOSES WEEK UNEVENLY

Auburn Auto Shares Slip Into Reverse.

After five days of trading, during which a bullish influence prevailed, the Chicago Stock exchange closed the week with prices of the leaders somewhat irregular. Profit taking was largely responsible for the irregularity. Trading was extremely light, and such gains and recessions as developed were for the greater part merely fractional.

Auburn, which during the week cut the biggest capers of any stock listed on the board, went into a tailspin to level off at 127, a loss of 8 points. Its high point for the week was 141. Other automotives were off fractionally, Bendix losing ⅝ to finish at 33⅜ and Borg-Warner shading off ¼. Houdaille went up ⅜ to 12⅝.

Utilities Steady.

Public utilities were fairly steady. Commonwealth Edison, on sales of 800 shares, provided the feature gain of the day by advancing 4½ points to close at 294. Public Service of Northern Illinois, on a trifling transaction, dropped 3½ points to 272. Cities Service was off 1½ points to close at 29⅝. Other changes were fractional.

Grigsby-Grunow trading was less active than usual and the market finished with no change. Majestic Household, closing at 37⅞, was off 1⅛. Zenith slipped ⅛ to 9⅞. The investment trusts were steady. Both Corporation Securities and Continental Chicago were up fractionally, while Chicago Corporation remained in its former position.

In the general list, Bastian Blessing, Beatrice Creamery, and Electric Household advanced a notch fractionally, but, as in the rest of the market, there was little activity.

Otis & Co. report that a compilation at the close of business yesterday shows that the fifty most active stocks traded in during the week ended July 19 had a market value of $2,585,901,728, as compared with a market value of $2,493,303,621 at the close of the previous week. This represents an increase of $92,598,107 or 3.71 per cent.

Lower Market Values.

Of this number thirty-three were traded in last year. At Saturday's close these stocks had a market value of $1,443,585,864, as compared with $1,594,178,154 on July 20, 1929—a decrease of $150,592,290 or 9.44 per cent.

The stock exchange yesterday announced that a membership has been posted for transfer to James B. Howell of San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Howell is a member of the firm of Boren & Howell, San Francisco.

Campbell, Wyant & Cannon Foundry company report net earnings after all charges, including taxes, for the six months ended June 30, 1930, of $583,496, equivalent to $1.68 per share on 348,000 shares of capital stock. This compares with $1,061,827 in the corresponding period of 1929. The regular 50 cents quarterly dividend payable Sept. 1 has been declared to stock of record Aug. 15.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $687,500,000, an increase of $13,400,000 over the preceding week, but a decline of $36,200,000 from the corresponding week in 1929. Balances last week totaled $127,100,000, an increase of $46,900,000 over the previous week and also a gain of $73,400,000 over the same week last year. The figures for the week, day by day [with last three ciphers omitted] follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 89,800	$ 12,700
Tuesday	109,300	15,400
Wednesday	125,200	28,400
Thursday	155,600	42,400
Friday	111,100	19,100
Saturday	95,500	9,100
Total for week	$687,500	$127,100
Cor. week last year	723,700	54,700

Defaulted Real Estate Bonds.

The defaulting of quite a number of first mortgage real estate bond issues during the last year has caused a great deal of anxiety among a class of investors who never before have had to worry much about their investments. It has resulted in considerable hardship for some who have put all or a large part of their savings into the less conservatively set up bonds of this type.

For years the first mortgage real estate bond has been regarded as a sound form of investment. Such bonds are seldom listed but until recently most underwriters of this type of security made a market for the bonds they sold. Some houses have been able to continue to support their issues. Others have not.

Consequently, there are orphan issues which go begging for a buyer. Some of these are in default or threaten to go. Others stand on firmer ground.

In general, the present is a poor time for investors to sell their first real estate bonds—either good issues or those that have defaulted. Many of the issues now in default can probably be worked out with a small loss or none at all to the investor. But this will require time.

The best reason for advising the holding of defaulted bonds is that there is almost no other reasonable alternative, because the demand for such securities is much less than the supply. If the issue is in default the damage is already done as far as the price is concerned. Usually the investor stands to gain more by holding his bond than by throwing it away for any old price merely to get rid of it. After all, a first mortgage bond is backed by tangible property and when the demand for such property improves after the present slump the bond is likely to be in a better position.

It would be well also for the investor not to snatch at the opportunity to exchange his first mortgage real estate bond for the first thing he is offered in trade for it. He should be certain before making any exchange that the security he is offered is at least as good as what he holds. All sorts of refinancing plans have been arranged. Some of these seem to be aimed to protect the investor. Others appear to be created for quite different reasons. A careful examination should reveal to the investor whether or not he stands to gain by making the trade.

One of the most unfortunate results of the defaulting of a number of real estate bond issues has been the tendency to weaken public confidence in this type of security. The defaulted issues are only a drop in the bucket compared with the vast number of first mortgage real estate issues that are conservatively set up and entirely able to pay their way.

CHICAGO CURB EXCHANGE STOCKS

Early bullish tendencies on the Chicago curb exchange were blended with late declines yesterday in an irregular session. The gains were only fractional but well diversified while the few losses ranged as high as two points among recently inactive issues.

LONDON BOURSE DERIVES TONE FROM ICELAND

Weather Bad and So Are Markets.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 19.—The London stock market appeared to have followed the lead of the weather bureau this week. Coincident with the arrival of "a depression from Iceland" and such like atmospheric disturbances, bringing a break in London's fine weather spell, the stock exchange shows indications of returning to a sluggish mood, accompanied by many damp interludes.

The outstanding investment stocks resisted the somewhat general malaise which threatened to spread over most sections of the house, although even this department was not quite so blatantly buoyant as has been recorded in recent weeks—the dealers in the gilt edged market reporting a slackening demand, representing the ebb and flow of business so characteristic of this section.

Loans Still Most Active.

British government stocks are still the most active group, with the war loan and the conversion loan the brightest features. This is again chiefly due to large amounts of floating money, practically unsalable in present market conditions, which are being placed in first class securities of easy marketability. Large blocks of American money are still coming to the London market for employment, and the indication that the demands are great is provided in the fact that 103½ is being paid for 5 per cent war stock immediately after the half year dividend distribution. This also suggests the confidence that both foreign and home investors have in the small risk that Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden will exercise the government's right to redeem the stock at par in the near future.

Mainly due to this continued investment demand from the United States, the sterling and dollar exchange remains the brightest feature of the foreign exchange market as far as London is concerned—the rate averaging around $4.86½.

Austrian Bonds Issued.

The principal event of the week in the foreign bond market was the issue of the $15,000,000 portion of the Austrian government 7 per cent international loan. THE TRIBUNE understands that about 63 per cent has been left with the underwriters, notwithstanding the quick closing lists, the high yield, and the association of the important issuing houses. This flotation depressingly affected the new German reparations loan, which dropped to 4 discount, heavy selling being encountered for the purpose of taking up the Austrian issue.

Brazilian bonds provided a welcome contrast, rallying in response to the improved milreis.

The keen French demand for gold is still the dominant factor on Lombard street, with the absence of any improvement in the sterling and franc exchange from London's standpoint. This week experienced unusual competition in the open market for gold between French and Swiss buyers, the highest record price since the return to the gold standard being paid by Swiss banks for the quantity available.

Reason Unexplained.

The reason for France's aggressive demand is still unsatisfactorily explained, although it is attributed to the effect of the reparations payments. Consequently the Swiss discount rate led most of the important continental rates in a move against London.

Trading was slack in the industrial sections, which registered generally disappointing results, although international subscription displayed a firmer front on more hopeful advices from Wall street. Dealers, however, showed little disposition here to extend their commitments. The market lacks a definite lead, with the result that values move irregularly.

PARIS ENDS STRONG

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 19.—The past week on the bourse, while very short owing to the national holidays, developed more activity than it has seen for some time and the tone was generally cheerful. After getting off from a slow start, when absolute zero trading seemed to have been reached, the market brightened up yesterday and finished today with a great burst of strength, with the buying heavy in certain categories of gilt edged securities and with prices advancing all along the line.

Gold Movement Heavy.

The gold movements from England were again very heavy and sterling was forced to yield a number of points to the franc. This renewal of gold arrivals and the consequent depression of the English pound was the most significant financial event of the week. According to traders' gossip around the bourse a number of clients are anxiously quizzing the brokers regarding the safety of British government securities which even the suspicious French used to consider as good as gold.

Thanks to the gold shipments from England which brought in several million dollars worth of bullion, the French treasury finds its already formidable gold reserve swelled further. Hitherto this hoarding up of gold failed to produce much effect on the market one way or the other, but experts predict in the long run this will lead to a sharp acceleration of business and a gradual extension of French financial domination over much of the globe.

Styles Tell if Business Is Doing Well

BY SCRUTATOR.

It may not be long now until the business experts give up the old standard indexes and start formulating a new and better group. Instead of figuring up the car loadings for a stated period, or the output of pig iron, and guessing from those indicators how business is, they may well ask: "How are the new styles going?" If the answer is favorable the learned experts will know that things are all right generally.

Car loadings do not represent the same things they used to. There is not so much hay to be hauled, nor grain that is fed to farm animals. Even the production and consumption of coal has not kept up to the amount that the roads might be expected to haul. It is demonstrable that the ton mileage of railroad freight from all sources, on a per capita basis, is not what it was a decade or so back.

Styles Make Markets.

Commodities in the raw state are less important in the total income figures than they were. Their price trends have been pretty steadily downward since 1920. Goods of a highly fabricated, or styled, nature have not varied so much. Telling it in another way, more of the cost of consumer goods now is represented by processing the raw material. Fewer people, proportionately, are engaged in producing the raw stuff.

It is the style conscious public nowadays that makes markets; and this is not confined to the apparel field. Instances galore could be cited. The automobile is sold on style. One could point out instances where manufacturers who tried to sell small, light automobiles at fairly high prices found that the public wanted the biggest, shiniest, most enviable car that amount would buy.

It wants the same when it rents its transportation on a drive it yourself basis. The vice president and manager of a Chicago company assures us that success came when it took all distinguishing marks save that of "class" from its cars and let the driver appear to be driving his own.

Hairpin Demand Grows.

The style appeal of a radio cabinet is fully as important as the works inside it. It is nothing unusual to find a receiving set in a cabinet many times as large as is necessary from the engineering standpoint. The big ones sell on style. Another illustration is the hairpin business, which is active. Winnie Winkle isn't in a bad business. As an executive explained it, women who are letting the hair grow to catch up with the long haired style have to use twice as many pins as if it were already long.

Conspicuous waste, as Thorstein Veblen called it, or the desire to appear well before the neighbors, with the added willingness to spend for their good opinion, is more of a factor than it ever was before in human history. Great industries like rayon fabrics grow as others like wool slip back in favor. Take a look at the store windows and see what the man who once wore red flannel underwear is now demanding—or his son is demanding—striped silk panties.

Scrapping the Old.

The home with an old fashioned ice box, somehow, seems to be declassed. The golfer with wooden shafted clubs is beginning to feel that he is behind the procession. There is a certain hesitance in admitting that the old radio is running on a battery or that the car hasn't four wheel brakes.

What business has to do now is to persuade consumers to scrap things they have; things which can still serve the purpose for which they were made; and to buy things which are a little better in service or in appearance. Style appeal will have to be stressed to do that.

C. & O. RY. NET FOR SIX MONTHS DOWN $276,188

Richmond, Va., July 19.—(AP)—Net income of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway, including the Hocking Valley, for the first six months of 1930 was $276,188 under the corresponding period of 1929, it was reported to the interstate commerce commission today. The net income for June was $177,453 lower than for the same month last year.

While gross revenue is considerably under the gross revenue for the first six months of 1929, the operating expenses were materially reduced. The operating ratio for the six months this year was 66.2 per cent, as against 66 per cent for the first six months of 1929. The operating ratio for June, 1930, was 63.1, as against 65 per cent last year.

Gross revenues for the month of June, 1930, were $11,351,427, a decrease of $898,403 from June of last year; operating expenses were $7,166,455, a decrease of $808,890 as compared with June, 1929; net railway operating income was $3,299,786, a decrease of $290,216 from last June.

Says Office Equipment Sales Hit by Depression

The general business recession, both domestic and foreign, has had a decidedly adverse effect on sales of office and business equipment in recent months. Although complete data for this trade are unavailable at the present time the indications are that aggregate volume of business for the first six months of the current year was from 10 per cent to 20 per cent under that of the corresponding 1929 period, according to a recent survey of the Standard Statistics company of New York.

Middle West Utilities Gets Treasury Tax Refund

The treasury department yesterday announced a refund of $244,218 to the Middle West Utilities company of Chicago covering over assessment of income taxes for 1920 and 1921. An affiliated company, the Northwestern Utilities, was awarded a refund of $21,717 for overassessment in the period.

SCORCHING HEAT IS TAKING TOLL OF GRAIN CROPS

Cut Yield Estimates; Wheat, Corn Spurt.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Withering heat and continued dry weather are taking a heavy toll of the grain crops in North America, and downward revisions are being made in the prospective yields by numerous private reports received from a wide area.

Wheat advanced 2 cents yesterday over Friday's finish, while the active deliveries of corn were lifted 2½@3⅜ cents to a new high on the present movement, with the December showing the most strength. December corn at the top showed 7⅝ cents over the low of Monday, and the weekly forecast, while indicating showers, held out little hope of a general breaking of the drought.

There was a material broadening in speculative interest in all grains, with further desertions noted from the bear side. Shorts covered freely in both wheat and corn, as the damage reports were of a character that could no longer be ignored, and unfavorable comments regarding the prospective outcome in Europe added to the bullish enthusiasm.

Big Export Wheat Sales.

Europe showed a great deal of confidence in the maintenance of the present level of wheat prices despite the immense movement of the new winter crop to American terminal markets. Liverpool bought futures here, as did exporters, and there was heavy short covering as well as commission house buying. The finish here was well toward the top, with net gains of 1⅜@1⅝c, July being 90⅛@90¼c; September, 93½@93⅝c, and December 99@99⅛c.

There was a much more friendly feeling toward the buying side of grains during the week, and at the last wheat showed 3½@3¾c; corn, 5⅞@7⅛c; oats, 1@2⅛c, and rye, 8⅝@9c higher than the finish of the previous week.

The foreign demand for North American cash wheat has been increasing by leaps and bounds, and it was estimated that between 12,000,000 and 16,000,000 bu were sold in all positions during the week, Saturday's sales being placed at 3,000,000 bu.

Reduce French Estimates.

A leading French authority reduced estimates on the prospective yield in that country to 200,000,000@220,000,000 bu, compared with 248,000,000 bu recently, and compared with 389,000,000 bu harvested last year. Owing to a carryover of 72,000,000 bu, however, import needs are expected to be only 40,000,000 bu. Private cables received after the close of the market said heavy rains were falling all over France. Wet weather is causing damage in Germany.

Scattered rains were reported in the Canadian northwest during the day, but failed to have much effect on the wheat market. Around 8,000,000 acres in Alberta and Saskatchewan, or over 33 per cent of the total area in Canada, had been without adequate moisture for some time past, and Statistician B. W. Snow estimated that at a maximum the prairie provinces would be well to secure 350,000,000 bu, or only 75,000,000 bu more than harvested last year. A report to the United States department of agriculture estimated that the crop and carryover of wheat in Europe this season, exclusive of Russia, would be 165,000,000 bu less than last year.

Bull Market in Corn.

Torrid weather over the corn belt, with fears that the crop would be nearly a failure in parts of the southwest and with temperatures of 100 and over at many points in the west caused a stampede on the part of shorts in futures. Sellers of offers were forced to protect themselves as prices advanced, and numerous stop loss orders were uncovered. The government weekly forecast, while promising several shower periods, indicated there would be no general breaking of the drought.

At no times was there any great pressure to sell in the deferred deliveries of corn, and the close was ¾@3⅝c higher, the latter on December, which finished at 75¼@75½c, while September was 81⅛@81⅜c, and July, 83c. The latter was inclined to drag, as it is estimated that around 1,000,000 bu cash grain had been booked to arrive during the week, and a good part of it may be delivered on future contracts unless the shipping demand improves. Cash corn in the southwestern markets continues to sell about the same price as wheat.

Cash houses continue to buy oats futures and with damage reports from the more northern sections of the belt prices advanced and closed ¾@1c higher, with July, 35⅝c, and September, 38@38⅛c.

Wet weather prevails in Germany, and rye was reported as rotting in the fields. Prices in that country have advanced around 6c per bu in the last two days. Houses with foreign connections sold futures on the advance, but the finish was 1@1⅞c higher, with July, 56c, and September, 59⅛c.

Bank Clearings Show Drop of 20.4% from Year Ago

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—Bank clearings this week at leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, amount to $10,096,157,000 and show a decline of 20.4 per cent from those of a year ago. The loss continues very largely at New York City, where clearings for the week of $6,687,000,000 are 24.9 per cent under those of last year, while the total at leading centers outside of New York of $3,409,157,000 is 10 per cent less. At Chicago clearings this week show a small gain, and there also is an increase at Richmond.

LABOR LEADERS, BUILDERS MEET IN EAST SOON

Expect to Eliminate Trades Disputes.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Builders and national building trades leaders will meet at Atlantic City on July 28 to discuss and probably ratify a draft of a tribunal which is intended to eliminate jurisdictional disputes between building trades in the nation's construction industry.

HERBERT HOOVER.
[Harris & Ewing Photo.]

Several joint meetings of labor leaders and builders have been held under auspices of the National Association of Building Trades Employers, and at the Tampa (Fla.) conference of several months ago President Hoover urged establishment of an adjustment board. The President became interested in the plan after its importance was stressed by John Donlin, a former president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

Champion of Old Board.

Donlin was one of the stanch champions of the old adjustment board, which was abolished through petty jealousies that existed between the executives of two large building trades—the bricklayers and the carpenters.

While builders are reticent to discuss the economic loss of the jurisdictional disputes, they state a yearly loss of $35,000,000 would be a conservative estimate and figure. This loss is burdened upon the building artisans, the builders, and the building public.

Since the old jurisdictional awards board was abolished E. M. Craig, the president of the American Construction council and secretary of the National Association of Building Trades Employers, has striven to keep the importance of reëstablishing an adjustment board before the public.

Commend Rosenthal.

Chicago builders commend Oscar W. Rosenthal, head of the Builders Association of Chicago, for drafting provisions of the new board which will be submitted to a general meeting of builders and labor leaders at the Atlantic City meeting.

Coöperating with Mr. Rosenthal were C. G. Norman, New York builder; James J. Scully, Boston builder. The subcommittee of builders functioned with the aid of International President Patrick J. Morrin, ironworkers; J. J. Haynes, sheet metal workers, and Michael J. McDonough, the president of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

Indorsed by Printers.

Illinois labor officials have focused attention on the campaign being waged by Joseph A. Wise, a member of Chicago Typographical union No. 16, for the presidency of the Illinois Federation of Labor. The Wise campaign managers announced that Joe's candidacy is being indorsed by virtually all the printers in the state.

Wise is a correspondent for a labor news service and has been active in procuring beneficial legislation for Illinois trades unionists at Springfield. Chicago building trades are swinging behind his candidacy, it was announced. Wise is a member of the Harold A. Taylor post of the American Legion.

Take Steps to Transfer Transamerica from Curb

Steps to transfer shares of the Transamerica corporation from the curb to the stock exchange were taken in New York when application was filed with the stock exchange listing committee for admitting 24,848,789 shares of capital stock, par value $25. The request may be acted on at the next meeting of the committee. Transamerica corporation was organized about ten years ago by the A. P. Giannini interests, being known as the Bancitaly corporation. It has had a steady growth and at present through stock acquisitions and additional investments controls net assets of $1,167,116,000.

HEAR B. & O. HAS SPLIT WITH C. & O. RY. OVER FIFTH TRUNK LINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—The Baltimore and Ohio and the Chesapeake and Ohio, which for more than two years have prosecuted in union their ambitions for consolidations, have departed from this policy and are furthering their aims by diverse methods, it has been learned.

The B. & O. has decided to go forward by acquiescing when necessary to the interstate commerce commission's proposal for a fifth trunk line, while the C. & O. is holding to a position of firm opposition to the plan. Neither the B. & O. nor the C. & O., it is understood, favors the fifth trunk line in principle.

The chief demand in the B. & O. consolidation plan was an entrance into New York over the Reading-Jersey Central system. This system the commission allocated to the B. & O. in the final consolidation plan. In the meantime the B. & O. has acquired about 40 per cent of the Reading company stock; the Reading in turn controlling the Central Railroad of New Jersey. With control of the Reading-Jersey Central practically assured, the B. & O. is prepared to relinquish other roads for which it asked.

Chief among the roads for which the Baltimore and Ohio asked but did not receive from the commission was the Wabash. In place of the Wabash the commission allocated to the B. & O. the Chicago and Alton, which provides an outlet west of Chicago comparable with that which would have been afforded the Wabash. Some months ago Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O., inspected the C. & A., and it is understood the B. & O. management is giving serious consideration to the acquisition of this property.

Meanwhile William H. Williams, chairman of the Wabash, and Frank E. Taplin, chairman of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia, are planning to make these two roads part of a fifth trunk line, in accordance with the plan of the commission.

FOREIGN TRADE NEAR BOTTOM DURING JUNE

Washington, D. C., July 19.—(AP)—International trade of the United States during June declined to the lowest monthly level that the country has experienced in the last six years.

Exports of American goods amounted to $229,000,000, as the commerce department estimated them today, which was a figure less than that of any month since July, 1924, when the country's exports amounted to $276,600,000.

Imports for last month were $250,000,000, which is lower than those recorded since January, 1922, when they amounted to $217,000,000. Imports and exports for June were each approximately $100,000,000 below those for the same month last year.

Gold imports for June amounted to $13,938,000, offset by exports of $26,000,000. Total net gain of gold for the first six months of 1930 was fixed by the report at $222,536,000. Silver exports for June, registered during a month when prices of that metal were the lowest recorded in modern history, amounted to $3,336,000, as compared with imports of $2,707,000.

Eggs Selling at Lowest Level in Last Ten Years

Egg prices today are at the lowest level touched in the last ten years. President H. H. Field of the Chicago mercantile exchange said yesterday's quotations are around 10 cents per dozen under those of a year ago, about 6 cents under a ten year average, and nearly 20 cents under the high marks set in July, 1920. Chief among the reasons, Mr. Field says, is an enormous amount of eggs in storage and on the market compared to a year ago. Low values for other commodities have also an indirect influence on the egg trade. However, receipts of eggs during the last week have been lessening.

Bond Issues During Week Hold Up Well

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—Despite the fact that July reinvestment demand for bonds is commencing to wane, new offerings placed on the market this week totaled $90,960,000, compared with $50,221,000 during the corresponding week last year. Last week's total offerings of new bond issues reached $153,092,000. This week's offerings, however, showed more diversification than they have in the last few weeks.

Industrial financing led this week with a total of $32,450,000, comprising four issues, the largest of which were $15,000,000 California Packing corporation 5s, which were marked at par, and an issue of $12,000,000 Crane company 5s, which were also priced at par. The foreign financing this week consisted of a single issue, that of $25,000,000 Austrian government international 7s of 1957, which represented the American part of an international issue of $55,000,000. The issue, which was brought out by a group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., was priced at 95, to yield 7.40 per cent. The bankers reported an oversubscription of the loan.

Utilities Are Off.

A block of $15,000,000 United States government noninterest bearing bills was offered to the public by a banking group on a 1.75 per cent basis. Although a sizable amount of new public utility financing is being talked for early offering, the aggregate of new financing for public utility concerns this week amounted to but $9,500,000, compared with $24,400,000 last week.

Only a meager amount of municipal financing was done this week and the total of such offerings of new issues bulked only $8,010,000, the major portion of which was accounted for by a single issue, that of $5,750,000 Chicago south park district 4s, which were marketed at prices to net 3.00 to 4.25 per cent.

The single piece of railroad financing comprised an issue of $1,000,000 Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville company 5s, which were priced on application.

Offerings by Groups.

The new offerings of bonds by groups follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Industrial	$32,450,000	$ 18,931,000
Foreign	25,000,000	48,600,000
U. S. government	15,000,000	....
Public utility	9,500,000	24,400,000
State and mu'cipal	8,010,000	45,351,000
Railroad	1,000,000	15,910,000
Total	$90,960,00	$153,092,000

In view of the steadiness of the general bond market it is expected that new bond financing this summer will continue to run well ahead of that of last year, when the market was the slowest in several years. Not much new foreign financing is expected other than short term loans, but the success which has attended the domestic financing, notably railroad and public utility, may encourage bankers to float issues now which might ordinarily wait until autumn.

BELIEVE NEW BOND FINANCING WILL BE HEAVY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—Unless present indications fail, new bond financing this summer will run much heavier than it has at this season in recent years. Take advantage of the present bond market to do your financing, is the essence of some of the banking opinion that is being given to prospective high grade borrowers. The market has shown comparative readiness during the last few weeks to absorb high grade issues if priced in line with the current market, but issues of lower quality have gone begging.

At the moment there is about $100,000,000 of new public utility financing being considered for early offering, with about as much more in early autumn, some of which may be moved up if conditions warrant.

Stockholders in Chrysler Corp. Nearly Double in Yr.

Stockholders of Chrysler corporation nearly doubled in number in the twelve months ending June 30, according to a compilation which has just been completed. Would You Like to Know the Name of This Stock?

WE now are recommending for immediate purchase a bargain stock whose profit possibilities are so outstanding that it should be bought by every investor.

This stock, selling at much less than ten times 1929 earnings, has not begun to discount the company's splendid outlook.

The stock appreciated 600 per cent., on an outright basis, in four years. Its performance over the next few years may not fall much short of this.

The company represented by this security supplies an industry whose 1930 business is running 124 per cent. ahead of 1929.

In the first quarter of this year, the concern reported better than a 50 per cent. gain in earnings.

We should not be surprised to witness a substantial advance in this security within the next three to six months.

Obviously, now is the time to buy the stock—while it is still available at bargain prices.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—An unceasing dribble of realizing sales by traders bent on getting out of the market for the week-end kept stock values melting away from start to finish of today's brief trading affair on the exchange. Practically all of the leaders gave way without a struggle. Losses among them ranged from a fraction to more than 4 points.

Some of the fast movers did much worse. Auburn Auto emerged from the day's mill showing a net decline of 9 points, while Eastman Kodak was off 7 and Case Threshing 4¾ points. Other sharp dips included Allied Chemical and Dye off 6, American Machine and Foundry down 4⅞, Columbian Carbon 4¾, National Cash Register 4⅝, Worthington Pump 3⅛ and Du Pont 3½ points.

Thermometer at Peak.

That the price swings were not even wider was due in part to the extreme lethargy of the market as a whole. With the thermometer busy registering one of the hottest days of the year traders didn't seem to have enough energy to cut loose with anything that might look like work. The result was that stocks just loafed along with selling, taking a leisurely pace and all hands refused to get excited about anything.

There was nothing in the overnight news budget to make itself felt on either side. Week-end business and trade reviews gave no encouraging information and were content with a mere outline of the present seasonal slump in business generally, and the day brought forth nothing worth while from any quarter.

One small time feature of the humdrum proceedings was an advance of United States Steel into new high ground for the recovery before profit taking bowled it over in the late trading. Westinghouse Electric also showed some life but it was likewise cut down before the final gong could come to its rescue.

Oils Under Pressure.

Trading in rails was quiet and without feature. Oils were under pressure, Standard of New Jersey sinking to a new low level for the current movement. Even Houston Oil, which has been doing itself proud for the last week or so, developed a run down

Top yesterday, $10.60; average, $9.60.

The hog market yesterday lacked activity but the sales made were steady with Friday's selling. Prices at the week's close were highest of the week and mostly 25c higher than last week's finish.

Due to the scarcity of choice light weight butchers, most transactions Saturday ranged from $9.50 down, although a small load of light weight butchers brought $10.00.

A wide range of prices represented the various weights and grades of hogs and the best sold up to $10.00 with heavy packing sows at $7.50. The general average price for all hogs was around $9.00 and that average was 20c above the average a week ago. Compared with a year ago, the average price was $2.40 lower and the top of the market showed $2.20 decline from that time.

Receipts Hold Steady.

Hog receipts last week at 136,500 head were about the same as the previous week, when 136,604 were marketed. A year ago last week the supply was 143,149 head. Around 50,000 hogs were expected to arrive for Monday's market.

About 4,000 of Saturday's receipts were directs to packers from outside points and at the close of the market there were approximately 2,000 held over for Monday's trade.

It was a rather disastrous set of cattle markets for beef producers last week. Receipts were heaviest of the year and prices declined to new low levels since the fall of 1926. Closing prices manifested $1.00 to $1.50 loss on steers compared with the previous week's close and in the case of butcher stock, declines of $1.50 to $2.00 were evident.

Receipts for the week were 52,900 head, compared with 48,273 the previous week and 38,527 for the corresponding week last year.

The week's extreme top price for prime steers was $11.75, paid early in the period, but at the close $10.50 was top. Top prices were the lowest for any week since August, 1926, and the weekly average price for beef steers at $9.45 was lowest since that time.

Beef Market Clogged.

Owing to the liberal supplies of cattle during the last few weeks, beef markets have become clogged again and prices have declined to new low levels. The outlook for the cattle market is anything but encouraging at present and unless consumption of beef is stimulated soon lower cattle prices are expected.

Saturday's estimated supply of sheep and lambs was only 1,000 head and most of them were shipped direct to packers from other points. Consequently the market was purely a nominal affair.

Receipts for the week, however, were liberal and a total of 73,100 head was an increase of 37 per cent over the previous week's supply. Because of the increase in numbers, packers were able to force prices down around $1.00 on fat lambs during the week.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Cotton goods as a whole had a better week as to volume sales. At revised prices considerable business was done in colored cottons. Raw silk continued to stiffen and more buying was reported. Silk merchandise was beginning to sell a little more freely. Clothing buyers have been operating on tropical suitings and light weight men's wear staples. Burlaps are believed to have reached a more solid price foundation and curtailment is under way on a large scale.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A change in sentiment more in favor of the buying side, especially on weak spots, was more pronounced in wheat than in any day during the week. Traders, however, questioned the ability of the bull interests to maintain advances unless there is more follow-up buying on all bulges.

The ability of the wheat market to absorb an immense line of hedges, with prospects of continued heavy selling by cash interests and weakening cash discounts, are being given serious consideration by those who favor higher prices.

Corn is considered as more of a leader in the grain markets than wheat for the time being. New outside buying, coupled with that of local professionals has carried prices up sharply, December advancing 6c in the last few days. There is a bear element, however, in the trade who do not believe that corn has suffered much damage and say that should there be good general rains it will be difficult to hold the present price levels.

Late cables from France report the wheat crop damaged by heavy rains.

CHICAGO PACKERS SELLING BEEF AT PRE-WAR PRICES

Consumer Should Benefit by Drops, They Say.

Larger stocks of high quality beef in packers' coolers and heavy shipments of corn fed beef cattle are forcing down current wholesale prices, according to leaders in the industry here. Wholesale beef prices are now at pre-war levels, the packers say.

"Fully 92 per cent of all cattle shipped to the Chicago market the last few weeks have been well fed beef cattle," Charles Wilson, president of the National Livestock exchange, declared yesterday. "Peculiar conditions have forced down prices, and the packers have filled their storerooms, making an unprecedented supply of choice beef available at wholesale prices the lowest in over a decade. If a person can't get fine steaks now, at lower prices, it's certainly not the industry's fault."

Say Retail Price Should Drop.

Butchers ought to be passing the lower prices along to the consumers, stockyards officials said. Retail prices of meats in many cases have been lowered in recent months, but they are due for a still greater fall to get in line with the stores of holdings on hand. Just as lamb was plentiful last spring, beef is facing the hammering down process during July, and predictions are for still lower levels before the downward movement of beef prices ends.

Officers of leading Chicago packing concerns said that producers of beef cattle, thinking prices might hold up, kept their cattle on the farms, on pasture and corn, and are now obliged to ship regardless of loss in price. These beef animals are of the highest quality. First grade steaks, the packers say, should be plentiful at prices the lowest since the war.

"It's not exactly a case of overproduction of beef catttle," said James E. Poole, veteran stockyards analyst. "Beef is one of the very few farm foodstuffs not being overproduced. But farmers paid too much for their feeder stocks last fall, and have been feeding them longer than usual, waiting for prices that dropped instead of coming back up. The result is heavy financial losses for the producers, but consumers ought to benefit."

Big Wholesale Reduction.

F. A. Benson, in charge of beef operations for Armour & Co., asserted: "All indications point to a bigger and better supply of beef during the rest of the year than for some time past. Beef is no longer a luxury; wholesale prices have been radically reduced, and it looks as though the time is here when every family can afford plenty of thick, juicy steaks and tasty rib roasts. Wholesale prices of beef today are 6 to 8 cents a pound cheaper than at this time last year, a reduction of 33 per cent.

"Furthermore, the beef coming on the market now is an exceptionally good average quality."

"Receipts of all cattle on eleven markets the first three days this week showed 92 per cent good quality beef animals, as compared with the usual run of but 72 to 75 per cent beef animals, and the rest feeders, stockers, or discarded dairy animals," said P. C. Smith, in charge of Swift & Co.'s beef operations. "This has been a big factor in forcing down the prices. Of course, a retailer may cut his price and reduce quality at the same time, but there should be no reason for it with present heavy supplies."

Regulates Price of Sugar; Board to Govern Sales

HAVANA, Cuba, July 19.—(AP)—President Machado today issued a decree regulating the average price of Cuban raw sugar fixed upon the basis of New York and London transactions and appointed a sugar commission to govern sales. Three commissioners will form the board. Consuls at New York and London will be instructed to employ specialists to study conditions affecting the market. The agriculture department will be notified of all transactions within 24 hours. On the basis of data thus obtained daily prices will be issued f. o. b. Cuban ports. Prices will be determined upon a basis of 96 degrees polarization, the unit being a bag of 325 net pounds.

COTTON PRICES MOVE HIGHER

Continued high temperatures, with practically no rain in sections where needed, have created a rather critical situation as regards crop prospects. It has also created uneasiness among shorts and has brought a little more attention from the speculative element in general. The market is regarded as a weather affair. Liverpool closed 16 points net higher yesterday, with spot sales 2,000 bales.

Reports from trade centers were more favorable. Closing prices were around the best of the day, with new crop futures in Chicago up 9 to 12 points and other markets 10 to 17 points. Spots in New York advanced 25 points to 13.65c, New Orleans was up 10 points to 13.25c, Galveston reached 13.10c, and Houston 13c. Prices follow:

WISCONSIN HOGS AND POULTRY TO MEET TB. TESTS

Statewide Eradication Campaign Starts.

BY PAUL POTTER.

With commendation to the dairymen, extension workers and sanitary forces of the state for carrying out a program by which all of the 2,000,000 dairy cows in the 71 counties in Wisconsin have been tested at least once for bovine tuberculosis and 52 counties placed on the modified accredited list because the infection has been reduced to one-half of one per cent, the Wisconsin Live Stock and Meat Improvement council points to a new battle front along which to wage war on live stock tuberculosis.

Through J. M. Coyner, field representative of the organization, control of avian tuberculosis in poultry flocks and herds of swine is to be stressed in a new program devised for the state. Experts have found a direct relation between the treacherous avian tuberculosis infecting poultry and resultant tuberculosis in swine and cattle, according to Mr. Coyner.

Inspection of meats, it is said, practically removes danger that meat from tubercular poultry and hogs goes into markets to be sold with quality meats. The meat improvement council points out that reasons for the campaign are based on the farmer producer's interests and have been evident for some time in premiums paid for slaughter hogs whose ears had been tattooed for purposes of identification so that accredited area swine could be checked by packers.

Pay Million in Premiums.

Two years ago these premiums in the middle west amounted to more than $1,000,000 paid to the farmers at the rate of 10 cents per 100 pounds of weight. This tattoo system led to the discovery that hogs were being infected with tuberculosis from poultry flocks in which it was found dressed fowls showed neck lesions traced to the disease.

Removing and killing off infected poultry and swine and increased sanitation measures are being encouraged to save part of Wisconsin's farm income based on nearly $14,000,000 worth of poultry and nearly twice as much invested in swine. The income from hogs in Wisconsin is the second largest item in the gross farm income table of the state. It ranks next to milk and above slaughter cattle and poultry.

Culling out diseased chickens individually from the farm flocks is too expensive a practice, Mr. Coyner says, except where the stock is valuable for breeding and egg production records such as in university flocks at Madison. The department of veterinary science of the University of Wisconsin advises testing every two months over a period of eight to ten months to detect new cases.

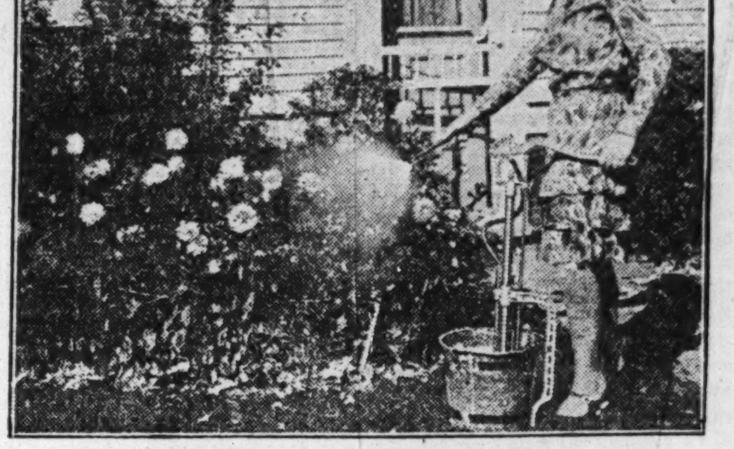
Must Destroy Infected Flocks.

In ordinary flocks where tuberculosis has been found, the entire flock should be disposed of after the laying season is concluded. One of the easiest control measures, it has been found, is to dispose of the year old chickens and not keep hens over that age as records of the university are used to show a decided advantage in profit for the younger poultry over that of those kept more than one year.

Green pasture range for both chickens and swine is recommended as a good sanitation measure in addition to aiding growth of young stock. Clean brooder equipment in the spring of the year provides a start to health for the life of the chick or pig.

Measures such as these are expected to show a change in recent studies made by Prof. Van Es at the University of Nebraska, who claims that chicken or avian tuberculosis was the cause of eight per cent of the infection in a particular lot of tubercular cattle that he studied.

RIDS PLANT LIFE OF PESTS



Sprays administered via the pump—whether from buckets, knapsacks, wheelbarrows, barrels, or what not—immediately become the "bugaboo" for insects or diseases which threaten vegetables, flowers, shrubbery, or trees. Such appliances are becoming increasingly popular, according to T. J. Charles, Chicago implement authority.

Harvester Company Gets Soviet Farm Tractor Order

An order from the soviet government, through Amtorg Trading corporation, for a large number of farm tractors has been received by the International Harvester company. Officials of the company declined to state the exact number. Manufacture of the tractors will begin at once.

QUESTIONS

TO KILL ANTS.

Recently you gave directions for a preparation to kill ants. I lost the paper and would like very much to have the directions which THE TRIBUNE advised. MISS A. C.

Reply.

Two general practices are advised for ridding ants which persist in building hills in gardens and lawns. One is to use powdered dry arsenate of lead mixed with granulated sugar, also dry, so that the poison coats the sugar crystals. This should be placed in and around the ant hill while the soil is comparatively dry. Another method is to enlarge the hole somewhat with a sharp stick to a depth of about 6 inches, pour in a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide and then cover the hole overnight with a rag moistened with water in order to hold the gas fumes in the hole.

LILY BUDS SPOTTED.

Please tell me what is happening to my lily plants. The buds are becoming spotted with brown and the leaves also are turning brown and falling off. What can I do to save the others? MRS. J. G. P.

Reply.

Evidently this is "botrytis" rot or "spot" disease, which is a fungus infection occurring in cool and wet weather and spreading until the weather turns hot and dry. Sanitation of the ground around the plants is advised, because the fungus lives on dead material and forms spores. Spray plant once a week with bordeaux, which can be obtained at any reliable seed store, or use flowers of sulphur, two ounces in three gallons of water. Diseased plants may be taken up, stalk cut off and bulb dusted with sulphur and reset in a new place.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

The upturn in wheat futures was taken advantage of by producers to sell new grain on a liberal scale and local handlers bought 425,000 bu to arrive during the day. All of the leading railroads have inspection crews working today, and it is expected that Monday's receipts at Chicago will materially exceed 1,000 cars, the largest of the season.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 542 cars; corn, 142 cars; oats, 30 cars; rye, 3 cars; barley, 5 cars.

LARD MARKET FIRM

Lard values were stronger yesterday on fair scattered buying, owing to the advance in grains and cotton, but met fair selling by cash interests. The foreign demand, however, was regarded as improving. Liverpool lard advanced 3d to 6d. Export clearances were 622,910 lbs of lard and 110,000 lbs of bacon. At the close lard was 2½@5c higher and prices for bellies unchanged. Prices follow.

SURVEY SHOWS WAGES STEADY DURING 1929

But Groups Show Big Gain Since 1914.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—Wages in the United States changed very little in 1929, as compared with 1928, according to a study compiled by the national industrial conference board covering the period from 1914 to the present time.

The lowest and highest average weekly earnings in the manufacturing group were found to be $15.60 in the southern cotton industry and $40.29 in the news and magazine printing. These figures relate only to cash payments, and do not take into account such wage equivalents as free or reduced rent which may be received in addition to the actual wages; such wage equivalents are particularly prevalent among the southern cotton mills, it is said.

Average weekly earnings in manufacturing increased from $27.41 in 1928 to $28.34 in 1929 and in gas plants from $29.86 to $29.98, while in the electric generating plants they fell during the same period from $32.76 to $32.69. On the railroads average weekly earnings rose from $30.79 in 1928 to $31.86 in 1929, while in agriculture wage rates per month increased from $48.53 to $49.19 in 1929.

Notes Wide Variation.

The conference board study notes a wide variation in the relative rise of wage levels in different groups since 1914. From July, 1914, to 1929, hourly earnings on railroads increased 152 per cent; in manufacturing, 137 per cent, in electric generating plants, 127 per cent, and in gas plants 113 per cent, while wage rates per hour in the building trades rose 136 per cent, and wage rates per day in agriculture, 66 per cent.

Weekly earnings, on the other hand, rose highest for workers in manufacturing, the increase being 125 per cent, which compares with 123 per cent for workers in electric generating plants, 114 per cent for those in gas plants, and 110 per cent for those on railroads.

"These increases in earnings and wage rates however, do not represent the actual gain to the wage earners, since they do not take into account changes in the cost of living," says the survey. "Expressing the above mentioned wages in terms of goods and services which they would purchase, it was found that 'real' earnings of labor per week in manufacturing were 40 per cent greater in 1929 than in 1914; in electric generating plants, 38 per cent; in gas plants, 33 per cent, and on the railroads 30 per cent. Wage rates per month of agricultural workers increased in purchasing value by only 3 per cent."

Highest Paid Women.

As to wages paid for varying degrees of skill in manufacturing, the study reveals that skilled and semi-skilled men workers in 1929 averaged $32.38 per week, unskilled male workers $25.49, and women workers $17.67. Highest wages per week paid to skilled and semi-skilled male workers, $45.74, were received in news and magazine printing. Among unskilled male workers, highest wages, $29.02, were received in the chemical manufacturing industry, while highest wages paid to women workers were received in news and magazine printing and in agricultural implement manufacturing, the average for the two industries being, respectively $21.36 and $21.34. Excluding the southern cotton industry, where wage equivalents are probably more prevalent than in other industries, lowest wages paid to skilled and semi-skilled male labor, $24.52, were received by workers in the northern cotton mills; lowest wages received by unskilled male workers, $19.47, were also paid in the northern cotton manufacturing industry; while lowest paid women workers were those in the leather tanning industry, who averaged $14.32.

With respect to increases since 1914 in weekly earnings of labor in manufacturing, the study discloses that unskilled male workers have fared relatively better than the other two labor groups, the increase for this group being 138 per cent as compared with an increase of 130 per cent for skilled and semi-skilled male labor and 125 per cent for women workers. In hourly earnings, the advance for women workers was greatest, the increase for this group being 160 per cent as against an increase of 148 per cent for unskilled male workers.

Groups Show Big ain Since 1914.

icago Tribune Press Service.]

ork, July 19.—Wages in the States changed very little in compared with 1928, according study compiled by the na industrial conference board the period from 1914 to the time.

owest and highest average earnings in the manufacturing ere found to be $15.60 in the cotton industry and $40.29 in and magazine printing. These relate only to cash payments, not take into account such uivalents as free or reduced ich may be received in addi the actual wages; such wage nts are particularly prevalent he southern cotton mills, it is ge weekly earnings in manu g increased from $27.41 in 1928 4 in 1929 and in gas plants 9.86 to $29.98, while in the generating plants they fell he same period from $32.76 to On the railroads average week ngs rose from $30.79 in 1928 in 1929, while in agriculture tes per month increased from $49.19 in 1929.

Notes Wide Variation.

onference board study notes a riation in the relative rise of vels in different groups since rom July, 1914, to 1929, hourly s on railroads increased 152 per manufacturing, 137 per cent, ric generating plants, 127 per d in gas plants 113 per cent, ge rates per hour in the build es rose 136 per cent, and wage r day in agriculture, 66 per y earnings, on the other hand, hest for workers in manufac he increase being 125 per cent, ompares with 123 per cent for in electric generating plants, cent for those in gas plants, per cent for those on railroads. se increases in earnings and tes however, do not represent ual gain to the wage earners, hey do not take into account in the cost of living," says vey. "Expressing the above ed wages in terms of goods rvices which they would pur t was found that 'real' earn labor per week in manufactur e 40 per cent greater in 1929 1914; in electric generating 38 per cent; in gas plants, 33 t, and on the railroads 30 per Wage rates per month of agri workers increased in purcha ue by only 3 per cent."

Highest Paid Women.

wages paid for varying de f skill in manufacturing, the reveals that skilled and semi men workers in 1929 averaged er week, unskilled male work 49, and women workers $17.67. wages per week paid to and semi-skilled male workers, were received in news and e printing. Among unskilled orkers, highest wages, $29.02, ceived in the chemical manu g industry, while highest paid to women workers were in news and magazine print d in agricultural implement cturing, the average for the dustries being, respectively and $21.34. Excluding the n cotton industry, where wage ents are probably more preva an in other industries, lowes paid to skilled and semi-skilled bor, $24.52, were received by in the northern cotton mills wages received by unskilled orkers, $19.47, were also paid orthern cotton manufacturing ; while lowest paid women were those in the leather tan dustry, who averaged $14.32.

respect to increases since weekly earnings of labor in cturing, the study discloses nskilled male workers have elatively better than the other bor groups, the increase for up being 138 per cent as com ith an increase of 130 per cent led and semi-skilled male labor per cent for women workers. ly earnings, the advance for workers was greatest, the in for this group being 160 per against an increase of 148 per unskilled male workers.

STOCK PRICES MELT IN TORRID DAY OF TRADING

Losses General Among List's Leaders.

at the heel appearance and was off more than 2 points at the finish.

The coppers reacted from yesterday's highs and the motors following their natural bent did nothing. Transactions were around 800,000 shares.

With nothing to do traders found time to take stock of the continued rise of the last week and indulge in a bit of speculation on the immediate outlook. A great deal of talk was heard to the effect that the advance —made in the face of day to day predications of a technical reaction— was more or less forced. In other words it had been due to a drive against shorts rather than the result of spontaneous demand for stocks.

Blow at Bears.

Professional operations have dominated the trading with public interest still at a minimum, according to the observations of commission houses. One group after another has been taken in hand and run up to the discomfiture of the bears, of whom the Wall street woods are full these days. Earmarks of such tactics were seen in the rise in the coppers, for instance, when they shot upward despite the bad news of a fresh cut in the price of the red metal to the lowest level since 1914.

Wary traders, however, interpret such artifical moves as a signal that the market is technically weaker and susceptible to a reaction. And there was a lot of button holding today and business of counseling caution until the course of the wind can be determined. Wall street gets that way when the weather is hot like this.

Weekly Debits Increase Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended July 16, 1930, by 238 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregated $1,523,368,000, an increase of 18.7 per cent compared with a week ago ($1,283,485,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,834,265,000), a decrease of 16.9 per cent was shown.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

Wisconsin—Partly cloudy, possibly showers or thunderstorms in southwest and south-central portions Sunday; Monday showers, cooler in southwest, slightly warmer in extreme southeast portion.

Indiana—Mostly fair, continued warm Sunday; Monday partly cloudy, possibly local thunderstorms, not so warm in central and north portions.

UTILITY CHIEFS EYE EUROPE FOR FUTURE BUSINESS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 19.—The rapid growth of large public utility systems in the United States in recent years, which has resulted in the formation of three principal organizations —Insull, Electric Bond and Share, United Corporation—and a dozen smaller superholding groups, has so far exhausted possibilities of further expansion by consolidation in this country as to turn the attention of leading utility executives and investment bankers to the electric and gas system of foreign companies.

Within the last few weeks and months there have been numerous instances of participations by Americans in foreign utility systems, chiefly in the great European countries, and there are reports of further impending developments in this direction. The backward condition of the electric power and light and the manufactured industries of most foreign countries leaves room for numerous investment opportunities, which investment bankers are eager to seize, in collaboration with the financial groups abroad.

Activity in Germany.

Germany, for instance, is the scene of great activity at present. The trend in that country is towards semi-private enterprises in which the states or municipalities will own a half interest. According to the Dresdener bank of Berlin, in Germany's electrical industry the percentage of private electrical works is declining in favor of companies under a mixed administration or under state or communal control. In 1928 public electrical works already accounted for as much as 20 per cent of current production.

"Considering the fact that in many countries electricity has not been introduced at all, or to a very small extent only, and that even in countries possessing an advanced electrical industry, the electrification of the whole economic life, especially as regards railways, agriculture and households, in many cases has hardly passed beyond first beginnings, it seems safe to anticipate a constant increase in the production and consumption of electricity."

Another factor in the European situation lies in prospects for international exchanges of power along lines similar to interstate transmission of power in the United States. Where interstate power transmission is about one-eighth of total power transmission in the United States, only one per cent of the world's total production of current is transmitted across political frontiers, according to the Dresdener bank, which says:

"The export of current is mainly accounted for by Switzerland, which— and this fact appears significant, considering her high degre of electrification and the possibilites of consumption given thereby—in 1928 exported more than 1 billion kilowatt hours, equal to roughly 25 per cent of her production, and by Canada, which in 1928 transmitted to the United States roughly 1,700 million kilowatt hours, equal to 10 per cent of her total production."

Expect Fall Financing.

The German bank attaches great importance to the abundant water power of Scandinavia and the Alpine countries in the creation of great European power networks. Italy utilizes 60 per cent of her available water power while Switzerland uses nearly 50 per cent of hers, with Germany, France, Norway, Sweden and Spain in turn using 16 to 39 per cent of potential water power. According to the Dresdener bank, the installation of water power is pursued with particular vigor by those countries which have either no other sources of energy at their disposal or only insignificant ones and wish to make themselves independent of the importation of foreign coal.

Both coal and water power will play a part in the electrification of Europe along American lines, however. It is American participation in the vast developments planned, in association with European bankers, that is being arranged on an increasingly greater scale which will involve important financing in American markets this fall and winter. Creation of long distance gas lines, even though natural gas is practically unknown in Europe, will be also pursued on an increasing scale abroad.

N.Y. Clearing House Banks Show Increase in Deposits

New York, July 19.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York clearing house shows: Total net demand deposits (average), $55,240,000 increase; time deposits (average), $16,139,000 increase; clearings week ending today, $6,384,799,303; clearings week ending July 12, $6,715,201,962.

News and Gossip of Stock Markets

Basis for Buying.

New buying of Texas Gulf Sulphur is based on the belief that earnings of the company for the first six months of 1930 will compare favorably with those of last year. Net income for the first quarter of the year was equivalent to $1.50 a share, about 2 per cent less than the March quarter of 1929. Earnings for the full twelve months last year were equal to $6.40 a share on the common stock, which pays $4 annually in dividends.

Spectacular Leadership.

Extending its advance to above the $200 level, Case Threshing Machine has been once more furnishing the list with spectacular leadership which recalls the many previous advances on this issue. The stock has never been one of large floating supply and for this reason things can be made very disagreeable for the short interest. Possibilities of a splitup still give it considerable speculative flare.

Reflects Improvement.

Chicago Great Western preferred continues to reflect the substantial improvement in earnings of the road this year and the belief that net profits for the dull twelve months may approximate $5 a share on the issue. This is one of the few carriers which has been able to show large gains in net operating income compared with 1929. Large blocks of the stock are held for the account of individuals who have made a close study of the company and its possibilities.

PLAN GIGANTIC POWER LINE IN NEW YORK AREA

New York, July 19.—Engineers of the New York Edison company, chief electrical unit of the Consolidated Gas system, and of the Niagara Hudson Power corporation, have completed plans for construction of a gigantic power transmission line that will effect physical connection between New York's largest utility companies next summer.

The project, which will link 5,000,000 h. p. generating facilities in the world's largest power exchange, follows closely upon the election of Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of Niagara Hudson, to the boards of Consolidated Gas, New York Edison, the United corporation and the National City bank.

CHICAGO BANK STOCK MARKET REMAINS QUIET

Chicago bank stocks last week failed to reflect strength of listed stocks with closing markets being slightly easier with little trade. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, after early sales at 617 was wanted at 621 with offerings at 623. First National Bank of Chicago improved from early sales at 615 to high and closing transactions between 623 and 626.

Foreman-State National also showed an improvement over early sales, being wanted at 621 with offerings at 624. Northern Trust company held steady at 585 to 590. Central Trust company, after selling at 330, was offered down 10 points at 322 with best bids in the neighborhood of 318. National Bank of the Republic sales ranged between 115 and 120, closing 117 bid, 118 asked.

Harris Trust and Savings bank lost 15 points at 755 to 765. Union Bank of Chicago again sold at 260. Peoples Trust and Savings bank was 5 points easier at 465 to 470. Terminal National bank dropped 2 points at 59½ to 61. Chicago Bank of Commerce was wanted at 144 with offerings at 147.

In the miscellaneous group, Chicago Title and Trust company improved 20 points at 470 to 473. Elgin National Watch, ex the quarterly dividend, was wanted at 33½ with offerings at 34½. Chicago Daily News common was traded in between 26 and 27, and the preferred was slightly easier at 90 to 91.

Packing House Review Cites Good Meat Demand

Armour & Co. in its review of general packing house trade conditions says:

"An excellent demand for meat continued this week, as evidenced by purchases in good volume quite generally throughout the country. Lamb business continued on a firm, broad basis, with supplies a little heavier than a week ago, but with all offerings cleaned up in good shape. Veal continued in good demand, with supplies, though larger than a week ago, still relatively light. Smoked meats again showed a good, healthy summertime activity, while fresh pork gave a good account of itself in most of the larger markets.

"The exceptionally heavy receipts of live cattle during the last two weeks have created an oversupply of beef, resulting in somewhat lower prices for both dressed beef and live cattle. Dressed beef prices now are at the lowest point since early in 1927."

REALTY MARKET SHOWS SIGNS OF NATIONAL GAIN

Building Future Looks More Cheerful.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Sounder conditions for improved real estate are steadily developing throughout the nation, according to S. W. Straus & Co., in a statement issued last night, following a nation-wide survey of the building and realty situation. In addition to pointing out that the rental situation is improving, the survey intimates that the present period of readjustment in the building field is nearing a much hoped for end.

The Straus index of building permits for the month of June was 60.7. This compares with an index of 59.6 for the month of May. Although a slight increase is indicated over the preceding month, this increase is not as great as that called for by the seasonal factor adjusted for trend. Taking into account these factors, building permits for June were 21.8 per cent below normal. Although this record is not as good as that for the preceding month, building permits are nearer to normal than in any other month except May during the current year.

Surpluses Being Absorbed.

"The data reported again make clear the fact that throughout the country generally sounder conditions for improved real estate are steadily developing," the Straus survey states. "Surpluses of building space which may exist in one type of housing or another in localities here and there are being steadily absorbed through the present letup in building activities.

"With this gradual trend toward well balanced conditions of supply and demand, the rental situation is, of course, improving in corresponding degree, by reason of the removal of surplus space from the market. A better tone thus is being imparted to the entire real estate situation, particularly in the larger cities of the nation.

"This does not mean necessarily that the present period of readjustment need be greatly prolonged. Following four years of very active building, the present cycle, in fact, began toward the end of 1925, since which time the trend of general building activities has been steadily downward.

Building Permits Fall.

"Prospective building throughout the United States during the first half of 1930, as revealed in official reports of building permits issued in 578 principal cities and towns, fell perceptibly behind the volume for the first six months of 1929.

"For the first half of 1930 the volume of permits was $1,039,037,000, a decrease of 49 per cent from the same period last year, when the figure was $2,036,334,000. June of this year showed a loss of 33 per cent from June, 1929. Permits for June, 1930, totaled $180,067,000, against $202,232,000 in May, a loss of 14 per cent.

"As a further indication of the increasing stability of improved real estate conditions, it is to be noted that the federal census reports now being announced reveal substantial population growths in the principal cities of the country. Increased population means increased demand for housing space of all kinds.

A City Within a City.

"Let us take for illustration the census reports covering New York City. This shows that during the ten year period there was a growth of more than 1,342,000 in population. To assist one in trying to visualize this enormous gain, it might be stated that New York City, in order to fulfill its normal housing requirements during the last ten years thus has had to construct another metropolis within its boundaries as large as the City of Detroit.

"Chicago, within her boundaries, has had to build another city larger than Washington or Milwaukee. And in all the other great cities of the country population growths have necessitated great construction projects such as office buildings, hotels, apartment hotels, and apartment houses."

Building Materials Lower.

The Straus survey states that weakness in building material markets was evidenced in June by further declines in prices. Some of the more important local market declines were reported in Portland cement in Kansas City and New York; common brick in St. Louis and Boston; structural steel shapes in Dallas and Pittsburgh; concrete blocks in Minneapolis and St. Louis, and lumber in Baltimore, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Louis, and Seattle.

There were a few advances recorded in prices of materials but these advances took place in crushed stone and gravel, the firmness being due to demand for these materials for road paving and public construction.

News of the Architects

M. Louis Kroman announces the opening of an architectural office at 180 North Michigan avenue. Mr. Kroman is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and he came to Chicago in 1924 from Birmingham, Ala. He worked in the offices of Holabird & Roche [now Holabird & Root] for three years.

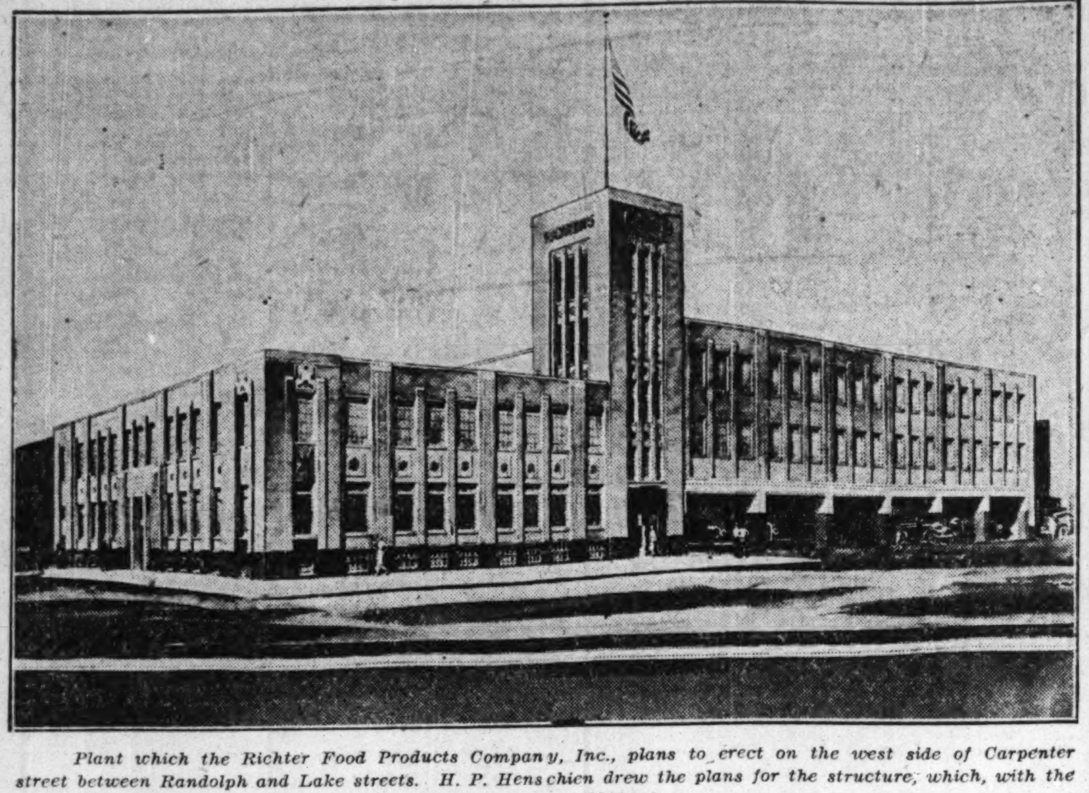
Charles Hodgson & Son announce the removal of their offices to 111 West Monroe street, suite 1616. The telephone number is unchanged.

The firm of Cable & Spitz has been dissolved. Max Lowell Cable is practicing architecture at 400 North Kedzie avenue. His phone is Van Buren 8300. Alexander H. Spitz continues in the Consumers building.

FOR MANUFACTURE OF FOODS



Plant which the Richter Food Products Company, Inc., plans to erect on the west side of Carpenter street between Randolph and Lake streets. H. P. Henschien drew the plans for the structure, which, with the land, is to represent an investment in the neighborhod of $500,000.

WRECKERS TO TEAR DOWN HUGE TWIN U. OF C. CHIMNEYS

Wreckers this week will start tearing down two of the University of Chicago's tallest landmarks, the pair of 200 foot chimneys which were erected at 57th and Ellis only four years ago. An unusual angle to this bit of college skyline changing is the fact that the Alphons Custodis Chimney Construction Co., of Chicago, which erected the twin stacks at a cost of $30,000 each, has been awarded the contract for demolishing its own work. The wrecking will cost in the neighborhood of $5,000 and will take about a month to accomplish.

The two soaring smoke conductors are not merely a pile of bricks. They were designed in the Gothic manner to harmonize with the Midway university's style of architecture. The north one of the pair will not be entirely torn down. It will be only half removed and the remainder will be recapped and treated architecturally. It then will be used in connection with the university incinerator.

These two huge chimneys were erected in 1926 and have been used for the university's old heating plant. A new plant is at 60th and Blackstone. This has no tall chimneys but uses stub stacks of only forty feet in height.

VALLEY BROOK COUNTRY CLUB ACQUIRES SITE

The Valley Brook Country club with headquarters at 155 North Clark street, has taken an option to purchase the 116 acres comprising the Thiebold holdings in Crete township, Will county, on which it proposes to develop an eighteen hole golf course. The land is on Crown Point highway, south of and adjoining the Lincolnshire Country club. It is expected the option will be exercised next week. The golf course is to be installed under the supervision of J. Colen, with Tom Bendelow as golf architect. Plans also call for a $50,000 clubhouse with accomodations for 400 members. Work on the development is expected to start Aug. 1.

START WORK ON $250,000 FLATS FOR MAYWOOD

Work has just started on a $250,000 apartment building at the northeast corner of 18th avenue and Madison street, in Maywood, which will contain seven stores and thirty-two flats. The site is 120x125. The owner is Alex Vaselopulos. W. H. Grotjahn and W. P. Koppenaal of John Cummings Lindop's Maywood office were brokers in the site purchase.

SAUSAGE FIRM BUYS MORE LAND FOR NEW PLANT

Will Erect Factory to Cost $500,000.

Since its original announcement of plans to erect a large factory at the northwest corner of Randolph and Carpenter streets the Richter Food Products company, Inc., sausage manufacturers, has acquired additional ground, and as a result will expand its program. The structure to be erected will be partially two and partially three stories, with a five story tower dominating the development. The investment is to be in the neighborhood of $500,000.

Additional land purchased gives the company a frontage of 370 feet on Randolph, Carpenter, and Lake streets, and the building, on which work is to start shortly, will occupy the entire west side of Carpenter street, between Randolph and Lake streets.

Of Plasing Design.

H. Peter Henschien is the architect who has drawn plans for the building, which will be of pleasing design. The exterior will be finished in face brick on a granite base, with terra cotta ornamentation. The interior will be finished in tile.

The building on the Randolph street frontage will be two stories and basement high. However, there will be foundations sufficient to carry additional floors when required. The rest of the structure will be three stories.

Unite Three Plants.

Three plants will be consolidated in the new factory—establishments at 2910 Armitage, 812 Lake, and 212 Green. Bruno Richter, president of the company, started in business about ten years ago with a small retail market in Jefferson Park. He conceived the idea of marketing sausage through extensive advertising. His idea bore fruit and the present expansion is the result.

A. W. Paullin, vice president and treasurer of the Milwaukee Sausage company, will be in charge of operations. The First Realty company was broker for the Richter organization in the purchase of the ground.

LEASE GROUND FOR THREE TINY GOLF COURSES

W. G. Hibbard of Ross & Browne reports the closing of leases on ground for three more miniature golf courses by the Metropolitan Golf Courses, Inc. The lots leased are at 3107-015 North Ashland avenue; South Shore drive and Coles avenue and the southeast corner of 79th street and Peoria. Adolph Koretz and I. W. Rady were lessors in the first lease and they were represented by Rosenthal Mayer & Lewis. The General Outdoor Advertising company leased the last two.

John Wheeler Purchases Harry W. Rubloff House

John H. Wheeler, president of the Lakeshire Cheese company, a subsidiary of the Borden company, with headquarters in Plymouth, Wis., has purchased the French Normandy residence of Harry W. Rubloff at 725 Greenleaf avenue, Glencoe, for all cash. The price was not disclosed. George E. Farwell of Whiteside & Wentworth was broker.

Cochran & McCluer Offer $500,000 Preferred Stock

The Cochran & McCluer company announces that it is making an offering of $500,000 preferred 7 per cent dividend stock. It is stated that this will be the first offering outside the organization, inasmuch as this stock will be available to clients and others.

WARD FARNSWORTH BECOMES ASSOCIATED WITH FRED M'GUIRE

Ward Farnsworth, who for the last seven years has been manager of the brokerage department of Gordon Strong & Co., has resigned his position with that company to become associated with the firm of Fred McGuire in the management of the Utilities building, the 208 South La Salle building, and the Chicago Bank of Commerce building. The firm of Fred McGuire, which specializes in the sale and leasing of downtown Chicago and New York properties, has offices at 327 South La Salle street and at 100 Broadway, New York. Mr. Farnsworth will remain identified with Gordon Strong & Co. through retaining his position as a director.

Hyde Parkers to Discuss Unfair Tax on Real Estate

"Confiscation of Real Estate by Unfair Taxation" will be discussed next Tuesday evening, July 22, at an open meeting of the Fifth ward division of the Association of Real Estate Taxpayers of Illinois at the Hyde Park club. A large group of property owners have been invited by Charles E. Fox, Hyde Park realtor, who is chairman of the ward division of the state association.

Pay $850 Per Front Foot for Indiana Avenue Site

The Western Paper Stock company has sold the site formerly occupied by it at 1452-60 Indiana avenue, the building on which was destroyed by fire, to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for an undisclosed purchaser. According to W. H. Bowers & Co., who negotiated the deal, the price paid was $850 a front foot.

BROKERS' NOTES

Gus C. Manos sails next Wednesday for Europe, where he will spend the next few months visiting England, France, Italy, Switzerland, Turkey, and his birthplace in Greece, which he hasn't seen since he came to Chicago years ago. His office will be in operation while he is abroad.

Harold Egan & Co. have been appointed rental agents of the Midland building, 176 West Adams street. They will have an office in suite 910.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

OUTDOOR LIVING ROOM IN HOME IS REAL COMFORT

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

We can't all of us run away to northern woods and breezes when the summer months arrive. We can't all of us afford cottages for week-end trips even. We haven't the time, perhaps, or the money—or neither the time nor the money!

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

But there is one luxury we can many of us afford, if we only put our minds to it. And that is the luxury of an outdoor living room in our home.

Because, unlike most of life's so-called "luxuries," this one isn't expensive. Therein lies its joy; it can compensate so richly the summer stay at homes, yielding itself for the comforts and delights of the moderate home owner as well as the wealthy.

We all like to be comfortable; weak and indolent most of us in certain moods and certain temperatures and that pleasant loitering place 'twixt house and garden, whether it be a sheltered terrace or lawn, an open porch or loggia or sun room can give us relaxation and pleasure.

Perhaps the "outdoor living room" is the most comprehensive way of describing this link which connects the garden outside with the rooms within. Certainly it is a blending of indoors and out and should by all odds be the gayest room of the house during the hot weather months.

Revolts Against Walls.

For centuries Europe has revolted against walls and roofs during the warm season. From France comes the outdoor café; from the Mediterranean countries the loggia patio.

And today, wherever one goes one sees the same renaissance towards color taking place in the outdoor living room as in other parts of the house. It must be colorful, first, last and always. It is a gay canvas, whether it be a porch or a terrace or a sunroom, on which to paint gorgeous colors.

Its very colorfulness is what makes planning this spot such fun, and many of the conventions that hedge one in in other parts of the house can be thrown to the winds and we can revel for a spell in dolling it up as gayly and vividly and startlingly as we like.

As for equipment, that can be simple or elaborate as purse and taste dictate.

If the outdoor living room is a small porch we see it with comfortable chairs, a table and, perhaps, if space permits, a couch or hammock; in willow, fibre, wicker or stick reed, to stand the unexpected shower.

Metal Furniture to Fit.

Again, if the outdoor living room is on the lawn, their are many varieties of metal furniture to grace it, and shading umbrellas vividly hued, with chairs and stool and table to match. Still again, if one's home fits itself to rustic effects one can use rustic tables and chairs [pieces which look like the old time models, but which are vastly more comfortable to sit on].

Indeed the sunroom and porch has never had the attention given to it as at the present time and it can be made to serve in various roles.

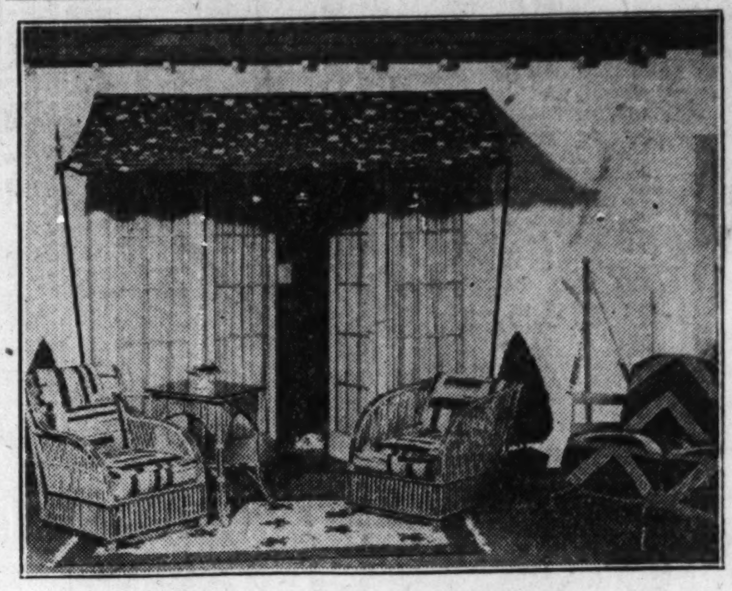
By a writing desk and table for books and magazines and lounging chairs it can assume more the form of library or study.

By tea wagons, coffee tables, smoking accessories, lamp bases and chairs it can cater more to the sociable moods of one or the entire family. Sometimes the outdoor living room is in the form of a second floor porch, open on three sides.

When modernizing a home such a porch is often added directly over the first floor porch at a small expense. Screened in during the summer, it can be used for sleeping and recreation and then, if desired, it can be fully enclosed in the fall.

Harmony of color is important throughout the furnishing, painting, flooring and general equipment of these various types of out in the open rooms. Where a porch is added to a house to give another room, its exterior should naturally match or blend well with the house.

WHEN OUTDOORS SEEMS BEST



The porch, the terrace, the garden, gayly furnished for the summer months, all add an extra room to any home and give luxurious evidence of hot weather leisure and comfort. On terrace or porch stick reed furniture is always suitable, with separate cushion seats for the unexpected shower. And, of course, the awning is not absent, of burnt orange with love bird motif.

SYSTEM WHICH BOTH HEATS AND COOLS A HOUSE

Serves in Summer and Winter.

BY HOMER GRANT.

(Have you some question pertaining to home building or remodeling that you would like discussed in this column? Then send it in! Address Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, The Chicago Tribune.)

Q.—Just what is the direct air pressure heating and circulating type of heating system? Is it true that this sort of system can be made to work towards a cooling of the air in the home in the summer time? A.—This system is an excellent type of modernized warm air heating, keeping the house at a desired temperature through large volumes of warm, humidified, conditioned air which is delivered directly to and circulated through every room in the house.

With this system it is also possible to lower the temperature in the house in hot weather by a cooling circulation of properly conditioned air.

Has Five Elements.

The modern pressure system consists of five distinct elements:

1. The humidifier which supplies the correct amount of moisture or relative humidity.
2. The heating unit which warms the air.
3. The filter through which the air is passed and purified.
4. The blower which forces it, under pressure, throughout the system.
5. Summer cooling of the house interior through the cooling circulation of conditioned air.

Any Fuel May Be Used.

With such a heating system, oil, gas or coal may be used as fuel. As the air in the home cools it is returned to the furnace for reconditioning and heating. Outside air is introduced in some instances.

Air is, by the working together of the above elements, completely recirculated, filtered, cleaned and humidified every few minutes. The precise warmth acquired is maintained by an automatic thermostat and a separate thermostat operates the blowers—these blowers operating only when the air in the heating chamber of the furnace reaches a definite and predetermined temperature.

50,000 USERS Can't Be Wrong
Hess equipments in every state in the United States, Alaska, and foreign countries have been giving satisfaction in the last fifty years and longer.
Now is the time to check up on your furnace—have it cleaned, repaired and put in shape by experts at a low charge. See the new Hess Furnace with electric regulator, automatic humidifier and forced air blower. It will cool your home in summer—warm it in winter.
The Hess AIRWATER Unit sends throughout your home a cooling circulation of clean air in summer—washed through a continual cold water shower. In winter it assures a warm, clean, properly humidified atmosphere throughout your house—with greater heating efficiency and economy.
Hess Booster Blowers about double the ordinary circulation of warm air in winter to every room in your home. In summer they furnish cooling currents of air. Quiet in operation, they greatly improve the results secured from your furnace.
Set the indicator on the wall at any temperature desired—the Automatic Heat Regulator will assure your comfort and save enough fuel to more than pay for itself. As necessary to your heating plant as a self-starter for your automobile — automatically keeps your home at the desired temperature.
AIR PRESSURE SYSTEM
If you are building a new home, regardless of the size, investigate the Hess Pressure System—the newest development in home heating. Perfect air delivery, clean, filtered and properly humidified, to every room in your house, summer and winter, assuring you of ideal conditions. This system eliminates all radiators. Be sure and investigate before you install your heating plant. The pressure system—using overhead flat, often concealed, duct work—is used for the finest homes and also for industrial buildings where air conditioning makes the workmen more efficient.
MODERN HEATING AND VENTILATING
Now is the time to check up on your furnace—special low prices and convenient terms of payment if you act at once. The new Hess System of direct warm air heating is far different from the old fashioned furnace systems. The Hess Welded Steel Direct Air Furnace is ideal for summer and winter. HEY, I THOUGHT WE WAS GOIN' FOR A SAIL??
WE ARE AS SOON AS WE GET THIS BOAT LOOKING A LITTLE PRESENTABLE! IT LOOKS LIKE AN OLD MUD SCOW NOW!!
AN' THESE WINDOWS ARE A SIGHT!!
HERE PA, TAKE THIS LADDER AND CLIMB UP AND SEE IF YOU CAN'T CLEAN OFF THAT ROOF!
I THOUGHT WE BOUGHT THIS HOUSE-BOAT TO SAIL ON - NOT TO WORK ON!!
WHAT ARE Y'TRYIN' TO MAKE OUT OF THIS — A' OCEAN LINER??
NEVER MIND FAWTHAW, WHEN WE'RE FINISHED WITH IT - THIS WILL LOOK LIKE A REAL BOAT!!
MOVE THAT FURNITURE OVER THERE, FAWTHAW! I'LL START ON THAT NEXT!!
HUMPH!! FINE SAIL WE'RE HAVIN' AIN'T WE?
WELL, NOW THIS BOAT IS BEGINNING TO LOOK LIKE SOMETHING!! DID YOU FINISH POLISHING THAT BRASS YET, FAWTHAW?
GIMME A CHANCE, WILL YA? WHAT- DO Y'THINK I AM — A COMMON DECK-HAND?
WELL, I CAN'T FIND ANOTHER THING FOR YOU TO DO, FAWTHAW!!
GOSH, YOU DON'T KNOW HOW BAD THAT MAKES ME FEEL, WINNIE!!
WE'VE GOT THE JOB FINISHED AT LAST! NOW DOESN'T THE BOAT LOOK NICE?
WELL, I'VE GOTTA ADMIT, IT SURE IS GOOD TO LOOK AT NOW!!
I'LL TURN THE SHIP AROUND AND FIX HER COURSE UPSTREAM!
WELL, I'M GLAD TO SIT DOWN AND REST AFTER ALL THAT HARD WORK!! NOW WE CAN ENJOY A SAIL!!
GEE, IT'S SWELL ON TH' WATER!

WHERE'S BAXTER?
I HAVEN'T SEEN HIM ALL DAY!
NEITHER HAVE I, BUDDY!
MAYBE HE'S TRYIN' TO PUT ON TH' RITZ SINCE HIS UNCLE JASPER CAME TO TOWN!
HIS UNCLE JASPER BROUGHT HIM A LOT OF PRESENTS AND HAS BEEN TAKING HIM TO THE TALKIES AND EVERYTHING!
I HATE ANYBODY THAT GETS "HIGH HAT"!
I JUST SAW BAXTER!
WHERE, JOSIE?
WHAT DID HE SAY?
HE WAS GOING IN HIS HOUSE AND ALL HE SAID WAS HE BET ALL US LITTLE FOLKS WISHED WE WERE HIM!
I WONDER WHY?
WHAT DID HE MEAN?
I DON'T KNOW! HE WAS INSIDE THE HOUSE BEFORE I COULD ASK HIM!
THERE HE IS NOW!
LET'S GO AND HEAR WHAT HE'S GOT TO SAY!
HEY BAXTER! WAIT FOR US!!
GEE! WHAT A FUNNY COSTUME HE'S WEARING!
MAYBE THERE'S A MASQUERADE SOME PLACE!
MAYBE!
WHY THE BASEBALL SUIT AND THE TENNIS RACQUET?
AND THE BOXING GLOVES?
YEAH! WHAT'S THE IDEA BAXTER?

GOODBYE! THANKS FOR THE RIDE.
SO LONG KID! GOOD LUCK AN' A LOT O' FUN.
YES, I'LL GIVE YOU A LIFT. WHERE ARE YOU GOING?
OH, I'M WALKIN' FROM COAST TO COAST, EXCEPT I'M TAKIN' A RIDE WHEN I CAN GET IT.
WELL, I'M SORRY BUT I'M NOT GOIN' THAT FAR.
I MUST BE A LONG WAYS FROM HOME. I BETTER BE GETTIN' BACK.

GEE, I WISH I HADN'T COME SO FAR. I WONDER IF THIS IS THE RIGHT ROAD.
SO HERE YOU ARE, SKEEZIX! YOU'RE GOING TO CATCH HAIL COLUMBIA FROM YOUR UNCLE WALT WHEN YOU GET HOME.
GOLLY, UNCLE DOC, I'M GLAD TO SEE YOU.
IT'S A GOOD THING YOU HAPPENED ALONG.
I DIDN'T HAPPEN ALONG. YOUR UNCLE WALT HAS ALL THE ALLEY BUNCH OUT SEARCHING THE ROADS. SOMEBODY SAW YOU TAKE YOUR FIRST RIDE.
PLEASE, YOU GO AHEAD, UNCLE DOC, AND TELL HIM I'M SORRY BUT THE RIDES I HITCHED ALL WENT THE SAME WAY.

SUNDAY IN THE CHICAGO MANNER—With a wealth of wide open spaces in the magnificent park and forest preserve areas about Chicago; with wide highways and boulevards leading to them, and with motorcars in which to travel, the typical Chicago family enjoys continuous week-end picnics during summer. A lunch, a Sunday paper, underneath a bough! Thus do dreams come true!

BEAUTEOUS BLONDES OF FILMDOM are seen blooming here—for no other purpose on earth than to decorate your movie albums! They are Miss Dixie Lee, who sings and dances for Fox, and Ina Claire, who is Mrs. John Gilbert in private life and looks as if she found life rather intriguing.

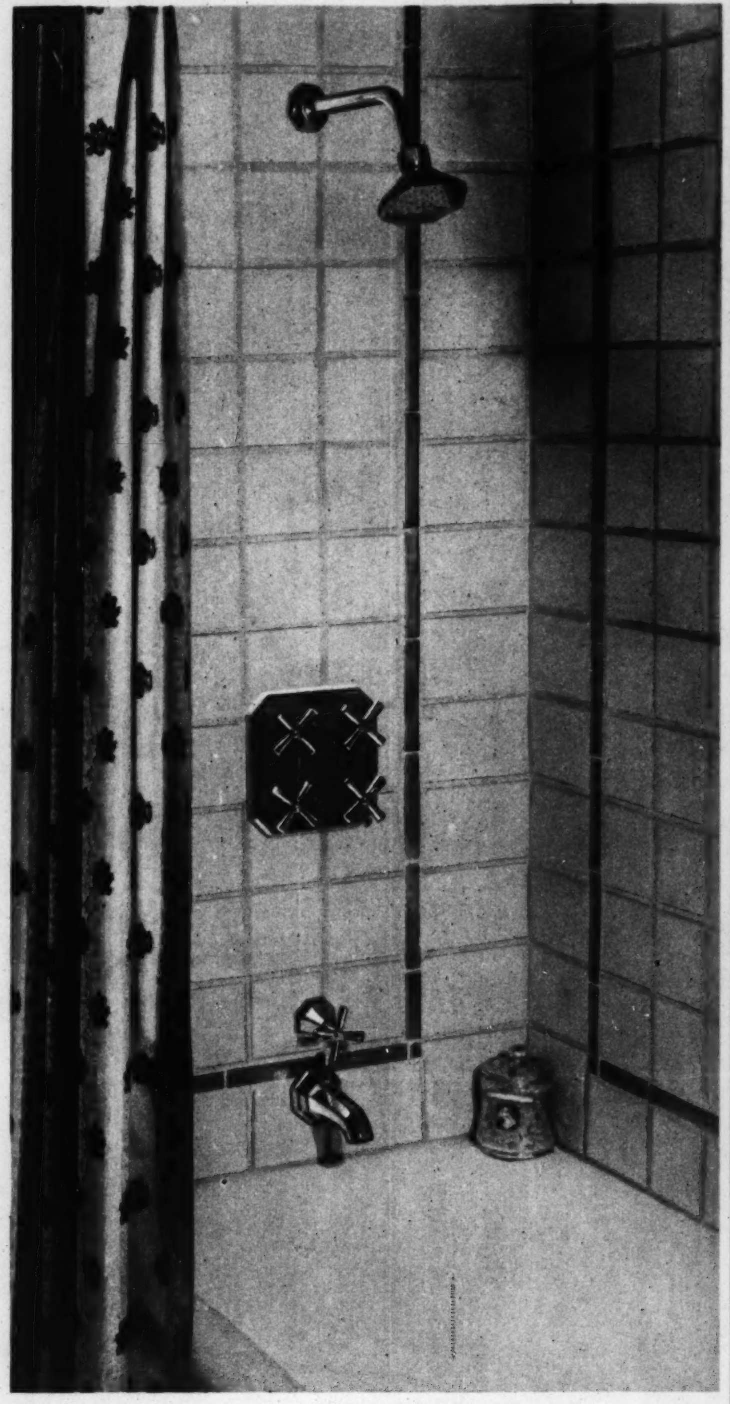
THE MERMAIDS THAT PLAY IN LAKE MICHIGAN'S SURF—Summer time brings vacation time at the Y. W. C. A. camp for business girls at New Buffalo, Mich., where these blithe misses race through the waves. Forty-three acres of beach, dunes, and woods lend their joys to the elaborately equipped retreat. (Underwood & Underwood photo.)

THE DANCE—The beauty of rhythm, expressed by Misses Billie Kilpatrick, Lucille Hepner, and Meryl Russell, appears in a theater of nature at the Y. W. C. A. camp. (Underwood & Underwood photo.)

IF YOU DON'T WANT TO SPEND MONEY ON EXPENSIVE REPAIRS AND REPLACEMENTS

Look at the vital inner parts

THAT MAKE YOUR PLUMBING SYSTEM WORK...



A Kohler four-valve shower with an engraved plate over a built-in bath—a charming and practical installation. In the Octachrome design.

- BELOW—A Kohler efficiency sink with swing spout faucet in the Dynamic design, equipped with Duostrainer—brings new beauty and utility to the kitchen.
- LEFT, BOTTOM—Kohler lavatory fittings in the Dynamic design—graceful and symmetrical—rapid and quiet in action.
- RIGHT, BOTTOM—The Kohler Duostrainer provides a tight water seal, a five-inch unobstructed draining area, and has a removable strainer cup.

GOOD BUILDERS today are especially careful about plumbing fixtures and fittings and accessories. They have learned that the bathroom will be looked at first . . . that the kitchen is more important than the sunporch . . . that the difference between good plumbing and doubtful plumbing will often make a sale or sign a lease.

It doesn't take a mechanical engineer to discern that difference. When you look at Kohler fixtures you see their finer design and finish. You notice their clearer, brighter, smoother surfaces—their perfection of detail. Each piece is correctly designed and correctly executed. And the quality goes straight through. The Kohler mark is a sign of careful craftsmanship, inside and out.

● Examine the working parts

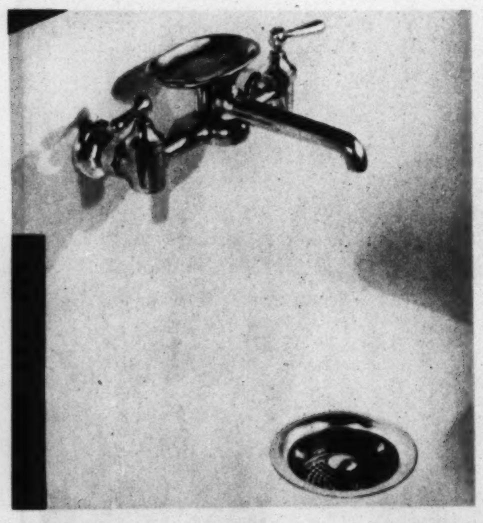
The heart of your plumbing system is hidden. Here of all places, highest quality is vital—special attention on your part will be well repaid.

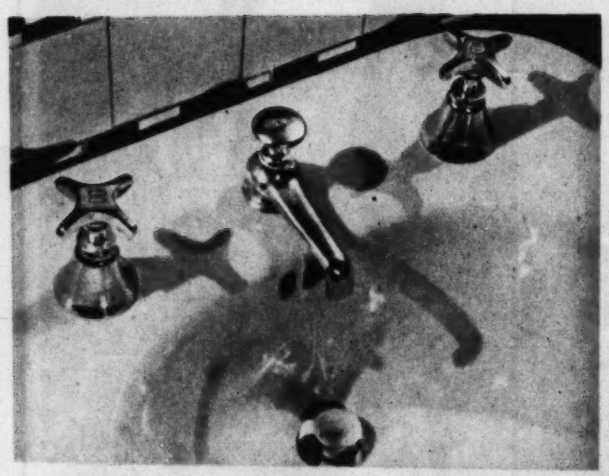
Kohler metal fittings are made of fine brass . . . designed as precisely as a piece of jewelry . . . cast, machined and polished with extreme care. They have fewer parts, simpler mechanisms, noticeably heavier valves, drains and connections. All these things mean easier, quieter and more positive action. All these things work for continued good service, for security.

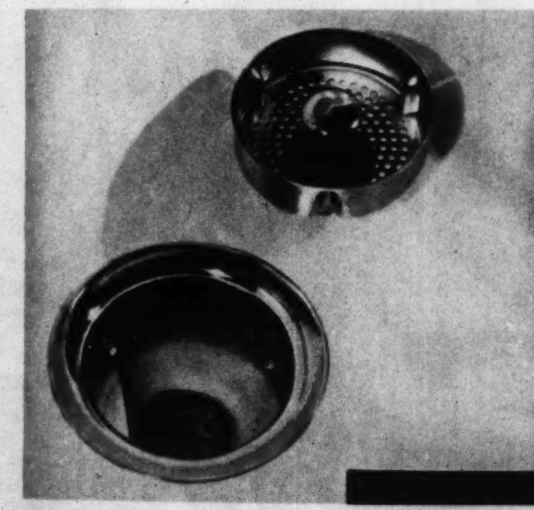
Prevention of plumbing troubles costs far less than cure. Years of usefulness are added by an extra eighth inch of metal at the right place. Whether you plan to build or rent, an hour spent in getting inside information will show clearly why Kohler fittings avoid discomfort and even danger . . . and how they reduce up-keep to the irreducible minimum.

Here, quality is the best possible investment! All-Kohler installations cost no more to put in, add to property value and save money in the end. If a million home builders were to broadcast advice about plumbing, their one major point would be—Avoid second-rate fixtures and fittings. It pays to have the best! Kohler quality is an economical luxury—one that brings yearly dividends of satisfaction, as long as you live.

A visit to the nearest Kohler showroom will give you a wealth of new ideas on fixtures and fittings. Any one who plans to build or remodel should discuss this important subject with his architect and plumbing contractor. Meanwhile, write for free Booklet H-7, which illustrates attractive groupings and suggests modern ideas about home plumbing. . . . Kohler Co. Founded 1873. Kohler, Wisconsin. CHICAGO SHOWROOM: Tribune Tower, 435 N. Michigan Avenue.







ELEVEN IMPORTANT POINTS ABOUT PLUMBING

1 Kohler designs are decorative, purposeful, correct.
2 Kohler enamel is made by an exclusive formula, fused with an everlasting bond and keeps its smooth, glistening surface.
3 Vitreous china pieces are sculptured for beauty and service . . . thoroughly vitrified at high temperatures and armored with a smooth, lustrous, lasting glaze.
4 Kohler colors are soft, livable pastels . . . the white is a perfect white . . . the black a clear, brilliant black.
5 Kohler metal fittings are engineered for efficiency . . . heavily plated with chromium, nickel or gold. They match the fixtures in style, character and quality.
6 Materials are the finest—manufacture is most particular. All Kohler products show craftsmanship and care.
7 This company pioneered many of the big advances in plumbing. This year's Kohler products are next year's new ideas.
8 Kohler quality extends to the kitchen and laundry—for every plumbing need.
9 Kohler quality costs no more . . . and saves money later.
10 Kohler fixtures and fittings are handled and installed by qualified plumbers.
11 Back of the Kohler trade-mark are the traditions and spirit of an entire community . . . beautiful Kohler Village.

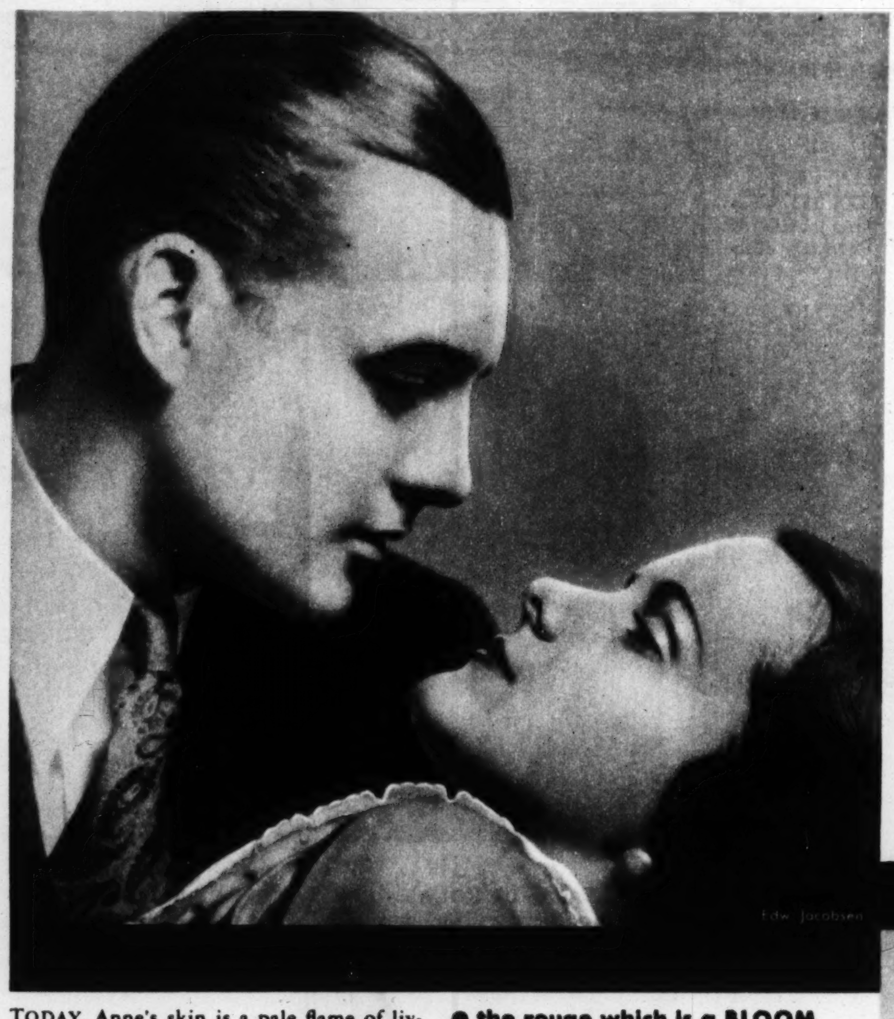
UNITED STATES TENT & AWNING CO.

Edward R. Litsinger, President
707 N. Sangamon St., Chicago



To think that once he said.... "Goodbye!"

Again they were alone. Anne raised her face to Phil's.

"Five years is a long time," she said. "Have I changed much?"

"Yes..." Phil hesitated. "You're even more beautiful...but there's something else—you're more disturbing, more mysterious, now."

Anne smiled as her thoughts flew back to the girl whom Phil had said good-bye to. Tall, with classic features..."cold and colorless" she had over-heard someone say. Her face had none of that sparkle—none of that arresting glamour to awaken response in another.

TODAY, Anne's skin is a pale flame of living color, glowing through a starry film of satin smoothness. It brings new depth to her eyes...it forces new lights into her hair. Her very person is a fragrant lure!

A provocative veil of Pompeian Bloom in Orange tint, an invisible dusting of Pompeian Beauty Powder in Rachel—these have given her the golden radiance. Anne is no longer a girl men say good-bye to!

● and Anne was one of millions

Pompeian Beauty Powder is the largest selling powder of its class today because millions of women have discovered that it is no ordinary cosmetic. For over thirty years it has been considered as fine a powder as money can buy.

Pompeian Beauty Powder never cakes but lies on the skin with satin smoothness...it clings loyally and lastingly. It never gives one that "powdery" look—you recognize Pompeian only by a lovely, fragrant skin.

Years of experiment on living models were required to produce the five 'Nature' colors of Pompeian Beauty Powder. Each is a blend of as many tones as go to make up the human skin itself. One of these triumphs of blending is a flawless match for your coloring.

● the rouge which is a BLOOM

A perfect companion for Pompeian Beauty Powder, Pompeian Bloom is of that clinging creaminess which veils the skin in an elusive, "shaded" coloring.

It is no solid, single-color rouge. Countless tones have been subtly blended to achieve five colors which have that vibrant quality which is Nature's own.

● the price is equally amazing

Because of the vast sales of these twin toiletries, Pompeian prices can be—and are—astonishingly low. In these days when murmurs of protests are heard on all sides against the growing cost of cosmetics, one is quick to appreciate the generous quantity of Pompeian Beauty Powder—exquisitely packed in its rich purple-and-gold box—priced at but 60c.

Pompeian Bloom is likewise 60c...daintily encased in its purple-and-gold metal box with mirrored cover and soft, firm puff.

● study your type

It is not enough to know your best points—you must emphasize them. Mme. Jeanette de Cordet—famed beauty specialist—has analyzed the 24 types of beauty, and her booklet shows you how to enhance your charms. The coupon tells how to procure this book.

Pompeian Beauty Powder

● send for new art panel

If you are one of the enthusiastic collectors, you'll rejoice over the 1930 Pompeian Art Panel. Gorgeously colored and masterfully painted by Clement Donshea—it has great decorative value.

Enclose 10c. You will receive the Art Panel—Mme. de Cordet's booklet—and samples of two other toilet necessities—Pompeian Day Cream and Night Cream.

The Sparkling Orange Drink

Crush-Dry

"an' a man can raise a thirst"

WHEREVER good fellows get together, Crush-Dry is the satisfying drink of the moment—a royal thirst-quencher and a drink that's really good for your health.

Furnishing the fresh fruit vitamins, uncooked, and all the healthful qualities of juice from the pick of the orange crop, it is skilfully blended with a dash of lemon and lime, and livened with sparkling carbonated water.

Crush-Dry, in its flashing jet bottle, has made a social conquest—is in evidence everywhere. It has put an end to "sludgy, squdgy squeezin'" in the pantry—serves every purpose of orange juice—imbibed by itself or blended with other beverages. At your party tonight, or try it in a punch when the bridge club meets.

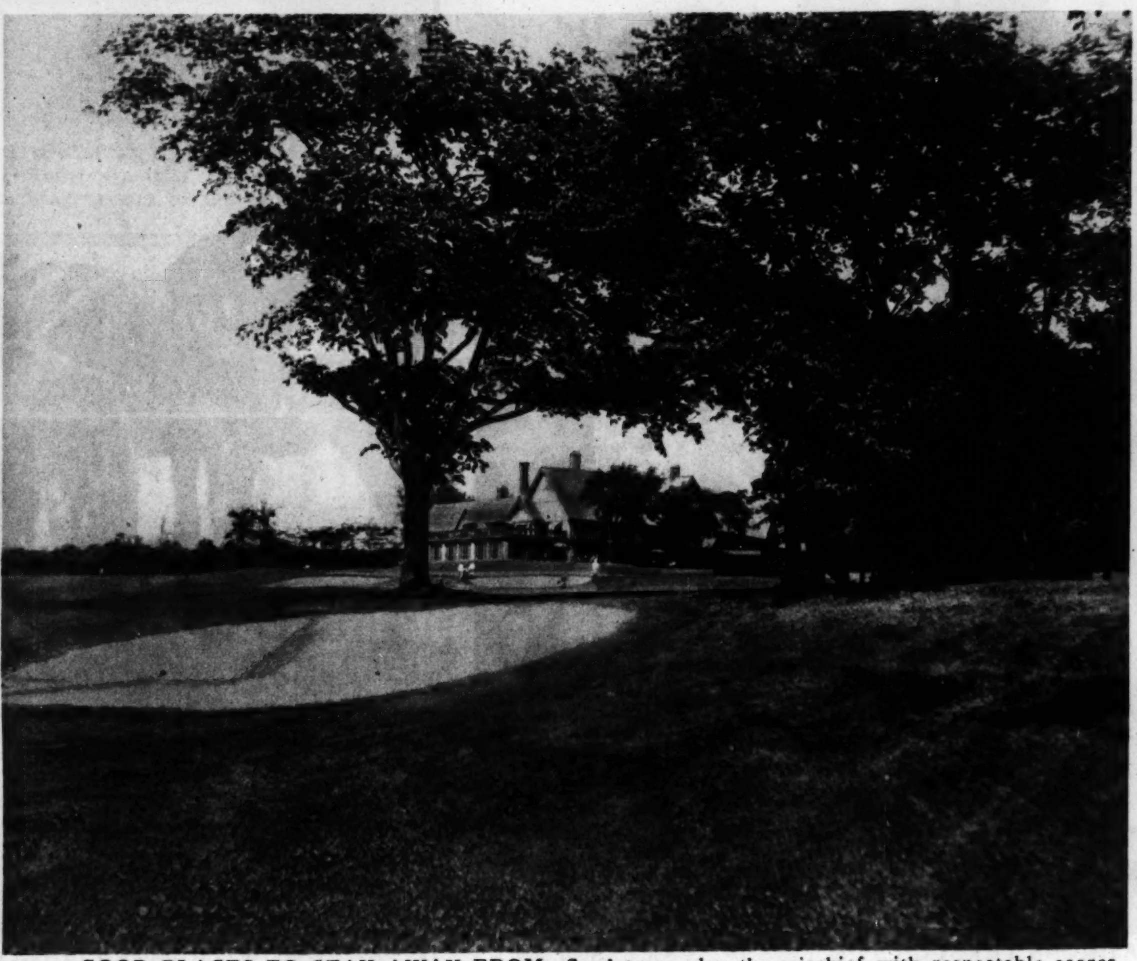
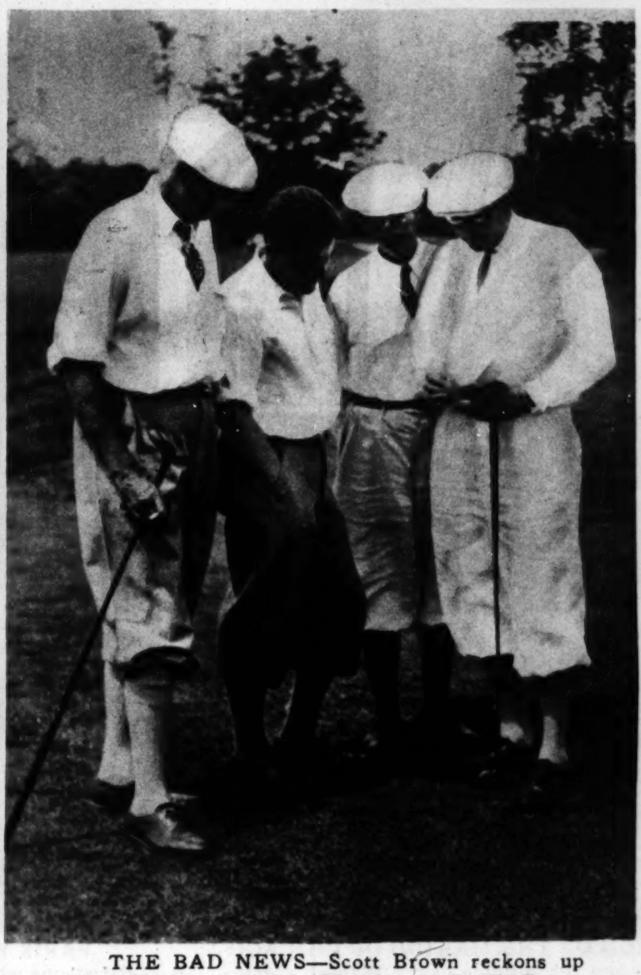
GOLF'S IDYLLIC SETTING AT GLENVIEW COUNTRY CLUB—Thomas R. Hair drives from a shade-circled spot at the initial tee. The other members of his threesome are William S. Lyon and E. Warner Coburn.



GOOD PLACES TO STAY AWAY FROM—Sand traps play the mischief with respectable scores in front of Glenview's eighteenth green. If it isn't traps, it's the woods. And if it isn't woods, it's the river, not visible here, where a fellow can dump his clubs when he quits golf in disgust. In the background, the inviting clubhouse beckons to the hot and weary sportsman.



THE BAD NEWS—Scott Brown reckons up the totals of a round at Glenview as R. W. Campbell, J. A. Kidston, and T. H. Eddy await the final and official returns.

WITH CHICAGO ADVENTURERS IN WILDEST AFRICA—Unusual scenes of the East African camera expedition of George B. Dryden and his son, Eastman, who returned from the dark continent recently after spending four months with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson making sound pictures of jungle life. The baby giraffe with which Mr. Dryden is talking things over was not more than two hours old when found. Its mother fled at the approach of the intruders, but the infant was too young to be frightened. It attempted to follow the visitors when they left, and they were forced to run to avoid adopting it; whereupon Mother Giraffe resumed her duties. Eleven lions, in the center scene, were quarreling over a kill so fiercely that they permitted Mr. Dryden to walk right up. Then they scattered, each making off with a portion of meat. The rhinoceros at the right was a trophy of Mr. Dryden's gun. Mr. Johnson described it as the biggest he had even seen. It is of special interest to Chicagoans to recall that such creatures of the wild as these will be seen in natural settings at the Riverside zoo.

BREWED EXACTLY LIKE the BEER you loved

The best malt-and-hop brew we ever created is at your command today. It is called Atlas Special Brew.

Brewed from the finest barley malt and Bohemian hops. Aged for months, as in the old days. Pasteurized after bottling.

The zest is there, the sparkle and foam, the flavor and aroma. The digestive helps are in it, and the aids to sleep. The tonic qualities, the soothing factors, the delights are there.

Not a Makeshift

Atlas Special Brew is not a "near-beer," not an imitation. Never was a malt-and-hop brew made with more care and skill.

There was never a purer brew. Even the water we use is specially treated to match the brews of Europe. Each bottle is certified.

Less Alcohol—That's All

Less alcohol, of course, but that you will not miss. Were you told that this was an old reserve, you could not discover the difference.

Atlas Special Brew has the old soothing effects. Drink it at bedtime as an aid to sleep. It has the diastase and peptase. Drink it at mealtime as a help to digestion. It has the esters and aldehydes—invigorators. It has the hops. Drink it as a tonic. It has all you loved of flavor and sparkle in the old-time brews.

Don't go without it. Above all, don't substitute with something wretched and impure.

Taste this Atlas Special Brew. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, delivered to your door. Just ask your dealer or phone us. Over 15,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states supply it. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. Atlas Brewing Company, 2107 Blue Island Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Twenty phones: Call Canal 6200 or Roosevelt 4500.

LIFE LINE CHART

Feed Them Right
and How They Grow

Look at this proud mother and father measuring their boy's height on Thompson's Life Line Chart. No wonder they are happy!

Two years ago the lad was two inches under average height for his age—and even ten pounds under weight for his height. But now he's up to normal in height and even a few pounds over average in weight. How did this boy make this astonishing progress?

Just one simple change accomplished the whole thing. Instead of urging him to drink a glass of raw milk two or three times a day mother added two teaspoonsful of Thompson's Chocolate Malted Milk to the raw milk. After that he needed no urging.

The added food value in Thompson's gave this boy the extra nourishment he needed to grow at the proper rate. Sturdier bones and stronger muscles came naturally. His stomach very easily handled the additional food in this form, because Thompson's "Double Malted" process makes the most quickly digestible food.

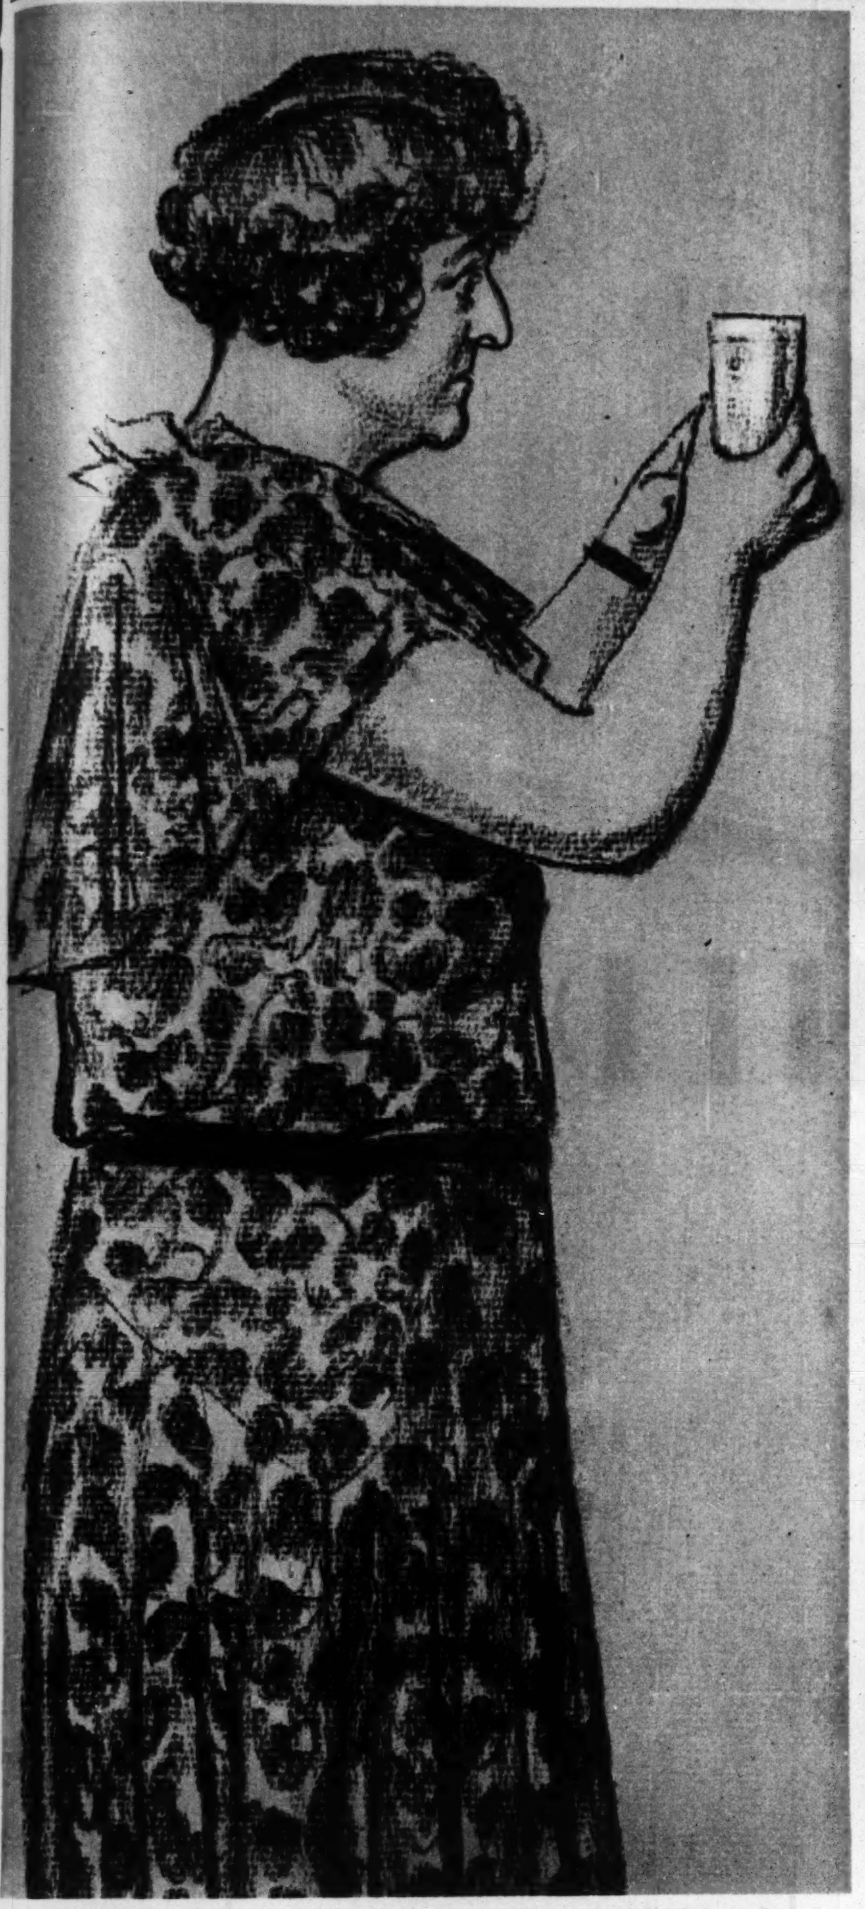
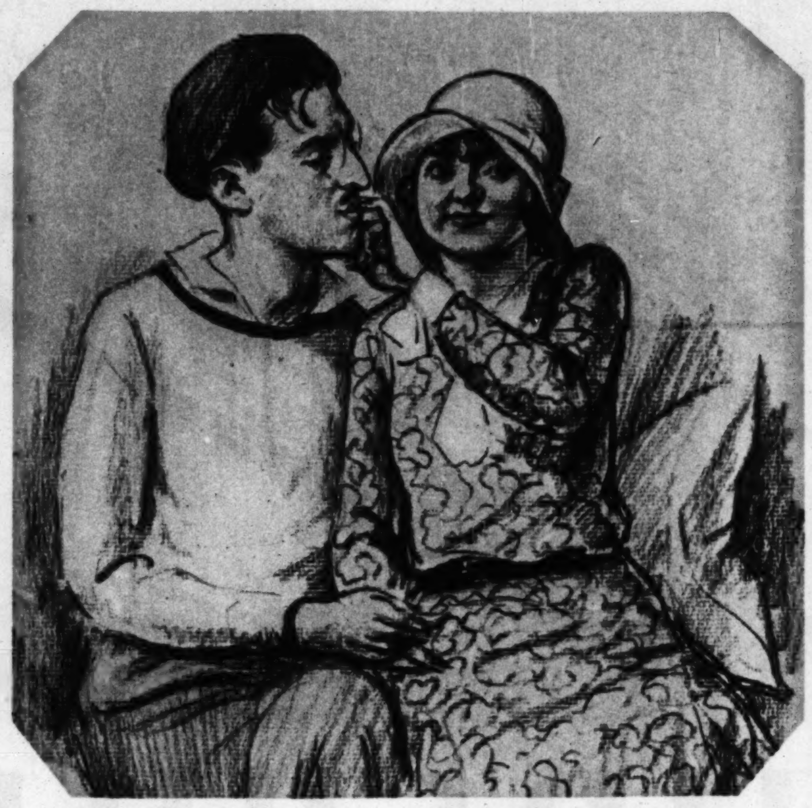
The Bungalow Guests

By W. E. Hill

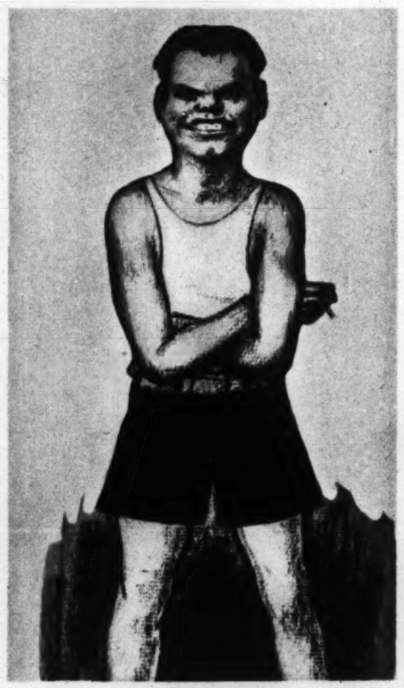
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]



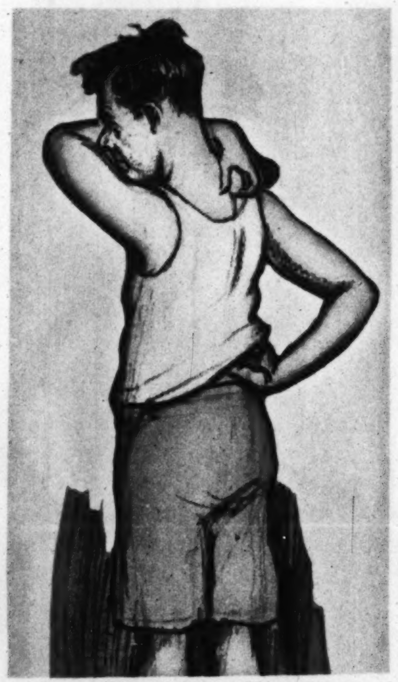
The careful relation. Aunt Thisbe is stopping at Cousin Edith's bungalow for the heated term, and is very suspicious of the food and drink. "Edith, this tongue tastes of the tin," Cousin Thisbe will inform the supper table. "Wouldn't it be terrible if we all got ptomaine, way out here on the lake!" Cousin Thisbe wants the well water analyzed. Only the other day she saw a Louise bug and a tadpole with a long evil face in a glass of well water!



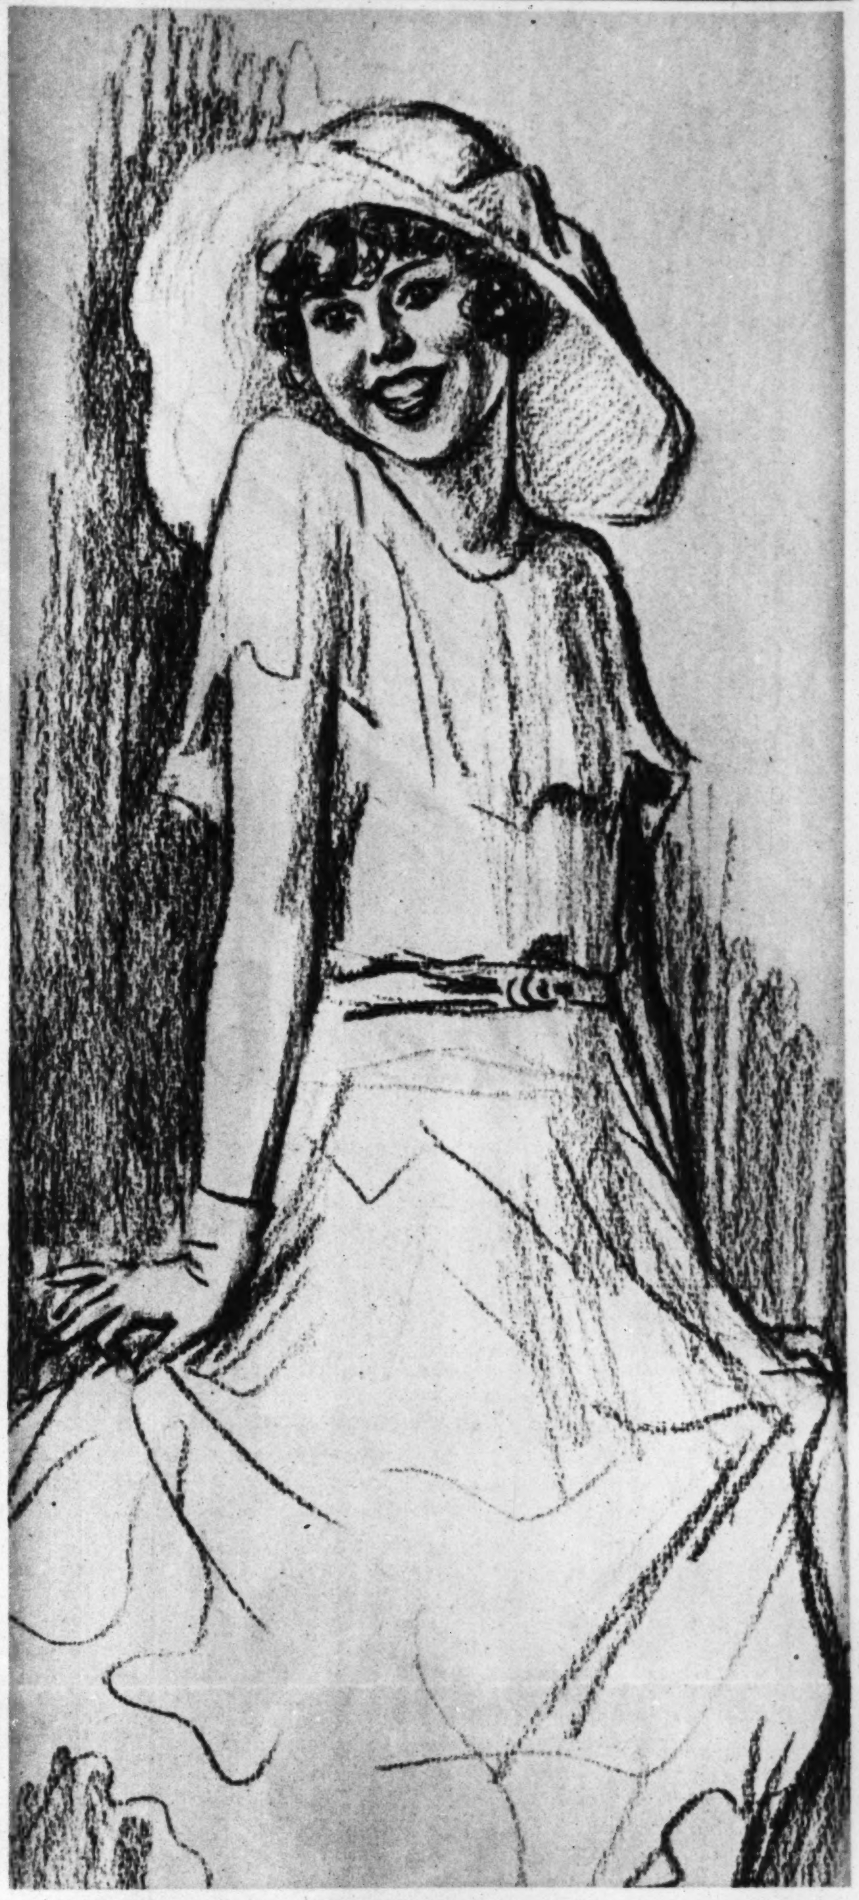
Bride and bridegroom. Bungalow dwellers, even those who summer far off from civilized haunts, should bear in mind that a recently married couple will cause much embarrassment at close quarters. A hired man will do the chores indifferently, and a cook—a cold hearted Finnish cook at that—has been known to put vanilla flavoring in meat balls, after watching Honey chew the ends of Precious Lamb's fingers.



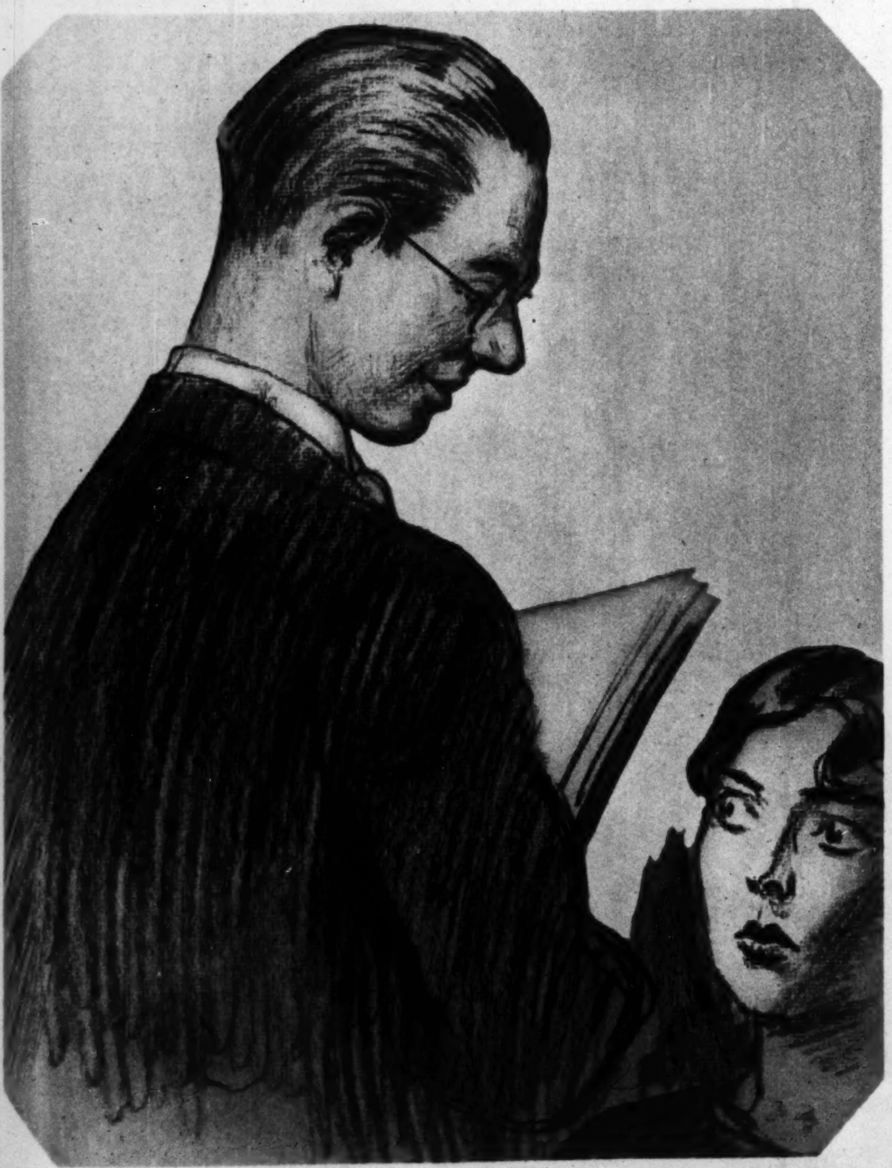
The lout. Just one of those healthy, bouncing boys who can be heard distinctly a mile away, and a great trial in a small bungalow. Usually leaves a screen door open, thereby allowing free access to the interior to all the bugs and beetles without.



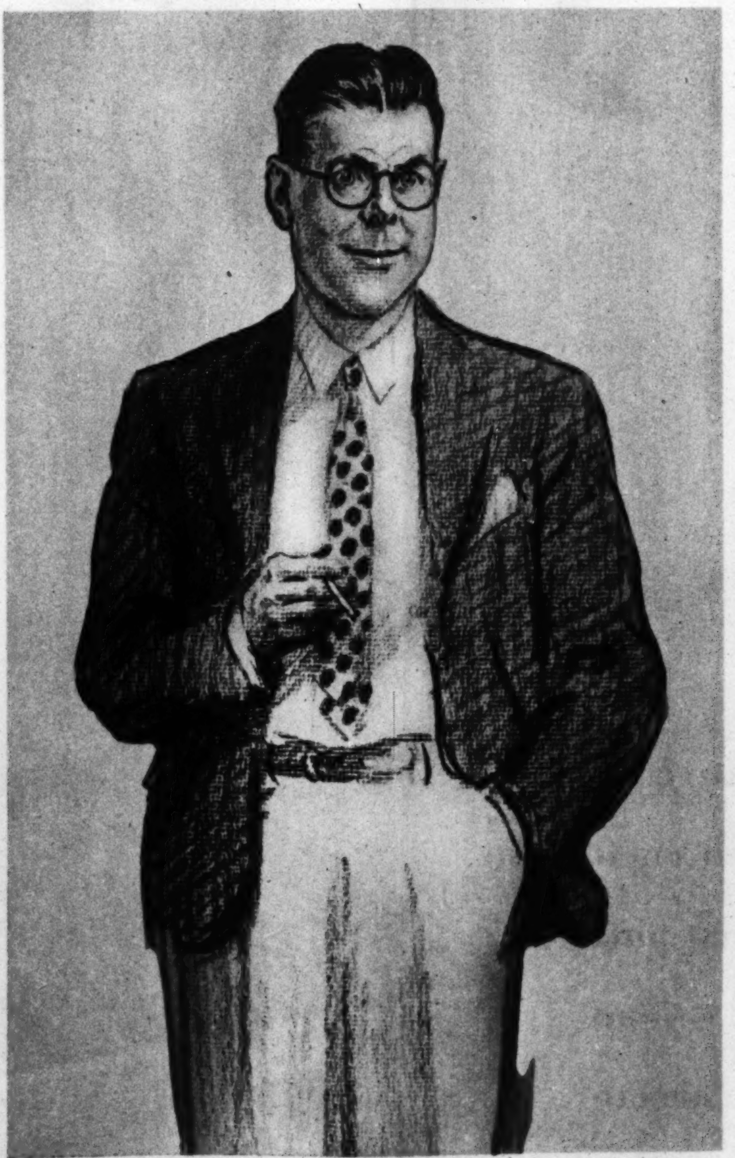
The delicate male. No summer bungalow season is complete without a visit from the young man who is a prey to red ants, mosquitoes, wasps, canned shrimps, poison ivy, hay fever, strawberry rash, or sunburn. Always scratching, for some cause or other, and hunting an antidote.



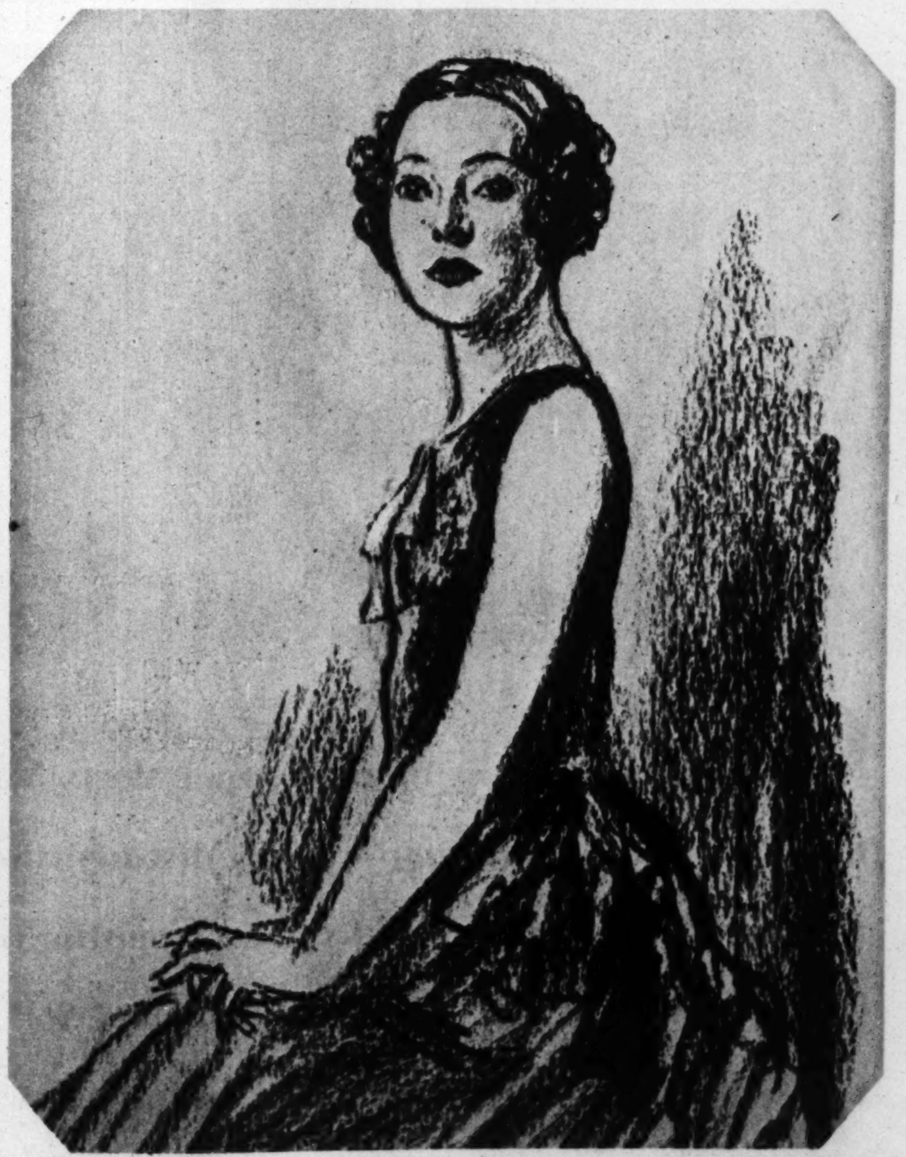
The too-appreciative girl. Some girls are too energetic and too up-and-at-'em for a small summer bungalow. Grace is one such. She loves everything to death, is simply mad about the weather, the bungalow, the people in it, those near to it, and screams, "Some fun, hey, kid?" at the most meager provocation. Oftentimes at none.



The literary guest. A visitor with a great love of good literature sounds like a splendid addition to a summer bungalow, but there is just one drawback. Never the rose without its thorn, you know. Such a guest, even the most well mannered and soft spoken, will follow you around from room to room, from sleeping porch to linen closet, with the firm intent of reading aloud bits and oddments from the latest biography. "Do listen to this," he or she will gurgle; "isn't it choice, what Martin Luther said to the wife of the bishop of Nantes when she accused him of autonomy!"



A Hungry Five fan. A radio fan as a bungalow guest is all very well. But a close follower of Louie and his band should never be encouraged, even in the environs of a summer bungalow. He will delight in following one around all the while relating snatches of what happened to the five last night and why.



The girl with letters to write. Some guests, the very minute they are installed in a bungalow colony, begin to write letters home, which, of course, means a stamp or two. And stamps are the last items to be found in a summer bungalow. Such a guest will, of necessity, spend much of her visit wandering from bungalow to bungalow, clutching a coin, saying plaintively, "Can you let me have an air stamp?"

Good taste is more than wrapper deep. Van Dyck is fine all through, mild all through—it is a distinguished cigar from the outside in—a delightful smoke from the first puff to the last. Look for "The Distinguished Set" — Van Dyck Banker, Invincible, Corona, and the new Selecto — in cigar cases everywhere. You'll like Van Dyck.

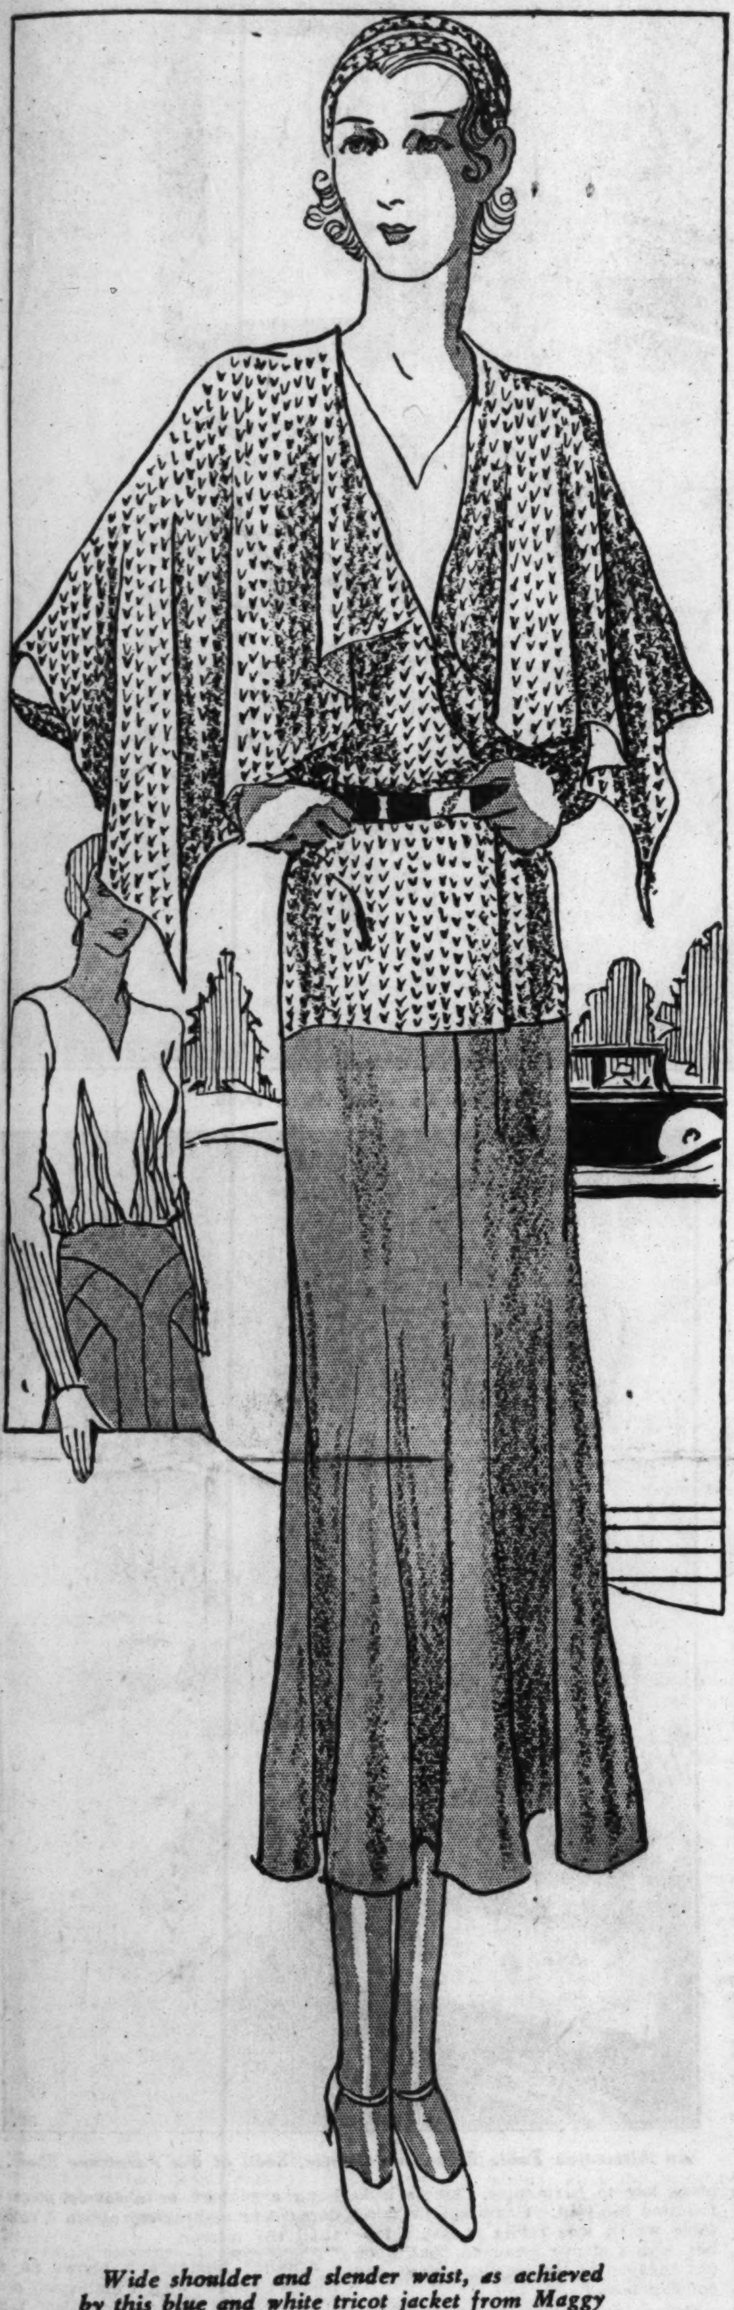
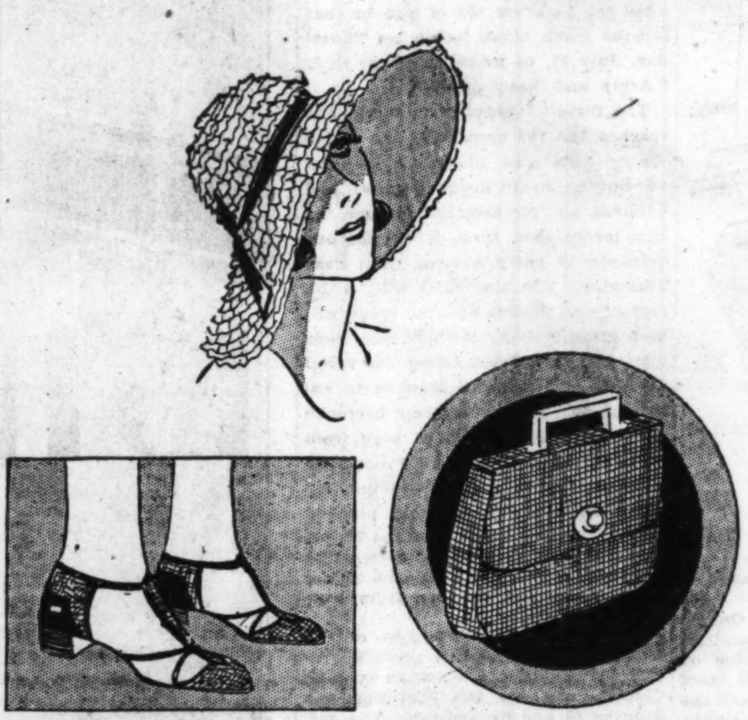
PARIS CREATIONS FOR THE JEUNE FILLE

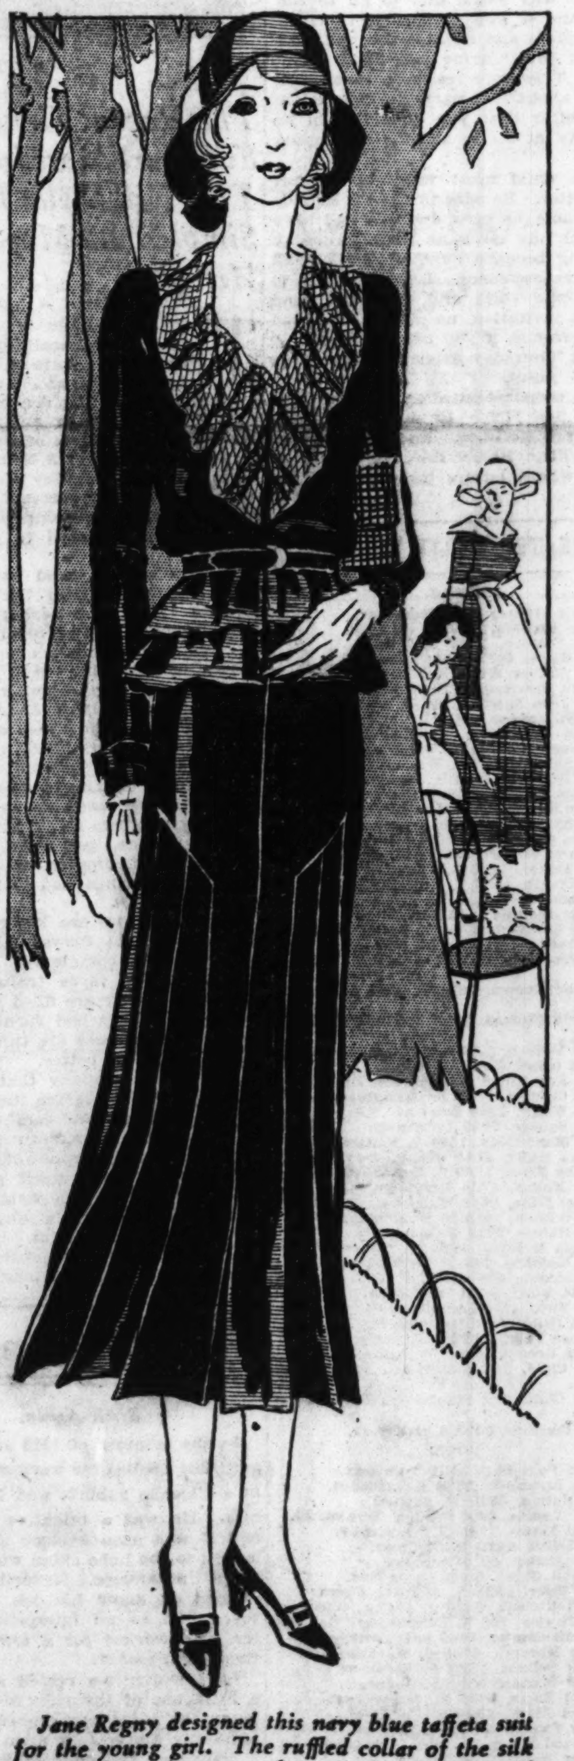
Mademoiselle, Finding the Modern Trend Too Sophisticated for Her Youthful Outlook, Cajoles More Individual Styles from the Couturiers



Wide shoulder and slender waist, as achieved by this blue and white tricot jacket from Maggy Rouff, are much prized in Paris. The dress is white tricot trimmed with blue and white.



Courtier makes this new kind of satchel of black straw with prystal mountings. This is Patou's tulle ruffled hat for flapper faces. It's bound with turquoise velvet ribbon. Paris likes these low-heeled Enzel sandals of black lizard and patent leather.



Jane Regny designed this navy blue taffeta suit for the young girl. The ruffled collar of the silk jersey blouse lies over the collarless neckline of the jacket.

Paris Snapshots

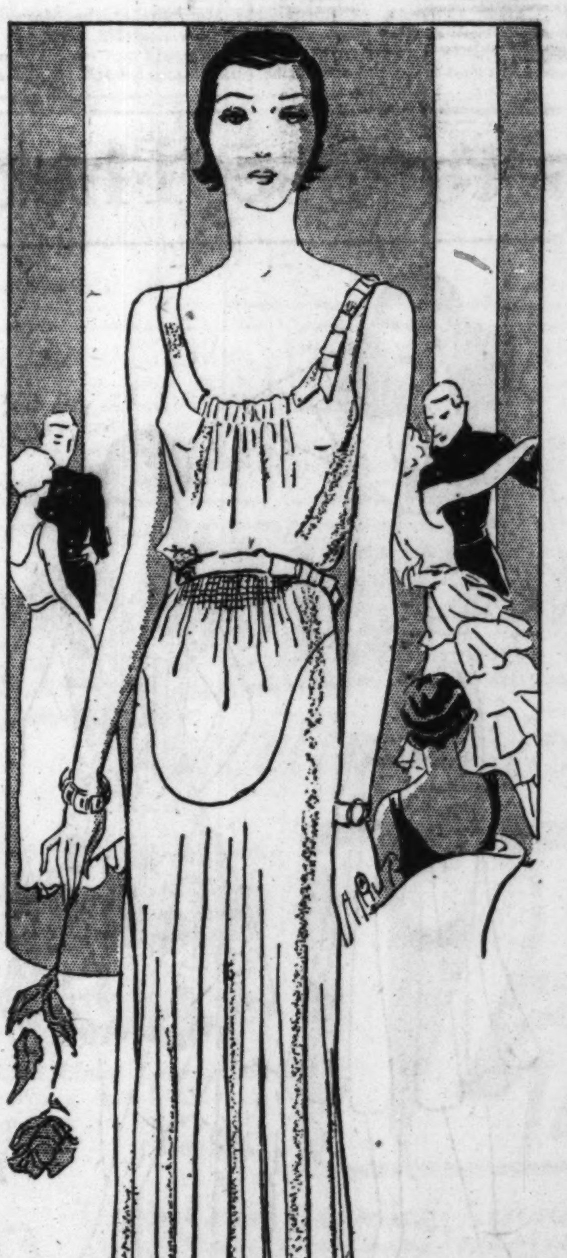
¶Novel artificial flowers for the lapel of your tailored suit are made of loops of string by Courtier. Schiaparelli is making summer suits of a beautiful soft cloth that is made entirely of string.

¶Paris milliners announce every shade of green, dark red, black, and vivid blue for fall hats made of velvet.

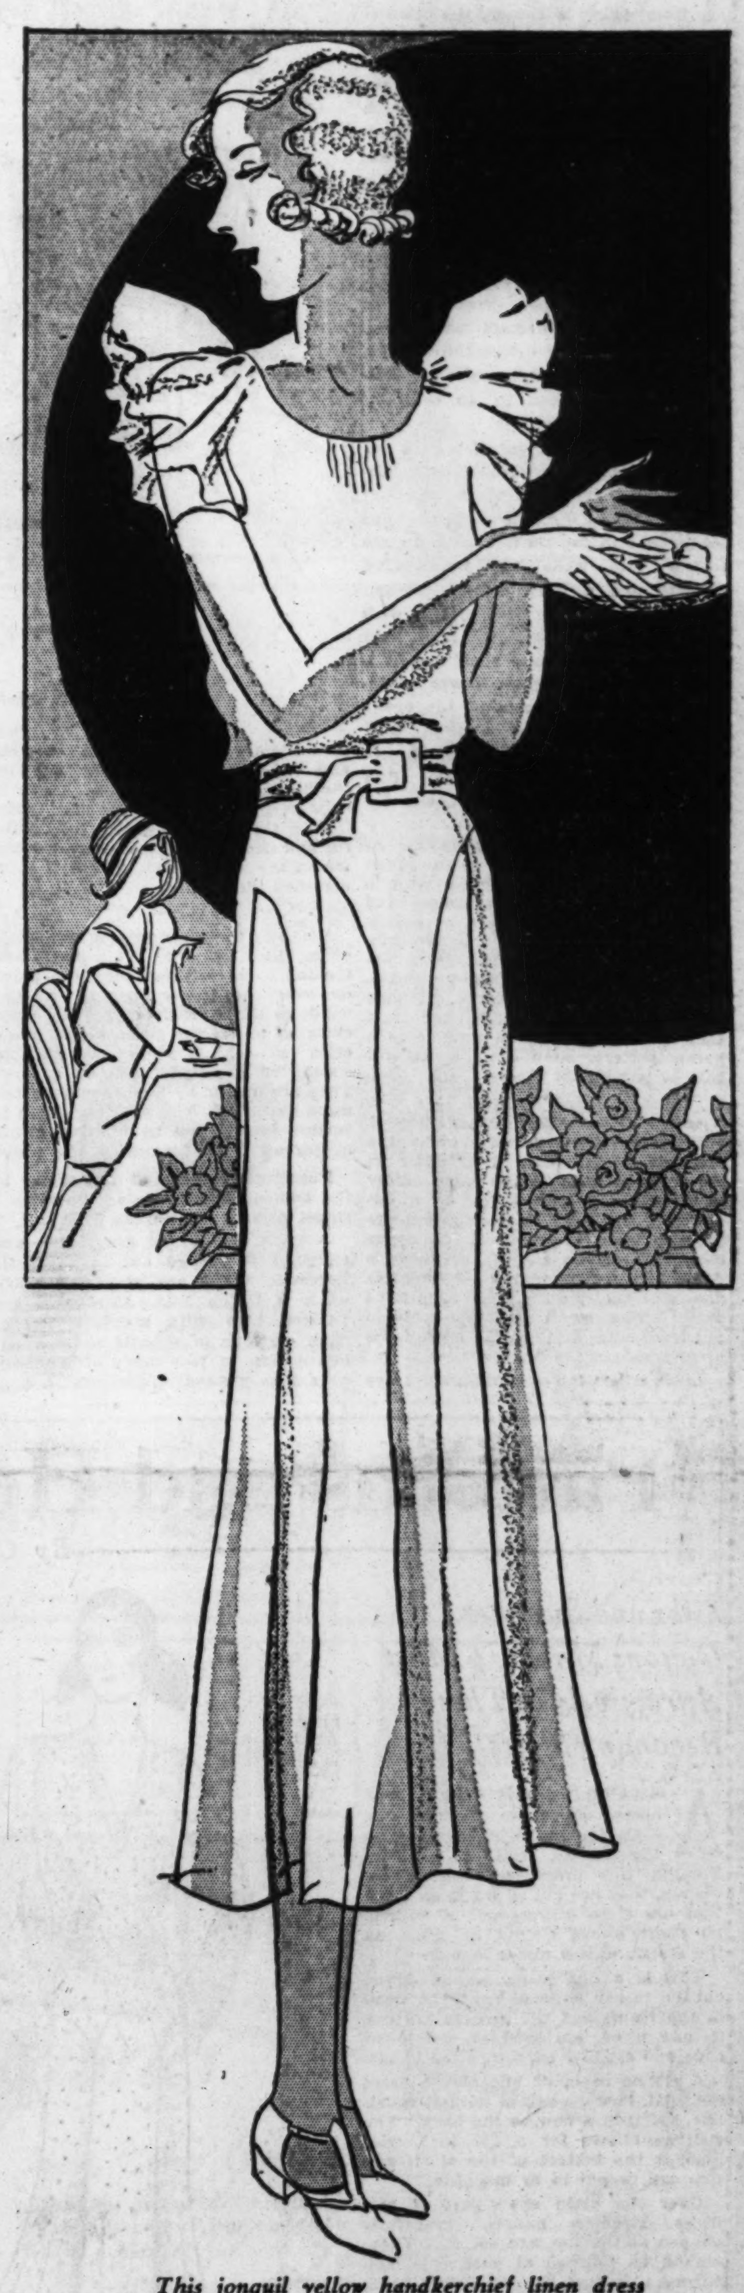
¶The last word in a week-end bag is a satchel designed by Worth and made of material to match your going away suit. It is lined with calfskin and the soap bag and toilet case inside are also made of material to match your suit.

¶Worth reports that his summer brides have abandoned satin and are getting married in georgette or faille. They found white a bit stale also and prefer pale pink or pearl.

¶Schiaparelli has a new bathing suit made of velvety silk jersey with a short cape that buttons around the neck or around the waist as a short skirt.



Maggy Rouff makes this debutante evening gown of white crepe romain and shirrs the blouse over white velvet ribbon. The girdle is also white velvet ribbon.



This jonquil yellow handkerchief linen dress from Jane Regny is inspired by the aprons of Dutch peasants. The double sleeves, ruffled and fitted, are a new feature.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—(Special.)—The flapper's stock went 'way, 'way down in the Paris style market along about the time that other stocks hurtled into the abyss on Wall street. Women who had invested heavily in the flapper bull market of the season before lost every atom of their chic in one crash. There wasn't even one little lone garment that could be retrieved from the ruin of adolescence in styles, and as for the flapper herself, she has been out of luck ever since.

Paris has been too busy on grown-up modes to take the time off to design styles for the very young young girl. Creating clothes for real young 'uns has never been a true passion with the Paris couturiers, because in France a woman is always considered more attractive when her years are "ripe upon the bough," and, besides all this, it's the ladies who are genuinely adult who have plenty of the wherewithal to indulge freely in Paris clothes. It was when these grown women took to flapper fashions that they became reigning styles, and when they wanted a change Paris was only too happy.

The flapper today, hemmed in on all sides by styles that are too sophisticated to suit her, has to invest with caution in the odds and ends that fall her way. To her benefit there are a few invincible Paris couturiers and couturieres hewing their silhouette lines to her unformed youth. This tiny band is making modes for flappers, and, because the spark of yearning is never dead in many adult women, they have a constantly increasing clientele of ladies who want to dress super-young at any price.

Daytime clothes for the young girl are always made short. She is, by divine right of youth, the one female who can get away with a skirt that comes only an inch or two below the knees. Evening dresses for her have skirts that are almost, if not quite, as long as mother's, and they give her an irresistible appeal of childish masquerade. She, better than any of the people who follow fashions, can wear the normal waistline exactly where nature puts it. No need of tricks or compromise. For her the short, puffed sleeves that are so new and fashionable are made to order, and for her, too, the lacy mitts of Lelong are purposely ordained.

She must have been the inspiration of Perugia's low-heeled modern Greek sandals, although, alas! older feet in the style capital often stray into them. The short velveteen evening jackets of Chanel with no sleeves and a short cape around the shoulders are by, of, and for the flapper. And the bolero jacket takes a lot of wearing by any woman over twenty or heavier than the life insurance weight for that age.

Two of the predominating trends in Paris hats are surely leading to the young girl. One of these is the half-size beret and cap that allows most of the hair to show, and the other is the wide-brimmed hat that is solidly covered with lace, or bound about with a velvet ribbon sash. Draped toques and hats with tortured and twisted brims are only for faces that show experience and need flattering, and the flapper isn't in this class.

The sophisticated draped afternoon and evening dresses, jackets, and coats that are a supremely important division of the Paris mode are too grown up for any one under twenty-two, but on the other hand the organdy or muslin frock with a skirt that is full from the waistline is the flapper's meat and hers alone.

There is a tendency abroad in Paris styles that is going to be profitable for the flapper. This is shown by the silhouette that is artificially widened at the shoulders and pulled in at the waistline, with a skirt that is flowing from the hipline. You can see it in the first figure sketched here. This is an ensemble for sports that is ideal for the young girl, at home or in college. It is made entirely of tricot.

The jacket is made of blue and white tricot, and it has its shoulder line widened by a square cape that reaches to the elbows at the sides. The natural waistline is tightened by a belt of blue leather. Under this jacket is a frock of white tricot with a skirt that is circular from the hip yoke. The blouse has double pointed pieces of patterned tricot encrusted in the front, and its lower sleeves have deep fitted cuffs of the same stuff. The upper sleeves are slightly full. The hat is Agnes' new half-size beret in blue and white tricot.

Jane Regny designed for the young girl the suit sketched. It is made of navy blue taffeta with a sleeveless waist of white, lace-striped silk jersey. This waist has a wide ruffle collar that is placed outside the collarless jacket. The jacket has a double ruffle peplum below its taffeta belt and double cuffs on its straight sleeves. The skirt is made wide below the hipline by set-in plaited panels at the sides of the front and back. Black kid pumps with big silver buckles are worn with this suit, and a navy blue straw hat with a wide brim.

Jane Regny calls the frock shown in our fourth sketch "Jonquil" and makes it of jonquil colored handkerchief linen. This dress with its ruffled wings at the top of the shoulders reminds one of the aprons worn by Dutch peasant children. It gives a new young silhouette with its soft, close fitted belt and its skirt that is flared from the waistline at the sides. The sleeves, as you see, are double, there being short fitted sleeves under the ruffled ones.

Maggy Rouff created this appealing evening frock for the flapper figure and temperament of the young girl. It is made of white crepe romain with white velvet ribbon for trimming. The bloused waist is gathered at the front and back of its decolletage over a white velvet ribbon, looped on the left shoulder. The girdle at the normal waistline is tied in a bow on the left side. The skirt is shirred at the waistline in front and back, repeating the fullness of the waist, and it is cut circular from the curved yoke at the hips. It just touches the top of the insteps and is even all the way around.

Patou has created a wide-brimmed straw hat, shown in the sketch, which is charming for the young face. It is entirely covered with tiny ruffles of tulle and is banded by a sash of turquoise covered velvet.

A suitable handbag for the flapper is a Courtier bag, sketched. It is made of cellophane straw in the new satchel shape that is squared at the top and gives heaps of room for stowing away odds and ends as well as money inside. The handle and the button that closes the envelope flap are made of prystal.

The right shoes for youthful feet are Enzel's sandals, shown in our sketch. They have the comfortable low heels that are beginning to be fashionable in Paris, and are made of black lizard banded with black patent leather.

A Colonial Apartment

By WillElla de Campi

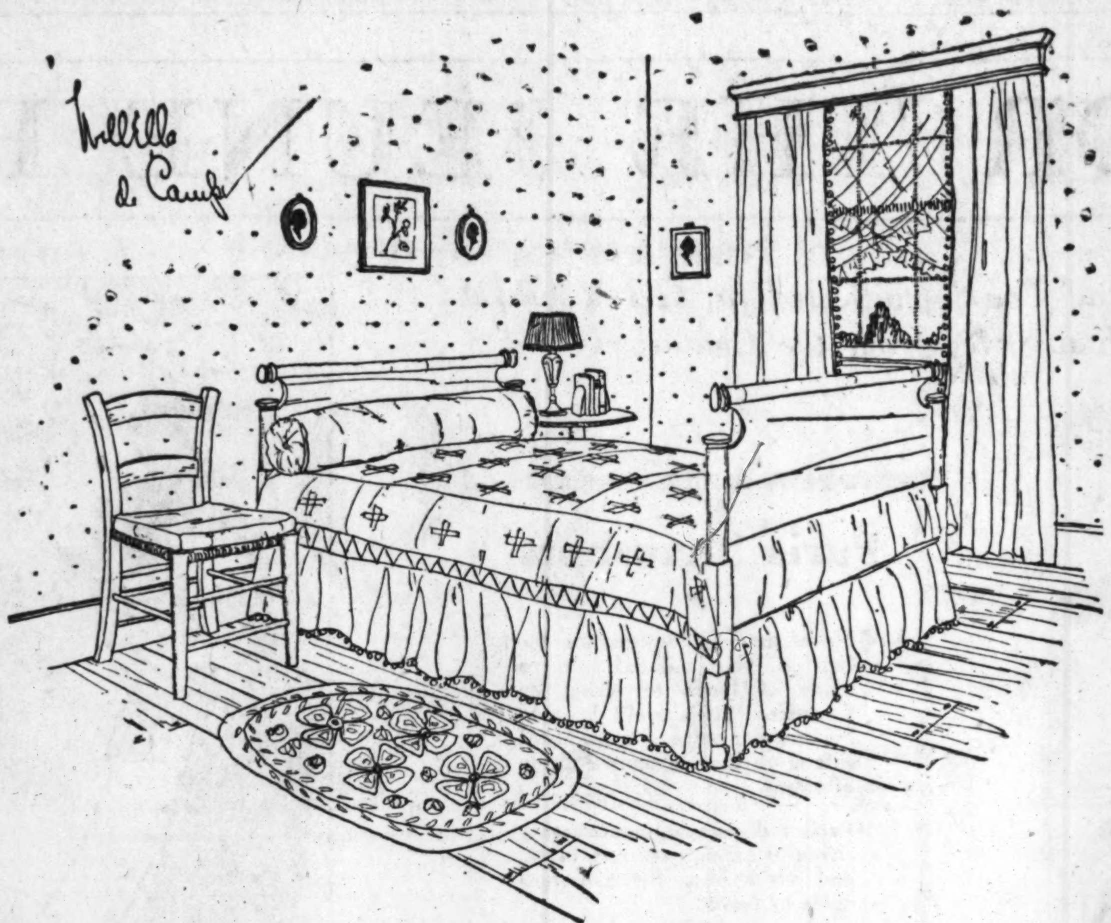
Colors and Furnishings Make This Home Attractive and Charming.

IN spite of the fact that there are many different styles of furniture from which to choose, the colonial type undoubtedly appeals to the majority of American home owners. Quite rightly, Art Moderne reigns supreme in a few highly sophisticated city apartments—the Spanish and Italian styles find wide favor in California and Florida, and various other types, especially well suited to certain localities, are of prime importance in their own places—but there is something inordinately charming about the colonial mode—something irresistible to most of us. A certain sturdiness, peacefulness, and a delightfully restful quality make this style seem comfortably at home even in an ordinary apartment house setting.

The little apartment described today is furnished throughout with colonial pieces [most of them excellent reproductions] and decorations have been done in the same spirit. In the living room, walls and wainscoting are painted a deep yellow cream. There is a green marble mantle with recessed book shelves built in at both sides. On the mantle shelf stands a pair of amethyst glass flower vases. A gilt girandole hangs in the space above. The recessed shelves hold books and numerous small objects such as little porcelain figures. Bits of sandwich glass, luster bowls for flowers, etc.

Draperies at the windows are of flowered glazed chintz on a green ground. They are finished with a plaited edging in green, cream and black. Glass curtains are of yellow cream gauze. Between the two windows stands a comfortable sofa upholstered in amethyst antique satin, quite dull in finish. Extra cushions are of soft green taffeta. A pie crust table at one end of the sofa holds a green pottery lamp with a natural colored parchment shade.

At one side of the fireplace there is a little love seat, upholstered in the drapery chintz. One wing chair in the room is done in the same chintz and another is upholstered in a rep material, irregular in weave, combining two tones of amethyst. A secretary desk at one end of the room is flanked by a pair of fine old Chippendale side chairs with green brocatelle seats. Two small portraits in oval gilt frames are hung in the wall spaces at each side of the desk.



Pink and blue are used in the daughter's room.

Little tripod tables of mahogany are conveniently placed to hold cigarets and coffee. Side lights in the two candle variety are of brass. There is a large, plain plum colored rug. Altogether the room is delightfully restful and simple enough, though its fine mahogany and chintz give it a rich, dignified atmosphere.

Walls in the dining room are painted to resemble pine. This effect was created by merely brushing the paint on over the old wallpaper. At the windows there are ivory colored glass curtains of coarse meshed net. Draperies of chintz show gay hunting scenes on a natural colored ground. They are topped by lambrequins of the same material. The sporting sense is further carried out by hunting prints in narrow black frames on the walls.

Furniture here is of mahogany in the Duncan Phyffe style. There is a russet colored rug on the floor.

A color scheme of gray, blue and magenta is carried out in the little kitchen. Walls are gray and woodwork is Dutch blue. Cupboards are painted blue with magenta lining. Sash curtains of percale show a lattice design in two tones of magenta on a blue ground. Linoleum in blue and gray squares covers the floor. The sink, stove and electric refrigerator are white.

There are two bedrooms. In the larger one, walls and woodwork are painted yellow, which makes an excellent background for the mahogany furniture. Glazed chintz draperies at the windows have a blue background sprinkled all over with small multicolored flowers. Various lamp shades, pillows, etc., used in the room pick up and repeat the flower colors. A small wing chair is upholstered in the chintz. Glass curtains of yellow organdy have a two-inch hemstitched edge, giving them a neat, tailored appearance. They hang straight to the sill. On the beds there are candlewick spreads with the design in blue. Hooked rugs are used on the floor.

The second bedroom, occupied by the young daughter, is shown in the accompanying illustration. Walls here are done in a pink wall paper with soft polka dots. Woodwork is painted pink, matching the wallpaper. Pink organdy glass curtains with ruffled edges are daintily feminine. Plain blue glazed chintz finished with pink ball-tassel fringe makes the draperies. Simple valance boards are painted to match the woodwork.

All the furniture is maple. On the bed there is a patchwork quilt in various shades of pink and blue on a cream ground. The valance is of blue glazed chintz with pink ball-tassel edging to match the draperies. Silhouettes and flower prints in narrow gilt frames are pleasingly grouped on the walls. To complete the room, the floor is painted a deep blue, and there are hooked rugs in soft colored flower designs.

In the Feminine Realm

Women in China smoke tiny pipes. While it is considered proper for women of good families to use dainty metal pipes, ornamented with silver and jade, they seldom smoke in public.

Members of the Marvel Glider club of Los Angeles, Cal., an all feminine group, will not even permit men to do mechanical work on the sailplanes.

Sally Will Ask 100 Girls, Boys to Ravinia Park

Help Celebrate Army and Navy Day.

By Sally Joy Brown.

It brings me great pleasure, girls and boys, to bring you news of our next party of the summer because I think it will be an especially delightful one. Louis Eckstein, president of the Ravinia Opera company, has invited me to bring 100 of you to that famous north shore haven on Thursday, July 31, to make merry at their "Army and Navy day."

The fame of beautiful Ravinia has reached the far corners of the earth. Everywhere that music lovers exist our outdoor opera house is known and admired, and for excellent reasons. At this lovely spot, then, it will be our privilege to party a week from next Thursday. The blue skies will be the roof of our theater and the stage will be a green, velvety lawn. From their quarters up in Great Lakes, the naval reserves will come to Ravinia to entertain us. And from their barracks along Lake Michigan, the boys from Fort Sheridan will journey down to take their part in the thrilling, exciting show which is being planned for us. Among other features of the day will be a program of interesting military music by both the Great Lakes band and the one from Fort Sheridan.

Britton I. Budd, president of the North Shore railroad, is providing us with private cars to whisk us through Chicago and the beautiful northern suburbs to our destination. You see, our party will start the minute we board the trains and will last until we leave them, back in the city again.

Fifty boys and fifty girls will be my guests and I want them to be the children who would most enjoy such a delightful time. So, in your letters tell me why you'd like to go to Ravinia and if you are going to enjoy the soldiers and sailors who will take part in this "Army and Navy day" show. There are really so many nice things about this party to mention in your letter that you should have no difficulty at all in writing a winning one.

Each child must write his or her own letter. Be sure to have it include your name, address, and age, and have it reach me no later than Thursday morning because on that day I shall select the winners. It's important to follow the rules and I cannot send you an invitation, no matter how good your letter is, if you neglect them.

Next Thursday afternoon 100 of us will be guests of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation at the Palace theater to see Helen Kane in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," and five acts of vaudeville. Below are the names of those whose letters have won invitations:

Better Taste in Furniture

By Edith Weigle

This Maple Dressing Table May Also Be Used As a Desk.

The Recent Show at the Furniture Mart Indicates That Fall Styles Will Be Simpler and More Artistic

THAT the public is still vitally and enthusiastically interested in furniture, in spite of hard times, was evidenced at the recent semi-annual show at the American Furniture Mart. Dealers and buyers attended this exhibition of new styles in huge numbers, over a thousand registering on the first day alone. These men and women represent the public, and the furniture, occupying 17 floors of space, is designed to please that public.

Several points stand out from my first cursory visit to the exhibition. One of these, and perhaps the first and foremost item of my impressions, is that manufacturers are creating better merchandise, from an artistic and practical point of view, than ever before. Mr. and Mrs. Average American are demanding less and less of the hideous, overstuffed, gaudily covered suites that used to clutter up their homes and make them anything but charming, and are asking in increasing numbers for furniture that is simple in line, better in woods and workmanship, simpler and less pretentious in coverings and more accurate in period styles.

In Europe we are known as a nation of straight forward, honest people, with few complexes. Our homes should reflect those traits and how can they if they are filled with cheap, ugly, artistically bad furniture? The sooner some pieces are thrown on the dump heap, the better.

One large company that has made a nationwide name for itself as makers of steel beds and comfortable mattresses is now manufacturing bedroom pieces in wood, maple and mahogany chiefly, and doing itself proud. All of the models shown were extremely simple in line, quite unpretentious, and therefore beautiful. There were mahogany twin four posters with no foot boards, low head boards and the posts low to harmonize. Maple beds followed the lead. I saw one dressing table which was really a maple lowboy with a mirror attached, that stood out because of its excellent wood and construction.

An Attractive Table Fills This Corner, Seen at the Furniture Show.

French provincial, early American and colonial reproductions were the favored styles and the fabrics used in upholstering were figured and glazed chintzes, toiles de Jouy, hand blocked linens, and a sort of glorified monk's cloth in plaids and solid colors [mentioned before]. One company known for its fine merchandise is providing its chairs and couches with slip covers that fasten with zipper closing so that they may easily be removed for washing. Thus, when you buy a couch from them it is provided with two dresses, so to speak: one for summer and one for winter. The latter may be in any material you desire.

Pieces of furniture may have double uses. The maple dressing table shown in one of the pictures today may be placed in the living room and used as a desk. Simply put a chair before it, instead of the maple bench, and hang a picture or a lovely piece of damask or embroidery above it rather than the mirror.

Another photograph shows an attractive corner with a mahogany copy of a Duncan Phyfe drop leaf table and a simple but charming armchair covered in silk damask. The window draperies are toile de Jouy.

Another attractive group was seen in the corner of a walnut panelled living room. A colorful linen window drapery and an oriental rug added richness to an armchair and small walnut end table accompanying it. This chair, while inoffensive, was not nearly so good in line as the other one described above, but is made by the same company and is commendable because it is at least a far cry from the old overstuffed, elephantine type once manufactured by this same firm. This company, to my knowledge, has taken longer and speedier strides toward good furniture and away from monstrosities than any other, in a similar field, in the Furniture Mart and deserves much praise.

Coincidences

Back Again.

In the summer of 1929 an itinerant gardener applied for work at my home in a Chicago suburb, and I employed him. He was a talkative old fellow and it was soon evident that he belonged to the hobo closs, working only when necessary. Nevertheless, he seemed to know his job and I enjoyed him as an interesting character. He worked for a few days and then disappeared.

Last winter we rented a house in a little out of the way town in Alabama, ten miles from the railroad. Imagine my amazement upon answering a knock at the door to find my old gardener again applying for work.

Dime Store Cards?

I have a friend in Michigan whose birthday falls on the same day as my own. We exchange birthday cards. When I opened hers my last birthday I found it identically the same as the one I had sent her. An amusing coincidence that would not happen more than once in a lifetime.

Dandruff All Goes Sure Pop!

If you have dandruff, no matter how much, you probably have tried shampoos and head washes without success, just try this simple method once and you will surely agree that "Dandruff all goes sure pop."

Get from any toilet goods counter a few ounces of liquid Calonite, apply it just once to the scalp and notice results. Just one application and every particle of dandruff and other pore accumulations will be gone. Liquid Calonite just dissolves away these scalp pore impurities entirely. After you have gotten rid of these, use liquid Calonite just once a week to keep scalp pores free and clean.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel

Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde

Silks and Summer Cottons Make Up Most Attractively in These Becoming Styles

A SMART printed silk crepe dress, shown in pattern No. 3498, is just right to wear on the street without a coat. Though this dress has full length sleeves, they are not so warm as those that are close fitting—and of course, no short sleeve should be worn on the street, unless under a coat.

This is a one piece, slip-on dress, cut in rather a deep V at the neck in the front, and the sleeves are cut in one piece, gathered at the lower edge and set into narrow, fitted bands.

A ribbon sash, or one of the dress material, is worn at the normal waistline, tying in a bow at the back. The pattern allows for a 2⅝ inch wide hem at the bottom of the skirt, and this can be put in by machine.

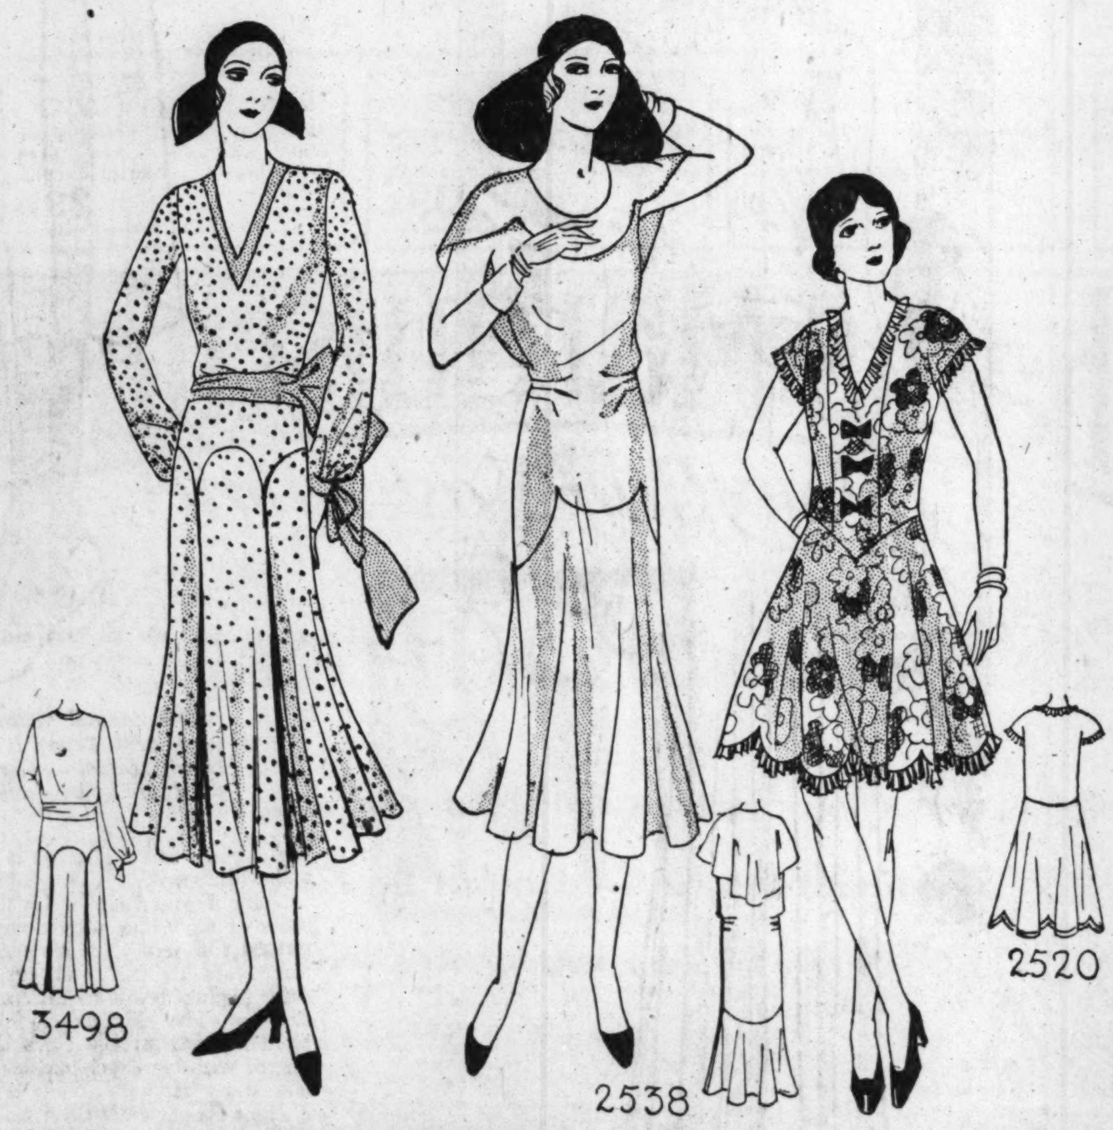
Over the plain skirt part of this dress circular panels, gracefully shaped at the top, are set on. These should be finished at each side, and turned in across the top before being set in place on the skirt. Hemming, using a narrow one, picoting or binding can be used down each side of the panels. After they are basted in place on the skirt they should be stitched close to the edge, and then about one quarter inch above.

Let the dress hang for several days after the panels have been put on, which gives them a chance to stretch. Then they should be evened off at the bottom and finished the same as the sides.

A hip yoke is simulated through the molded line of the long-waisted bodice, and helps make the figure appear slender. The neck is finished with an outside fitted facing that should be stitched on both edges, and the sleeve bands extend into free ends that are tied in bows. Bows add that soft touch of femininity that marks all the Parisian models.

One of the printed chiffon voiles in hyacinth blue and white tones, parrot green silk crêpe and chiffon in a lobster-red with self fabric sash, are attractive suggestions for afternoon wear.

Pattern No. 2520, shows a quaint pretty fashion for young girls' dresses. The basque is cut in one piece at the back, and three at the front. The side pieces are turned in on the edges nearest the center, basted over the center front section and stitched twice. Once on the exact edge and the second stitching row comes about one-quarter inch inside. The basque is shaped to a point at the center and turned in evenly around the bottom.



3498—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 7½ yards of 39 inch material with 1¼ yards of 39 inch contrasting.

2538—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years and 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material.

2520—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch material with ½ yard of 32 inch material for ruffling.

The circular skirt is in two sections. After it has been seamed together it is basted to the basque, letting the turned in edge of the basque come to the outside. After basting carefully, stitch twice—the first time close to the edge, then the second stitching should come about one-quarter inch above this. But after basting the skirt and basque together, overhand the seam edges together before stitching.

The long shoulders form drop sleeves, and the neck is cut in a deep V. Narrow ruffling is used as a finish to all edges, and the bottom of the skirt can be made straight or scalloped, as you choose. Made of one of the usual wash materials, this will be pretty for every day wear; for parties pale blue or pink taffeta or crêpe de chine will be adorable. Three prim little bows adorn the front of the basque, and altogether it is a design that should please any young girl.

The rippling cape extending into pretty sleeve caps adds much to the gracefulness of the dress made by pattern No. 2538. The sleeve caps extend into a fitted facing across the front of the neck, making a perfect finish. Then there are horizontal tucks, emphasizing the normal waistline. The upper part of this dress extends well below the hipline, giving a slender appearance to the figure, because it fits snugly through the hips. The curved outline where the low flared circular skirt is joined to the upper part adds to the gracefulness of the entire dress. The armholes may be bound or faced, or long close fitting sleeves may be made.

One of the printed silk crêpes will make up attractively for afternoon wear, or use plain or printed chiffon for evening. Lobster red silk crêpe, iris blue chiffon, Patou rose handkerchief lawn and putty beige crêpe de chine are charming suggestions.

Art of Winning Friends

—By Doris Blake—

Any Girl with the Ability, Acquired or Natural, of Making People Feel Comfortable Will Never Be Lonely.

"SHE has the art of making men feel at home with her!"

The above was offered in explanation of the popularity of a certain young woman whose beauty was nothing to lift her above the average well groomed, neat, attractive girls of her group. Neither was she more than average in regard to clothes. But she had the art of making men feel at home with her.

All of the advice needed on how to attract and how to hold men after they have been attracted is packed in that sentence about making men feel at home with you. For maid or wife it serves adequately.

In a serial running currently in one of the well known monthlies the male author brings up this identical point. His man in the story arrives at the apartment of a widow half intending to ask her hand in marriage. The charming informality of the widow's frock, her easy, graceful welcome; the chummy setting of the room immediately undid any reservations in favor of a continued bachelor life. "Everything here makes you feel at home," was the man's reaction.

Make Others Feel Comfortable.

It is the art of making people feel immediately comfortable that makes friends, whether friends of the opposite sex or your own. Said an acquaintance of a young woman with everything in her favor pictorially and sartorially, but who can claim few warm friendships: "I'm not going to see her any more. She puts me all out of harmony."

Certain girls do that very thing to men they would like to attract. They do not know how to please people. They have never learned the art of pleasing people. And they are invariably the most harping critics of people who do not attempt to please them. They may be snobbish. They may be thoughtless. They may be domineering. They may be superior minded. Or, they may be just downright mean. Anyway, they lose the best thing that can be had from life, namely, the returns from the art of making folk feel at home.

It is a talent, sure enough, to which some are born, others acquire but all may attain by subjugating self temporarily to the person or persons about. As "Red," a bright boy correspondent, offers "Some girls can make a fellow feel like a nickel just by their manner. And what we guys like to feel like is a million and the gals we like do just that very little thing."

One Girl's Experience.

Anyway, if there is some one you want to vamp for reasons of romance, for just a good time, or for business advancement we might add, remember that excellent formula of giving him or her a chance to let down into an easy composure.

And on this ever-recurring topic of popularity and how to attain it, from one, Corinne, there comes an experience, the personal nature of which gives it added value:

"I am 22 and up until a year and a half ago I was a plain dud as a beau-getter. I was virtuous—I thought—and I let the world know it frequently and forcibly. It showed in my actions as well as my words for I've been told many times since that I certainly have changed from a prig to a good sport. While going through college I held this attitude and, as a result I did not attend a single fraternity dance nor one all-university party. I attended the dances my sorority gave by asking some friend of the family's to escort me or by going on 'blind dates.' I couldn't understand this at all. I was conscious that I was not bad looking, that I dressed far better than the average girl and that I was intelligent. So I adopted a cynical attitude and scoffed at the male sex generally as being a group of maulers.

"Then I went to a strange town and thought that, since I was not known there, I could start off anew and probably be popular after all. But I took my superiority complex with me, and it was resented far more in that town than on the campus, and the townsfolk were frank. They told me to my face as well as to my back of my characteristics of snobbishness, aloofness, superiority, and lack of sportsmanship. It was rather awful and I was anything but happy—but I learned my lesson, I saw that it was my overconsciousness of virtue rather than my niceness that kept me lonely. I met the first man I really ever cared for.

Decent but Not Prudish.

"I dropped my superciliousness. I became a genuine good sport. I went with this man almost constantly for over a year, and much to my surprise he did not expect me to be anything but the 'nice' girl I was. No hint of smoking, drinking, petting was ever made, and I know now that it was my being a decent sort without being a stuck-up prude that won him.

"While I was going with him so much there were other dates, too, and for the first time in my life I experienced the thrill of having to refuse a date because I really had another for the same night. And just two weeks ago I became engaged to the most wonderful one. After I said yes I was kissed for the first time in our friendship of over a year and a half—a record, I'll wager, but that's the way it was with us.

"All of the above I put down in my own true story confession because when I see girls like myself a year or more back who are not having the good time they could be having I know it is due to their own state of feeling about boys. All the boys want is that you act like a human being and give them a chance."

Corinne admits that her failure was none other than the lack of making boys feel at home with her. In order to make folk feel at home you have to make them feel your welcoming graces; you have to make them feel that they are awfully nice people, and that you love to be in their company. You have to make them feel, too, that if they want to expand about themselves they are perfectly privileged to do so, and you'll be a good listener and encourager.

Take Sun With Discretion

—By Gladys Huntington Bevans—

This Wealth of Health, Free to All, Is a Cure for Ills and Preventive of Aches—When Used Intelligently.

If you want to enjoy nature with your children write to Mrs. Bevans for a list of books on the outdoor world, which will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SUN, says the doctor for the sick baby. Sun, says the mother for the well baby. Sun, says fashion for the little child, and designs a sun suit. Sun, says the grown-up for his arthritis or his glandular trouble or other ills or fatigue. Sun, says the plant. "Ah, there's the sun!" says every one after a gray spell.

If we've become sun worshipers, it's a fine universal religion. But nothing new. There have always been sun worshipers in the true religious sense of the word. Gorgeous old temples to the sun, ancient rites, statues, ceremonies—all make us realize it. The people of another day observed, as we do, that a plant grown in the dark is pale and weak—that a person kept away from sun and open air grows pale and melancholy and weak, too. That sunshine is a necessity of life people of all ages have realized.

Performs Seeming Miracles.

But it is only recently that science has been able to give us an inkling of just how wonderful sunshine is and of the various ways in which it builds up health in our bodies. Our knowledge of what sunshine does for us is, like our knowledge of electricity, limited. Scientists are the first to admit that.

To the layman—that is the average you and me—it's fascinating to know that there are in sunshine heat rays, red rays, light or white rays, and what they call X-rays and gamma rays, and lastly, invisible but tremendously important to our bodies, the ultra-violet ray that has actually been proved to perform what seem like miracles on the human body.

This ultra-violet ray in sunshine does many things. It has a share in producing the green coloring matter in plants—one reason why green vegetables are so good for man and child and beast. Incidentally, when animals don't need all this vitamin D that's in their vegetable diet they store the excess in their livers. So we eat liver or use cod liver oil for its vitamin D.

Cures Rickets in Children.

Of course everybody knows that this ultra-violet ray in sunshine cures rickets in children. It also prevents them, and if it's good for the bones in general it must be good for the teeth. It seems that the sunshine helps the body to absorb from food the lime and phosphorus that the bones need. Hence the prevention and cure of rickets and the aid to the building of good teeth by sun bathing.

Sunshine helps tremendously to build up resistance to disease. Sunshine helps the body to get rid more freely of its waste products by means of the skin and the kidneys and the bowels. Sunshine tends to make babies and children grow. Sunshine acts as a tonic, increasing energy. And it does many other things, as, for instance, curing some kinds of skin trouble and building up a resistance to tuberculosis.

Now sunshine, this wealth of health, is at our disposal because summer is here—the best season for sun bathing. It is unlike other wealth because it is ours for the taking. We rob no one else in taking it. We do not lessen its sum total, no matter how much of it we use.

So let us take of it freely while summer is here, because in the winter it is quite different. This ultra-violet blessing is not so easily obtainable then for the poor or for those of moderate means. Cod liver oil—bottled sunshine—is the least expensive of all substitutes for real sunshine. Artificial ultra-violet ray treatments cost money. Special window glass which lets the ultra-violet ray through, as ordinary window glass does not, is not financially feasible for everybody.

Exposure Must Be Gradual.

But the summer sun shines free. It is ours for the taking, whether we are mothers, children, or grownups. Only we must not grab—at first. In the beginning exposure to the sun must be gradual, whether for children or adults. It is wise for adults to consult a doctor before beginning sun treatments. Especially those who are starting now when the sun is so hot must exercise care.

Many parents for one reason or another have deferred giving their children sun baths and are just beginning to do so. Some are only now getting away to the country or seashore, or will not go until August, and are waiting until then for the children's sun bathing. They must be careful that the exposure to the sun is gradual. A slight reddening, then a little more which tans—this is the desirable procedure. As the tanning increases the time of exposure of the skin to the sun is increased. The tanning is the desired result.

Take freely of the wealth of health that is in sunshine for your children and yourself this summer. Once started and hardened you may be able to keep it up through October. But begin it intelligently. Like all powerful forces, the sun is not to be "monkeyed with." Consult your doctor or, if you wish, information on sun bathing for babies will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Best Recipes

All Purpose Salad Dressing.

Combine in top of double boiler ⅓ cup sugar, 3 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon white pepper, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard and 1 heaping tablespoon flour. Rub together to a smooth paste, then add slowly 2 cups rich, sour cream, stirring rapidly to keep smooth; ⅔ cup clear vinegar or strained lemon juice, and cook over boiling water, stirring constantly till mixture thickens and is well done. Remove from fire, and cool, stirring occasionally to prevent "scum" forming on top. Pour into glass jar.

When ready to use, thin with sweet cream or whipped egg whites for fruit salads, and with lemon juice for vegetable and meat salads. Use plain for sandwich dressing. It may also be used, heated with a little vinegar, for hot slaws or wilted lettuce. This dressing will keep indefinitely.

Pores, Oily Skin Had Me Frantic

Try this New Hollywood Recipe for a Beautiful Skin

Out in Hollywood they have a wonderful recipe for a lotion that quickly reduces large pores, removes blackheads and makes the skin nice and smooth.

The very minute you pat it on the face it gets down deep into the skin and cleans out the dirt. It removes blackheads, closes the pores and makes the skin smooth, good-looking and youthfully fresh. You'll notice, too, that the skin is not oily or disfigured with perspiration that streaks make-up.

If you want a smooth, soft, beautiful skin free from large pores, blackheads, crow's feet and oiliness, just get 3 ounces of Orchard White from your druggist and mix it with the juice of 2 lemons. Then you have a full quarter-pint of the finest lotion you have ever used. Try it.

Note: During the summer months this amazing lotion is indispensable to the outdoor girl. It keeps the skin smooth and free from freckles, and guards against that leathery, aged-worn look caused by sun and wind.

HARLEY AND JOAN

by ROLAND PERTWEE

SYNOPSIS.

Harley Trevelyan, spending the last night of his leave from the front in London, has an engagement to dine with Paula Drayton, whose younger brother, through Trevelyan's influence, has been assigned to his own battery. Paula grows emotional just before they go in to dinner and leaves after telling him that she loves him. Harley is walking the streets when the Zeppelins raid London and, being used to gun fire, does not run for cover as every one else does. A young woman in a window sends her brother to bring him into the house, and he discovers that the boy is Freddie Miller, an old schoolmate, and the girl is Joan. With Joan he goes up on the roof to watch the air raid and they see an airplane shoot down one of the Zeps. Following the air raid Harley, Joan, and Freddie have a bite in the kitchen and Harley realizes that he is in love with this girl he has known only a few moments. The next day Freddie and he leave for the front.

INSTALLMENT IV.
BACK TO THE FRONT.

DIVORCED from active service for long and dreary months, the sights and the sounds about him were a tonic to Freddie Miller.

They had crammed themselves on to the front seat of a lorry beside the driver, a phlegmatic and broad beamed Lancastrian, to whom Freddie found it impossible to communicate the martial rapture that possessed his soul. Harley, occupied with his own thoughts, proved a dull companion.

"Too many closed windows for too long, that's been my trouble," crowed Freddie, and pointed at the skeleton of a house with perforated walls. "This German system of ventilation is excellent. Hullo there!"

With a sorrowing whine a shell drifted over their heads and detonated two hundred yards away.

"Intelligence work above the average. They know I'm back already. What kind of stuff was that?"

"Naval, probably. Base fuse-firing at about twenty-eight thousand," Harley replied.

At the sound of the approaching shell he had involuntarily flinched. Leave had made him soft with a vengeance. It was a new experience and he felt disgusted and rather depressed.

More shells sailed over, to burst harmlessly in the fields.

The German gunners were feeling for the road—the straight white road that stretches from Arras to Doullens like a chalk line ruled across the countryside.

To distract his mind Harley began to repeat a jingle he had sometime invented.

"A ribbon white it stretches far
From lands of peace to fields of war,
The Arras-Doullens road.
And all night long both to and fro
The endless streams of transport flow,
The endless tides of soldiers go
Along the Arras-Doullens road."

Freddie Miller picked up the words and found a jazz tune to go with them. After that he sang continuously.

"Any more?" he demanded.

"Something about this place Labray, but I forget it."

So Freddie improvised—inspired by tufty shrapnel bursts.

"And further up, so people say,
You'll see the woolly bears at play,
Upon the house tops of Labray,
Upon the Arras-Doullens road."

No Health Resort

Labray proved rather a hot corner. Miscellaneous stuff was flying about as they bumped over the cobbles of the village street. After that things were quiet, but livened up again a few miles on at the Bae de Sud. A gun team had suffered a direct hit and the road was messy. Also the lilac sweet odor of gas hung in the air.

"Want any help?" Harley inquired.

A second lieutenant in charge shook his head.

"Those of us who weren't hit don't want it, and the others are past it. You haven't a spot of whisky?"

Harley had.

"Thanks. Had to shoot a couple of horses and, you know, they were friends of mine." He handed back the flask. "Thanks, saved my life. Wouldn't hang about here if I were you. 'Tisn't a health resort."

It wasn't. Something hit the bank on the roadside, but failed to explode. If it had!

The lorry driver was putting a match to his side lamps. Up to then they had driven without lights. The Bae de Sud was the last place on the road troubled by anything but long range stuff.

They went on, passing a flying ground on their right, down an avenue of unbroken trees.

That mess at the crossroads had quieted Freddie Miller. He was thinking of three silent figures lying with their great coats covering their heads.

"Death wouldn't matter so much," he said, "if it wasn't that one was missing all the fun."

At Mondicourt they dropped off and searched the ammunition siding for another lift. Unavailingly. All the battery lorries had loaded up. The siding was deserted.

Freddie deposited his valise in a shed and they foot slogged through the intricate little village street and thence down hill to Pas.

They reached it at three o'clock. A long procession of lorries were parking for the night.

A farm house standing back from the road was their destination. A dozen motorcycles were leaning against the mud walls. A sleepy sentry challenged them yawningly and passed them as friends into the courtyard.

In answer to their knock a mighty voice bade them enter.

The orderly room of G corps siege park was a barren apartment boasting a couple of office tables for the use of the O. C. and his adjutant. In one corner was a small telephonic exchange.

He Made Them Work

Seated in a large Louis XVI. chair tilted back to a perilous angle was an enormous man wearing a British warm and blue and white striped pajama legs which reposed conspicuously upon the table. Upon his feet were a pair of pink woolen slippers which looked like the kind usually worn by babies, but magnified out of all reasonable proportions. The head of a laughing schoolboy was perched upon shoulders that seemed to broad to pass through any average sized door.

There was nothing formal in the military sense of the word about Maj. Cosmo Regan, O. C., G corps siege park. He treated officers and men alike with imperishable good humor and understanding. But he made them work. Complaints from higher up as to his manner of making them work were frequent and bitter, but Regan cared little for that.

"Phwat the divil would I mind," he roared, as he tossed screed after screed into the oil drum that served as a paper basket. "Life isn't so sure or so pleasant out here that one can afford to trate human beings like machines. They'll do their work none the less well for being happy."

Angry S. M. T. O.'s and D. A. D. T.'s would find after a while that their missions of reproach had developed into a pleasant half hour spent in the best of good company with whiskey and a drop of chlorinated water to wash away bitterness.

Recognizing Harley, Regan launched a yell of welcome that roused a sleeping signaller to unwilling wakefulness.

"And phwat's the maning of this," he cried. "Have ye desarted or has the battery run out of Scotch?"

Harley explained that he was just back from leave.

Leave was it? Regan had forgotten the meaning of the word. Was anything amiss with the idea of a drink? Nothing was. And maybe a snack of bread and cheese and Worcester sauce to go with it. Excellent.

"Orderly!" shouted Regan, and an orderly blundered in from an adjoining room.

The orderly knew by instinct what was required of him.

"Who's your friend?" Regan demanded.

Freddie explained himself and presented his posting orders. Regan appraised him with a not unfavorable eye and studied the chit that set forth Freddie's previous war record.

"D'ye know anything about transport work?"

"Nothing at all, sir."

"A Grand Fellar, That"

"Good," said Regan. "For the stuff they teach to the transport officers back at home is about as useful as a spint bullet. Begob, I've had them reporting here in the innocent belafe they were going to take part in a cross betwane a lord mayor's show and the Canterbury pageant. Ye'll be attached to Wodehouse's column. Nine point two's. .008 S. B. A. C. Wodehouse is none so bad—but racintly married. Rint away from his wife's embraces on the farst day of their honeymoon. Made him windy, it has, and shmall wonder. I tell him he's got eyes like mistletoe."

"008," Harley repeated. "They still in the same position? That's about a hundred yards south of our battery."

"Sure, it's in the same place, and if Miller isn't eaten up by his own caterpillars ye'll be able to take a dose of gas togither any quiet night. B' the way, I sint up a new second loot to your show this avening. Drayton—David Drayton, with the mother's milk shtill upon his lips."

Harley finished his drink and nodded at Freddie.

"Paula's brother," said he and rose.

Already a hint of dawn showed above the tree-clad brow of the hill.

"I must be getting on, sir, if I'm to make it before daylight."

"Wait a bit and I'll sind ye up in one of the workshop cars. Orderly. Workshop Vauxhall."

A few minutes later the sound of an engine spitting discontentedly was heard in the yard outside.

Regan in his monstrous pink slippers stood at the door and waved farewell. Freddie Miller jumped on to the running board for a final handshake.

"A grand fellar, that," said he, "and you, too, old chap. God bless."

He stood watching the headlights of the car vanish into the trees that mantled the hillside.

The car leapt and bounded over the spongy surface, dodging or tracking shell holes and avoiding the ditches which yawned on either side. Those treacherous ditches—responsible for so much calamity—those ditches which once in were the very devil to escape from. And while you strained and sweated to get out, using jacks and levers and lumps of wood and tow ropes and bits of sheet iron and broken shell cases, and any mortal thing a spinning back wheel could bite into, transport would pile up before and behind you in a ceaselessly cursing crocodile.

The silhouette of the outskirts of Hebuterne had undergone material changes during Harley's absence on leave.

Several of the tall trees at Windy corner had been bitten off short. The building which had stood on the left of the crossroad had become a heap of potential road metal.

"This'll do," said Harley, "you'll find it a job to turn if you come up the lane." He gripped his belongings and jumped out. "Goodnight."

The car executed a quick if rather noisy reversing maneuver which brought down upon it a sour criticism from a sentry who sat in a kind of rabbit bury scrabbled out of the banking.

"Mike a noise—tell 'em all about yerself, might send 'em a photo, too. They don't 'ave listening posts rahnd 'ere. O, no, nothin' like that. Silly bleeder!"

To which the driver with proper spirit replied:

"Bleeder yourself," and roared away into the morning mists followed by a stutter of machine gun bullets delivered more in a spirit of protest than of offence.

Harley wallowed through the mud of a sunken lane, and parting the gas blanket at the mouth of the B. C. dugout, descended slippery steps and was home.

Hammersley, the officer on duty, rose from an ammunition case and extended a hand of welcome.

"Lordy, Trevelyan, but it's good to see you," he said. "Things without you haven't been the same."

"Too much work?"

"Plenty, but that isn't the trouble. It's the old man."

"A bit edgy, eh?"

"He's Just Septic"

"Edgy, my dear fellar, duodenal—there's no other word for it—positively and absolutely duodenal."

Harley grinned, for Hammersley was renowned for a willful misapplication of words.

"Ill, you mean?"

"O, shut up! Would he ever be ill? You're suffering from lovely ideas inspired by leave. 'Course he isn't ill! —he's just septic."

Harley shook his head.

"Bad discipline, this sort of talk," said he, but his eyes twinkled.

Hammersley nodded.

"Conversationally the discipline of this battery is disgraceful," he admitted, "but what would you? You can't avoid it if you command a battery for a source of mental gastritis. I suppose an M. O. would diagnose him as a case of acute acidity. See any of the new shows in town?"

"A few," said Harley. "Talk about 'em tomorrow. I'll turn in for a bit. Did young Drayton report?"

"Yes. I shoved him in your dugout. A nice kid—if a spot green and milky. The old man squished some vinegar in his eye and told him he had everything to learn. Night, night, and don't get killed trotting along."

"Try not," said Harley. "G'night."

Mounting the steps he made for his own quarters fifty yards away—the cellar of a house that was no more.

His batman, anticipating his return, was up and had a tin cup of blue and treacley tea awaiting him.

"Nice time, sir?"

"Fine," said Harley. "Give these boots a pull and that'll be all. Don't want to wake up the others."

Trip Wires

When the batman had gone he walked across to the bunks where two other officers were sleeping. In the lower bunk lay young David Drayton with his head upon a crooked arm. Harley thought.

"Looks about sixteen—a damn shame, really."

The sleeping boy sighed and moistened his lips poutingly as a child might have done.

Too young to be in a show like this."

The face was like an unwritten page.

Save for the straight dark brows there was little resemblance to Paula. David's cheeks were pink as a postage stamp.

Simple—unmade—barely begun.

Harley turned away with a shrug that was half angry.

Not fair on a man to be saddled with that kind of proposition. Too much responsiblity. And so little one could do—except one's best.

Ah, well!

He snaked his feet into his flea bag and pulled it up to his chin.

Paula would be awake—wondering—praying, perhaps.

Of course one would do one's best—one would do anything.

He fell asleep and was on the roof with Joan beside him—Joan with her curling mouth—why, her face was all curls—curling upward to meet his.

. . . .

Harley rolled over on his elbow and stared about him: It was hard, on waking, to realize one was back at the front.

At the foot of the camp bed, with the large admiring eyes of boyhood focussed upon his hero, stood David Drayton.

"Hullo, sir. You awake?"

Harley blinked, rubbed the stiffness out of his face and said he supposed so—that he was glad to see David, but not being a field officer was unprepared to be addressed as sir.

"Mayn't I call you sir?"

"Unless you want to earn a tick off for the pair of us."

David grinned sheepishly.

"I don't," he said. "Had one already this morning. I say, why do they put up trip wires all over a battery position?"

Harley laughed.

"For the reason that one does not want to advertise the impression of many eager feet converging upon a gun position like the spokes of a wheel."

David looked bewildered.

"It looks bad from up above," Harley explained, "and attracts unpleasant attentions from enemy artillery."

"O, you mean spotting planes. The O. C. didn't tell me that. He just said what he thought of me for taking a short cut."

"He was right," said Harley.

David pulled a wry face.

"I suppose he was."

"He was dead right," said Harley, "and if you feel sulky, young fellar me lad, don't."

"I don't, really."

"Good. Glad to see you, David. What do you think of the war?"

"Fine." The enthusiasm was very genuine. "Fine. I arrived about eight last night and the guns were popping away like mad. I've never been tight, but it made me feel as if I was. Awfully queer feeling—as if one's legs didn't belong."

Harley nodded. He recognized that exhilaration well enough. A grand sensation while it lasts—which isn't long.

"Stick out your head and raise a shout for Lane like a good chap," he said. "I'm going to get up and shave."

Lane arrived with hot water and more tea, also a rasher of bacon with a wash of tinned tomato over it.

David watched while Harley shaved and dressed and consumed his modest breakfast. His whole attention seemed absorbed by Harley's exquisite performance of these everyday functions.

Such devotion, though flattering, was an embarrassment.

"Haven't they given you a job," Harley asked.

Life from an O. Pip

"Not yet. I had a look at the guns but that was about all. I say, it sounds an ass of a question, but what does one do?"

Harley finished his tea and pushed away the cup.

"Largely nothing," he replied. "Nothing interspersed with visits to the O Pip and periodical shooting programs." Once more he had detected a look of bewilderment on the boy's face. "O. Pip, if that's what's worrying you," he went on, "stands for observation post. Which is sometimes in a front trench and sometimes beyond it, and sometimes up a tree and sometimes in a hole. One sees life and other things from an O. Pip and reports accordingly."

"I'd like to go there," said David.

"Don't worry, you will."

For a moment David Drayton dreamed pleasantly of O. Pips.

"One thing I should warn you, though, about doing nothing," said Harley, "you get such a lot of time to do nothing in that you're apt to overlook the few things you have to do, and that's bad."

"What sort of things?"

Harley told him some of them—enough to go on with. They didn't happen to be mentioned in any of the text books.

"Be as conscientious as you know how," he wound up, "but don't take things too much to heart. Don't worry. Teach yourself to think it's a pity, but it can't be helped. If you start getting disappointed with your own performance, some of it'll slop over into the minds of folks higher up. Tumble?"

"Yes, course I do. Look, I haven't thanked you yet for getting me posted here."

"I was glad they let us have you."

"But I'm tremendously grateful, Trevelyan. You don't know what a difference it's made to—to Paula."

"Ah," said Harley, got up and trussed himself into his Sam Browne belt.

Soft Sounding Poison

"I had a wire from her—the day before yesterday—reached me just as I was sailing. She said you were dining together at the Carlton."

"Yes, we did."

"I expect you saw a lot of each other on your leave."

"Here and there. Now and then."

"I—I wonder if you've guessed anything about Paula?"

Harley clapped on his tin hat with an air of finality.

"I guessed she was fond of you."

"Of me," the boy repeated.

"Just so, and that's as far as guessing is likely to carry me."

Shooting a smile at David that seemed to say, "If you speak another word I'll shove your head in a bucket," he went out.

Maj. Evan Fawlk, O. C., 007 siege battery, had arrived at number three gun and was dripping upon its crew that particular blend of vitriol and venom which nature had designed him to exude.

It was a remarkable feature of the man that in a period of history conspicuous for its outspokenness he never swore or used an ugly word.

It is less remarkable that this characteristic earned for him universal hatred from officers and other ranks.

A certain amount of damning and blasting was to be expected and even respected, but the slow purring dribble of soft sounding poison which Fawlk emitted was utterly intolerable. Although he knew the name of every N. C. O. and man in the battery only on the rarest occasions did he employ them. His method of address was, "You there—that man—come here. It's disgraceful." Reduced to print it appears harmless enough—but spoken with a peculiar stress and emphasis on single words and syllables it was torture.

He had a tall body, wide shoulders and a cavernous chest. His head, on its long, stringy neck, projected away from his body and traversed ceaselessly from side to side in a way that made one think of panthers in a cage. His indigo eyes were deep set and so close together that they seemed to be trying to bore through the sides of his nose and become one. In contrast to the leanness of his face his brow was contoured with two islands of super-orbital fat. He had high cheek bones with cavities between them and a large bony jaw. His mouth was wide and straight, with thin lips fitting as tightly together as the sides of a cigaret case. At the end of unusually long arms were the delicate hands of an artist.

Shooting Above Average

He was reputed to have spent his earlier years abroad, and it was hard to mention any part of Africa with which he was not familiar. Although less than forty years of age he had amassed a lot of money. His tastes were ascetic. He loved music, literature, painting. His conceit was abnormal, and if he seldom, if ever, talked about himself it was because he seldom, if ever, encountered any one worthy, in his opinion, to discuss himself with. The possession of power was to Fawlk the breath of life. He battened upon power. To give an order and see it obeyed was luxury to him rather than a matter of routine. He felt that every shell flung from the gaping mouths of the four six-inch Mark 7 howitzers under his command was an individual expression of his own power. In imagination he followed its flight and rubbed his hands with sadistic pleasure at the thought of the havoc for which it should account. For this reason, if for no other, the shooting of the battery was above the average. A bad shot was a positive reflection against himself and his delusions of grandeur and infallibility. A remorseless critic of other men, he could not tolerate even the slightest adversity of opinion in regard to his own character and conduct.

It is doubtful whether on the whole western front there was a more friendless man or any man less ambitious of friendship. The hatred he inspired was a drug which daily contributed to his peace of mind and self-satisfaction.

The offense which his roving eye had detected on this occasion was a pyramid of shells which, owing to a rain induced subsidence of the ground, had tilted off the perpendicular. Before him was a flushing second lieutenant, Mr. Frost, standing to attention with his round balloonlike cheeks inflated with suppressed mutiny and imprecation.

That N. C. O.'s and other ranks were within hearing of the calling down Frost was receiving did not in any way mitigate the flow.

"An officer who is content with such slipshoddiness is obviously inefficient—unfit to hold a commissioned rank."

"I had given orders, sir, for the shells to be repiled."

"He'll Shape, Sir"

The words were blown out of the boy's mouth by the violent propellant of injustice.

"Come here, Mr. Frost."

Beckoned aside, the boy followed.

"Address me in that fashion again and you will be sent to the base. And in the future command the color in your cheeks or you may find yourself under arrest. That will do. Dismiss! But remember."

He turned aside, saw Harley and accepted his salute with a flick of the finger.

"Morning, sir."

"Good morning, Trevelyan. You were responsible for Drayton's posting, were you not?"

"In a way, sir."

"But why? That kind of material is no good to us."

"He'll shape, sir."

Maj. Fawlk shrugged his shoulders.

Harley Trevelyan was the one officer in the battery allowed to express an opinion. In their earlier association Fawlk had tried his intimidating methods on Harley without success. Harley stood his ground and the stuff went by unheeded. His efficiency, thoroughness and conscientiousness were never in doubt. It was useless to try and haze an officer whose courage was mental as well as physical. The tin hat Harley wore deflected satirical shafts as effectively as the cruder metal that floated about a battery position. Fawlk did not like his second-in-command the better for his impeviousness, but he had the sense never to waste vitriol where it would not burn. In consequence the tacit dislike they bore each other never broke the bonds of repression.

"I hope you may be right," said Fawlk, and turned the subject. "Did you look at those Manets?"

Harley nodded.

"Yes," he replied. "They are good. Very deliberate."

"Deliberate, yes—not a bad word—though ruthless would be better. A breakaway from the softer sawder of the Victorians."

A shell whined over and crumped a hundred yards beyond number one. Fawlk did not waste a glance in its direction.

"Manet was ahead of his time—a pioneer. I decided that years ago from a picture, "Dejeuner a l'Herbes," men in silk hats and girls bathing. A very insolent conception."

Bad Observation

Another shell burst nearer and opposite number four. Then two more

High overhead circled a hostile plane framed in a spandril of tufty shrapnel that looked like bits of cotton wool.

Fawlk beckoned to the B. S. M.

"Order your men below, sergeant major."

The B. S. M. saluted and sounded three blasts on his whistle. Men ran.

"Van Gogh is another, but who has ever heard of him? The nation has been fed on a pabulum of sugar and sunsets."

Apparently the plane overhead was satisfied with the bracketing shots and signaled for more liberal diet. Half a dozen German batteries started to plaster an acre of bare countryside with thunderous energy. Clods of earth and great mushrooms of yellow smoke spun and whirled in the air.

Leaning against a wheel of number four Fawlk surveyed the bombardment with cynical interest.

"Fourth day running they've done this," said he. "Bad observation. That fellow," he pointed with his cane to the sky, "ought to be broken. After this we are sure to get a target. We'll move along to the B. C. post."

The walk took them fifty paces nearer to where shells were bursting. But Fawlk did not hurry on that account.

"Vuillard," he said. "Have you ever seen a Vuillard? A distinctive stylist. Great simplicity, a negation of detail."

Then a shell falling short buried itself in the road twenty yards behind them, burst upwards with a savage roar and filled the air with fragments of shrieking metal.

Fawlk turned and looked at Harley as who should say "Still alive?"

"No," said Harley, "I've never seen a Vuillard."

Something approaching laughter was in Fawlk's eyes as they descended the dugout steps together.

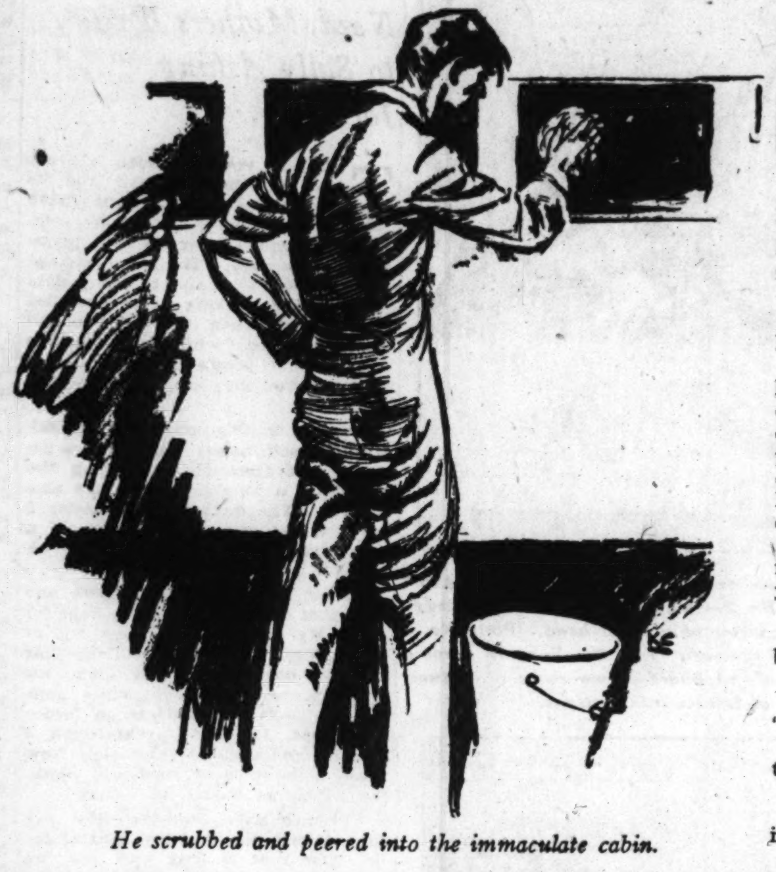
The SPONGE ROUTE

By Austin Parker

Though Defective Eyesight Turned Jimmy Down at Kelly Field, He Found That His Capable Hands Swinging a Sponge Led Him to the Most Thrilling Flight of All.



He scrubbed and peered into the immaculate cabin.

The pilot must possess the innate faculty of selective and instinctive discrimination of the stimuli of the sensormotor apparatus to harmoniously adjust metabolic changes in physiological and psychological equilibrium in such manner as to comprehend and assimilate instruction in the attributes essential to perform the intricate and complex operations which constitute the details of pilotage.

—A medical explanation of the term "inherent flying ability" once posted at Kelly Field.

WHATEVER the foregoing means, the army doctors decided that Jimmy Longstreet didn't have it and they refused to pass him for training. It was the darkest day of Jimmy's nineteen years. No Kelly Field for him, no heaven sent supply of aeroplanes, no smart uniform, no wings for Jimmy Longstreet. Just nothing and lots of it, he reflected as he glowered into the mirror.

Downstairs his mother waited for his father to return from his office for luncheon. She went out to the porch when she heard the car.

"Jimmy's just received word that he's been turned down by the army," she said. Something in his physical examination. I'm so sorry for him." But she added with a sigh, "And so relieved!"

"Yes—relieved!" said Mr. Longstreet emphatically. He mopped his forehead with a handkerchief. "Physical examination, eh? What's wrong with him?"

"Nothing much, I'm sure. He's always been so healthy."

"Better have Doc Johnson look him over."

"If you think best. It's probably nothing but his eyes. He's so careless about wearing glasses when he studies. They say the flying service is frightfully strict."

"And thank heavens for that!" exclaimed Mr. Longstreet. "Well, that's over! I hope now that he'll go back to college and finish his course. I've never liked this idea of Jimmy becoming a pilot."

"Don't think that I've liked it, either," returned his wife.

"You've given him more encouragement than he's ever had from me."

She nodded solemnly. "If any one wants, heart and soul, to be something, do something, I don't like to stand in the way."

It's Calf Love

"If any one wants to do something, heart and soul, he generally does it," he replied as they entered the house. "But I hope that we'll hear less about aviation and more about mechanical engineering from now on."

The maid came in to say that luncheon was served.

"By the way, George," said Mrs. Longstreet, "I think that Jimmy might like to have the car this afternoon if you don't need it. He and Esther have something on. It'll help him to forget his disappointment."

He frowned. "I thought that you wanted the car."

"Just to run out to the Smith's. But I'll do that another day."

He was still frowning. "Aren't Esther and he getting a little thick. She's a pretty youngster, but she hasn't much behind the ears. You don't think——" He paused and said, "They're such romantic young idiots!"

"Can you remember yourself at his age?" laughed Mrs. Longstreet. "It's calf love. Don't worry."

"A boy can make such a mess of things by mistaking calf love for the real thing and marrying too early."

"Can't a girl, too?"

"We happen to have a boy."

"And with a pretty level head on him."

"I used to think so until he was bitten by this flying bug."

"Sh-h-h!" cautioned his wife. Jimmy's slow tread could be heard upon the stairs.

He entered—a tall, quite good looking but slightly slab headed young man with dark eyes. His hair was dark and it was mussed from his fingers running through it. He smiled briefly.

"Hello, dad," he said. "Well, they gave me a bust on the nose. The air service can get along without me."

"So your mother was telling me. What could have been the trouble?"

"Slightly defective vision. Astigmatism. And the medico didn't think I was so hot after he got through spinning me around in a chair. What that's got to do with flying I'm hanged if I can see."

"They ought to know," replied his father as they passed into the dining room. Mrs. Longstreet gave him a frown which said, plainly enough, "You can afford to be a little more sympathetic now that things are coming out as you want them."

Not that he meant to be unsympathetic; but, as he had said numerous times, it was a devil of a note to raise a son, feed him, educate him, see him through measles and mumps, grow proud of him because he was better than lots of other men's sons on the football field, clean and straight, with a good sense of honor, only to have him hankering after a career which invited him daily to break his neck.

Esther Was Pretty

"But that doesn't mean that I'm not going to be a pilot," announced Jimmy.

"I can't afford to put you through the training," said his father.

"I know that. I may get me a job at the field as mechanic or something and take my pay out in flying lessons. I could get quite a bit of time in, maybe, before college starts."

"Tommyrot!" said Mr. Longstreet. "You need a rest before the term begins. That's what vacations are for."

"No rest like doing what you want to do."

"Jimmy," said his mother, "your father says that you can have the car this afternoon, if you like."

"You bet I would!" His face clouded. "Esther'll think I'm a big slob for getting turned down. I've been talking so much about Kelly field that she must think I've been through the darn place. She's crazy about pilots. She has pictures of Lindbergh plastered all over her room. I'm a swell Lindbergh!"

Esther was as pretty as any girl need be. She was seventeen years old; her face was round and enchantingly immature, her eyes were corn flower blue, a curly fringe of blond hair stuck out from under her smart little hat, and her smiling mouth really didn't need the lipstick which she meticulously used so many times a day. In fact the only way in which she was a shade this side of utter perfection was that she so often felt an inner urge to use her lipstick just as you were telling her something important.

She seemed to bubble out of the big house where the Towsons lived.

"I'm so glad you could use your car," she said with a little gasp. "Mine is having its little valves ground and Ann is so stuffy about my using hers, even when she isn't using it. I hate people like that! Don't you?"

Jimmy agreed with her. Esther could never be stuffy or ungenerous. Not in a thousand years!

"I got some bad news this morning," he announced.

"Did you? Really?" She turned a pair of eyes that were already moist with sympathy up to his.

He nodded glumly and gulped. "I'm turned down on the physical. No Kelly field for me."

"O, Jimmy!" She pronounced it "Jim-may."

"Tough luck," he said. "But I guess mother and dad don't think so." He sighed and turned the car up Samset boulevard. "Where'd you like to go?"

"Any old place."

"I'd rather not go to the club," he said. "I don't want to see all the bunch and have to tell 'em. It certainly is tough when a fellow plans his whole life and then has it go bust."

She Went on Her Nose

His hand dropped down, covered hers and she gave his fingers a squeeze.

"I'm awfully sorry, Jimmy! Awfully! Remember all those aeroplane trips we were going to take? 'Member?"

Of course he remembered. Why, everything they had planned to do depended upon aeroplanes. After the army had released him—when he was one of those young gods who can look any man in the eye and say, "I've been through Kelly field"—there'd be a good job waiting for him. A job, then Esther, a honeymoon by air. It was too cruel!

They passed the newly opened Planet Aviation field, just as some lucky devil who hadn't astigmatism or something like that took to the air in a little plane and went frolicking away.

"Maybe I can do it yet, somehow," he said. "If you'll just trust me."

She gurgled, "You know I will."

He let the car loiter along and gazed far ahead where the little plane was becoming a speck. The plane suddenly started down and Jimmy's eyes strained after it as it disappeared behind trees.

"Say!" he exclaimed. "There isn't a landing field there!" His foot went down on the accelerator and the car jumped ahead. "I'll bet he's cracked up!"

"And hurt himself? O!"

They leaned forward excitedly, racing and finally came upon a very bored young man, be-helmeted and be-goggled, leaning against a fence. He yelled and Jimmy stopped the car.

"Do a guy a favor," he said, coming toward them, parachute pack bouncing at every step. "Call up the field and tell 'em that Blaine's down. Will you do that?"

"Sure!"

"Tell 'em to send a couple of mechanics and a truck because we'll have to haul the crate back home."

"What happened?" asked Jimmy.

"O, a connecting rod broke, ripped up things in general. Then I sat her down in a little field and ran into a ditch. She went on her nose. Nothing much."

"We were afraid you were hurt," gasped Esther.

The pilot, Blaine, looked very deeply into her blue eyes before replying. "I knew I could land her," he said, "or I'd have jumped. The only real danger was from fire." He smiled, ingratiatingly.

"Jumped!" she echoed. "The idea makes cold things go up and down my back." She wriggled a little. "I think you men are wonderful!"

Blaine uttered an indulgent laugh.

Jimmy slipped the car into gear. "I'll be back just as soon as I've telephoned." As they went forward he said to Esther, "Nothing particularly wonderful about that." He dismissed the idea with a gesture. "It's all in a day's work for a pilot."

"But sometimes it just makes me shudder to think of you doing such things. You'll be—O, so careful, won't you, Jimmy?"

Not Much Damage

"A pilot must always be careful." He could almost feel her admiring gaze upon him and he looked stern, purposeful.

He telephoned from a roadhouse; then they returned to Blaine.

"Let's go in and pull her tail down," suggested Blaine.

They threaded their way through a fringe of woods to an open field where the plane ungracefully stuck her tail skyward. The nose was ignominously in the earth, propellor shattered. They pulled the tail down. Blaine expertly examined wings and wires.

"Not much damage," he announced. "But the motor's a swell piece of hash."

"Do you mind if I sit in the pilot's seat?" asked Jimmy.

"Go ahead."

Jimmy climbed aboard, put his feet on the rudder bar, took the control stick in his hand. He performed a few imaginary stunts, following the bedside lessons of an instruction book.

Blaine was talking with Esther. "My name's Bill Blaine," he said. "What's your's?"

"Esther Towson," she replied.

"Esther. That's a pretty name. But not half so pretty as you are." Bill Blaine's methods at least had the virtue of being direct. He became confidential. "Y'know, just yesterday I was saying to some of the mugs on the field that I hadn't seen a pretty girl since I've been here, and then just to make up for it I bump into the prettiest girl I've seen anywhere. What's your telephone number?"

Jimmy was busy doing a wing-over.

"O, I—I don't think I'd better," she gasped. She blushed a little and her eyes shone.

"Come on," he urged. "I'll bet it's a pretty number, even. I don't eat little girls. I'll tell you what—if you'll come to a movie with me tonight I'll take you for a hop tomorrow."

Esther was breathless. Without ever making a promise of it, she and Jimmy had always thought of her as taking her first flight with him. But now, if he wasn't going to Kelly——

"Really?"

"I sure will!" Jimmy had risen in the pilot's seat. "What's your telephone number? Quick!"

"East nine-two-one."

. . . .

Jimmy was on the field at nine o'clock, hoping to find Blaine and ask whom he should see about getting a job. But Blaine wasn't around. Finally he engaged a mechanic in conversation and was told that he should ask at the office for the field manager. But the field manager had gone to town. He reported back to the mechanic.

I Want a Job

"The real big smoke on the field is Andy Torrey," said the mechanic. "He's the general manager of the M. P. T. company, up here to see about opening the Planet-New York line."

"Andy Torrey?" demanded Jimmy.

"That's him over there. That big Indian faced guy."

Jimmy stared. Why, every one who knew one end of an aeroplane from the other knew about Torrey! He was one of the three or four great test pilots in the whole country! He was one of the men whom Lindbergh and Byrd called upon when they wanted expert opinion!

"What's eating you?" demanded the mechanic. "Go on up and tell him you want a job."

"I couldn't very well do that."

"Then you don't want a job very bad."

"But I'm not a pilot."

"Neither am I," said the mechanic. "But we all gotta eat, don't we?"

Torrey came sauntering toward them.

"Hello, chief," the mechanic said.

"Hello, Mac. How are they coming?"

"Right enough, except that I need a guy to swab down this ship." He nodded toward Jimmy. "There's a mugg wants a job."

Torrey turned to Jimmy, fixed him like a bug on a pin with a pair of bluish-green eyes. "What kind of a job?"

"Almost any kind, sir. You see, I've just been turned down for Kelly, and so I thought I'd like to get in the game somehow, and so I——"

"Want to be a pilot, I suppose."

"Yes, sir. I thought I might be able to get in a few lessons for my pay."

"We haven't a school here yet," replied Torrey. "Perhaps later. But I might be able to use you if you want to work around planes. College man?"

"Yes, sir. Junior. Engineering."

"Want an office job?"

"I'd rather work in the hangars."

Torrey nodded. He knew the breed. Every field has them, just as a circus has boys who will carry water for the elephants. "Come on with me," he said.

He's a Crazy Kid

A half hour later Jimmy, shirtless and in overalls, was presented with a pail of soapy, luke warm water and a sponge and led to the big M. P. T. cabin plane which was to open the passenger service between Planet and New York the following week. He was to give the wings and body a good washing down, with special attention to the black sooty streaks left by the exhaust.

He scrubbed and peered into the immaculate cabin, upholstered in tan with bright nickle trimmings. A little door led to the pilots' compartment, with its two seats and double control. When he mounted the lower wing he stopped to examine the confusing array of gadgets. Someday——

"Come on, son! Snap to it!" said McCready, the mechanic of the plane.

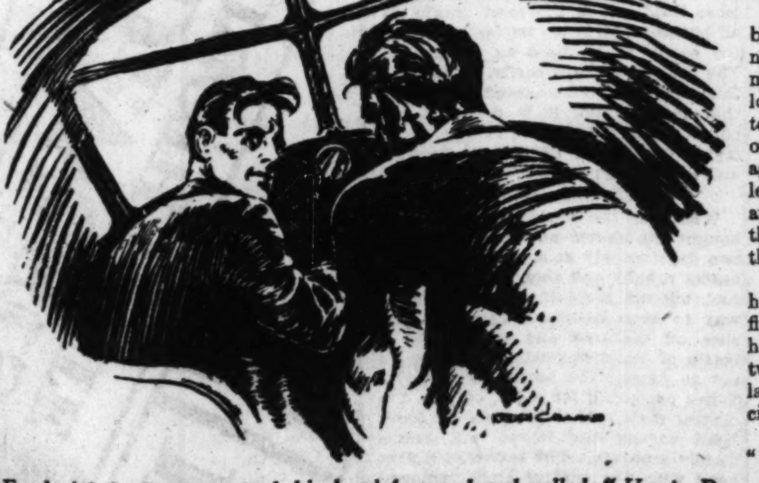
He scrubbed vigorously. His fingers and palms were wrinkled from the water. The black grime worked down into pores and beneath his nails. He was sweating and his nose was smeared.

It was while he was getting his sixth pail of warm water that he saw Esther's little blue roadster draw up beside the farthest hangar. Blaine was with her, and they were laughing together. Jealousy stabbed him and twisted the knife. He came back to the hangar and washed down the rudder because it was near the door and he could look out. A little plane was being rolled to the line, and Blaine was giving her a helmet and goggles. So that was it! He was going to take her up! Esther! He felt like running down there and giving him a good slap on the jaw.

"Hey, Mac," he said suddenly, "what kind of a pilot's this fellow Blaine who cracked up yesterday? Is he safe?"

"One of the best, but he's a crazy kid. The department put him on the ground for a month this spring, just to drive some sense into his head."

"But is he safe?" There was still time for him to run down and remonstrate with Esther.



Frederick L. Ramsey stuck his head forward and yelled, "Hey! Do you know how to fly this thing?

"He's been acting pretty reasonable since then. He won't try any funny business with Torrey on the field. The chief's got him bluffed. Why?"

"He's going to take a friend of mine up."

"That's all right."

Jimmy scrubbed in silence, saw Blaine and Esther take off.

"What date was yesterday, Mac?" he asked presently.

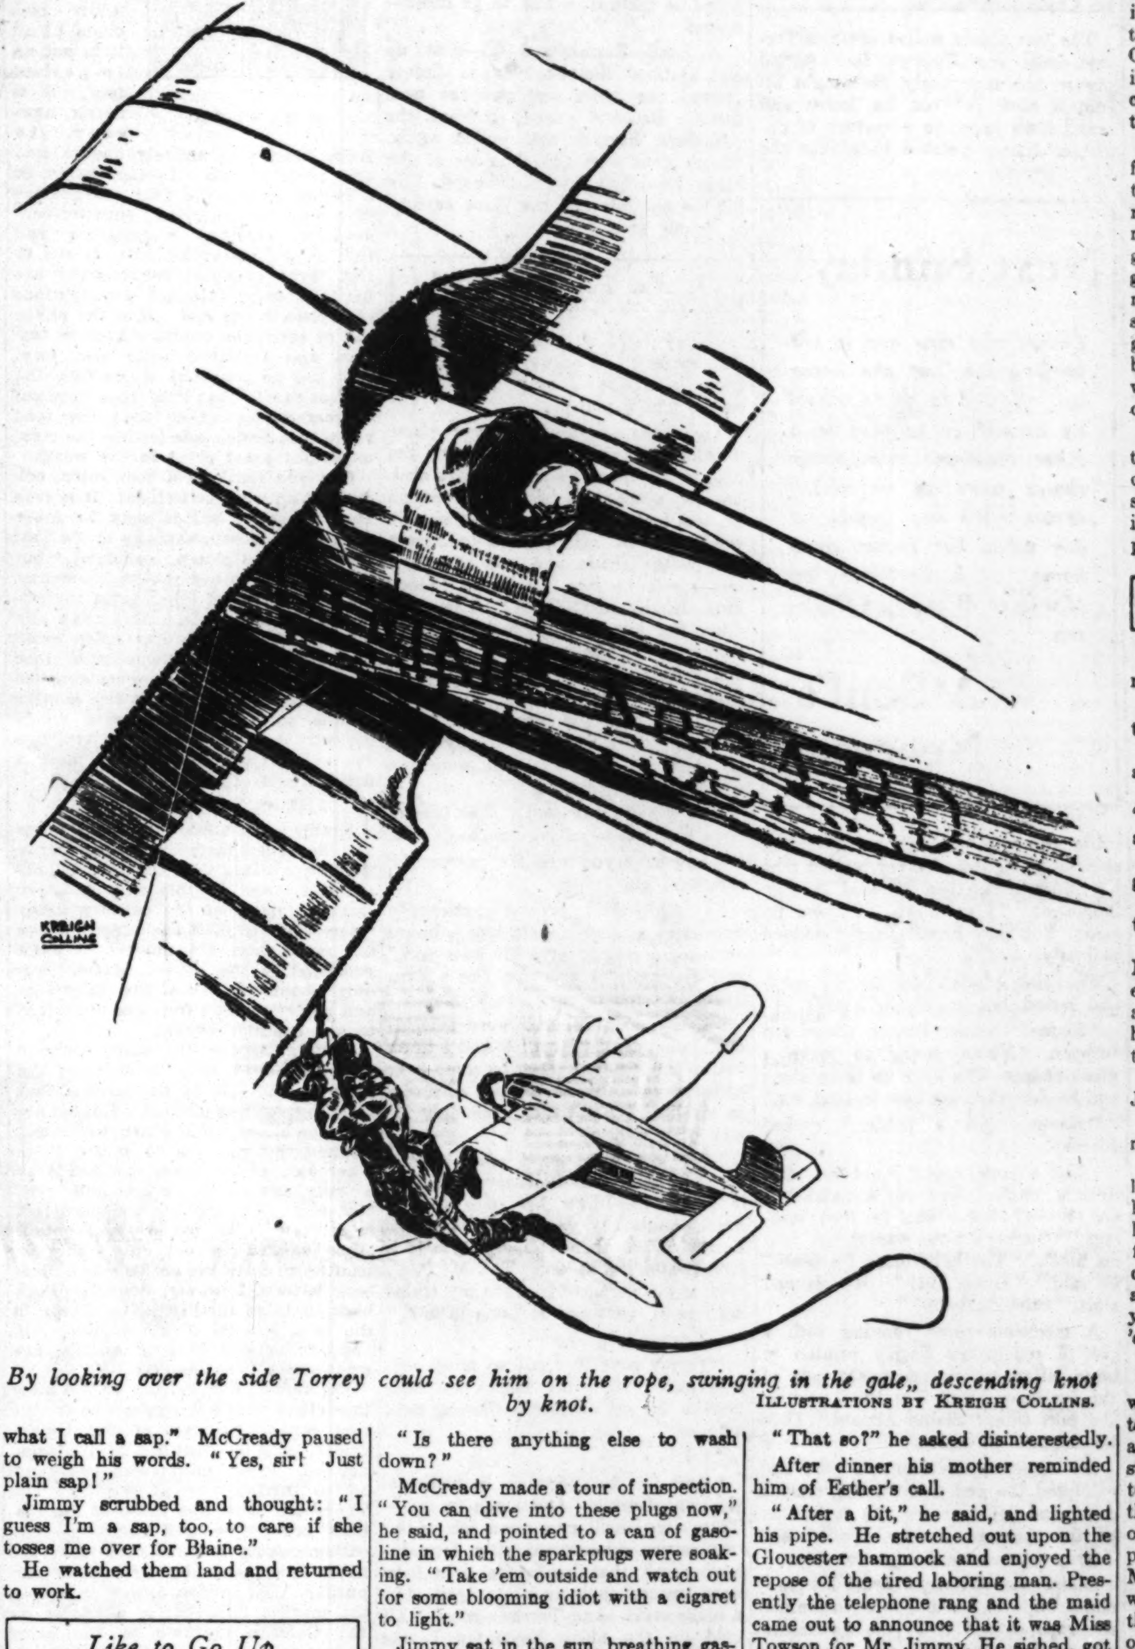
"The fourteenth."

"My unlucky day. Next year when the fourteenth rolls around I'm going to stay in bed with the covers over my head." He added, lugubriously: "And then the house'll probably burn down."

Another period of silence and scrubbing.

"What do you think about women, Mac?"

"I don't," responded the mechanic. "Got no time for women." But the matter of women persisted in his mind and he added: "Now, you take that young mugg, Blaine, f'example. He's always running after some pretty face. Spends all his money on 'em. Goes broke and he has to get a job stunting—wing walking, plane changing or wrecking planes for the pictures—so he'll have more dough for 'em. He's what I call a sap." McCready paused to weigh his words. "Yes, sir! Just plain sap!"



By looking over the side Torrey could see him on the rope, swinging in the gale, descending knot by knot.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY KREIGH COLLINS.

Jimmy scrubbed and thought: "I guess I'm a sap, too, to care if she tosses me over for Blaine."

He watched them land and returned to work.

Like to Go Up

Esther's gurgling laugh sounded behind him. He stiffened indignantly, turned. Esther gazed at him in astonishment, eyes wide, lips parted, and he realized that she hadn't been laughing at him, that she hadn't even seen him. He was sorry that he hadn't kept his head down, gone on working. Blaine grinned broadly.

"Why, Jim-may!" she exclaimed. "What on earth are you doing?"

"I've got a job."

"Taking the old sponge route to a pair of wings, eh?" asked Blaine derisively.

"Maybe."

"But," gurgled Esther, "you look so fun-nay! You're all dir-tay!" She was bubbling with amusement.

"Maybe," he repeated, defiantly. "Maybe I'm dirty, but the plane is cleaner. That's the big idea. So run along. Mac and I have to get this plane ready for a job and we've got no time for women." He turned his back on them, squeezed out the sponge.

"O, all right!" said Esther with a sniff. "If that's the way you feel about it."

Out of the corner of his eye he saw Esther and Blaine depart. He could tell from her walk that she was mad. Let her be mad. Nothing in his life. He had a career to think of.

"Your girl?" asked Mac.

"Doesn't look that way, does it?"

"It sure beats all how they fall for pilots. And I like him giving you the horse laugh because you're swinging a sponge. That's the way he started."

"Did he?" asked Jimmy in amazement.

"I used to give him a kick in the pants ten times a day for loafing."

"I thought he probably went through Kelly."

"He's Got Flat Feet."

McCready laughed. "Naw—he got turned down. He's got flat feet."

"Flat feet!"

"Flat as yesterday's pancake. He's all right in the air, but he walks like a duck."

"Is there anything else to wash down?"

McCready made a tour of inspection. "You can dive into these plugs now," he said, and pointed to a can of gasoline in which the sparkplugs were soaking. "Take 'em outside and watch out for some blooming idiot with a cigaret to light."

Jimmy sat in the sun, breathing gasoline fumes and scrubbing plugs for a change. Andy Torrey came along, nodded and went over to McCready. They talked for several minutes, and once at least they mentioned him, for he saw both of them look at him. Apparently Mac's report was satisfactory. Torrey strolled over and said: "How do you like your job?"

"Fine, sir!"

"Want to go on with it?"

"Yes, sir!"

"It's yours, then. Mac's willing to keep you on as his helper, so you can report to him at eight o'clock in the morning. Ever been up?"

"Just once. There was a pilot giving hops for five dollars a shot at college this spring."

"I'm going to give this ship a test tomorrow morning," said the great Torrey. "I'll take you along if you'd like to come."

Jimmy managed to gasp out a thanks! If he'd like to come! He'd be willing to sit over a reeking can of gasoline and clean sparkplugs all night!

The green countryside lay stretched beneath them, maplike, but Jimmy had no eyes for scenery. The other three men who were sandbagging—acting as load while Torrey gave the ship its test—were gazing out of the windows of the cabin; Jimmy had his face against the window of the door which led to the pilots' cockpit where Torrey and McCready sat. He could follow the movements of Torrey's hands upon the controls, watch the instruments.

To his amazement Torrey took his hands from the wheel and let the plane fly itself. There was some discussion—he could tell from their gestures—between pilot and mechanic regarding lateral balance. They came to a decision and nodded sagely.

When they landed Torrey asked him, "Did you like that?"

Jimmy nodded. "I was watching you at the controls most of the time."

"Perhaps, later, you'll get a chance to try your hand at it. I'll tell Batch and Peterson—they are your pilots—to look out for you." He went toward the office and Jimmy stared after him. What a swell guy!

Jimmy, You're Not Cross

Batch and Peterson arrived in a small plane early in the afternoon. They were businesslike men about thirty years old, who shook hands abruptly when Mac introduced him as his helper. The plane was rolled out, engines warmed, and Jimmy sandbagged again. Then there were exhaust streaks to be sponged off. He was sent to Ma Duffy's hash house for a can of coffee, back once more for cigarets: he stood on his head in the cockpit wiping up the grime that came from shoes; he swept the hangar, ran to the tool house with requisitions and went to the office to ask if there were any letters for Batch from his girl.

He reached home just in time to get washed for dinner. Soap, water and a brush were powerless to make his hands anything but a dark disgrace against the white tablecloth.

"Esther telephoned to you today," said his mother. "She wants you to call her."

"That so?" he asked disinterestedly.

After dinner his mother reminded him of Esther's call.

"After a bit," he said, and lighted his pipe. He stretched out upon the Gloucester hammock and enjoyed the repose of the tired laboring man. Presently the telephone rang and the maid came out to announce that it was Miss Towson for Mr. Jimmy. He sighed, got to his feet.

"O, Jimmy," came her softly reproachful voice, "why haven't you telephoned to me? You're not cross with me, are you?"

"Cross?" he asked with a note of surprise. "I haven't anything to be cross about." (That would let her know how she stood in his life.) "No, I've just been busy. My ship—that is, the one I'm working on—is going out on a job tomorrow. We're taking some prominent men from here over to Grantstown for a chamber of commerce luncheon."

"Daddy is one of them!" she exclaimed. "Didn't you know? It's so thrilling!"

"It's a lot of hard work, anyhow," he replied. "Of course, we want to have the plane in perfect condition. This is a sort of advertising trip, just before we put the ship into the New York-Planet service."

"Jimmy, I was wondering if you could go to a movie with us. Fred and Ann are going and——"

"Not a chance! Can't work ten hours a day and then run around." He paused, confounded by what he was about to say. "You might see if Blaine can go with you. He usually doesn't have much to do."

"All right," she said angrily. "All right—I will!"

"And say—Esther!"

"Well?"

I Think You're Horrid

"Do you know why he got turned down for Kelly?"

"Um-m—no. And I don't care." But she waited in silence.

"He has flat feet," chortled Jimmy.

"I think you're horrid!"

The telephone clicked in his ear. He returned to the porch, rekindled his pipe and sucked at it, smiling. Revenge was sweet. She couldn't very well get romantic over a mugg whose puppies were flat. Not even a pilot.

"You're not making any plans about giving up college are you, Jimmy?" asked his mother.

He evaded a direct reply by saying: "I've been too busy to make any plans about anything. Work, eat, and sleep." He rose and yawned. "But we certainly have that old ship tuned up properly. Gosh, mother, those motors just sing! And I'm for bed."

"Good-night, dear."

"Good-night. And, mother, there really isn't any reason on earth for Agnes to get up at six-thirty and fix my breakfast. I can get it at the hash house on the field. It's pretty fair chow and it isn't too dirty."

His mother's head shook. "It isn't going to hurt Agnes to get up a half an hour earlier, and I feel better if I know you've had a good breakfast to start the day on."

The alarm clock rang at six. A shower and a leap into old clothes; then a day laborer's breakfast, with Agnes a little grumpy just to let him know that a cook's life was not all it should be. A rush for the street car.

He punched the time clock ten minutes early and donned his overalls. There wasn't much work to be done, so he swept out the hangar and put things to rights so that when the prominent citizens came snooping around they'd find everything in order. McCready was patting the engines, feeling things. Newspaper photographers came and loitered about, waiting for the prominent ones.

The idea of sending a delegation from Planet to Grantstown was something in the nature of thumbing the nose at a rival community which had not yet shown its imagination and progressiveness by becoming a link in the growing airway system. It was Planet making snoots at a neighbor—big snoots, because these were Planet's biggest men. Four manufacturers, one banker, one United States senator who was to orate, and the secretary of the chamber of commerce.

The plane was rolled out, put on the line. McCready retired to the door of the hangar and sat on a box in the sun, head in his hands. He was wearing his best suit, for he was to accompany the plane as mechanic.

Let the Kid Go

"Jimmy," he called. "I feel terrible."

"You look it, Mac. What's the trouble?"

"Something I et, I guess. Will you ask the chief to step over?"

He found Andy Torrey and reported. "He looks pretty bad. Sort of green and yellow around the gills."

Torrey hurried to Mac, found him gagging.

"You beat it for bed and get a doctor," he ordered.

"Let the kid go in the bus," said Mac weakly. "There's nothing to do except stand by while she's on the field and see that nobody plays horse with her. God, boss, I feel like I'm going to bust in two!"

"I'll go with you to the shack," said Jimmy.

He returned a few minutes later and reported that a doctor was coming out.

"Skin out of those overalls and look like a banker," said Torrey. "All you have to do is to see that people don't handle the machine while it's on the field at Grantstown. Keep the door open and let 'em look inside. Answer all the fool questions they ask. If you don't know the answers, answer 'em anyhow."

"Yes, sir."

The prominent ones arrived. Esther was with her father, and Jimmy loitered about conspicuously, "tuning up an exhaust manifold," until he was sure that she had noticed him. Photographers were shooting pictures of the passengers. Senator Crumley, hat off, smiling benignly, getting into the plane; Jefferson Bains, of the B. & T. Machinery company, waving from a window; Esther's father standing with the two pilots; Frederick L. Ramsey of the Planet Stove works standing in the cabin door.

Jimmy strolled over to Esther. "Looks as though we'll have a good flight," he said, with an expert glance at the sky.

"Are you going, too?"

"O, yes. It's better to have one of the mechanical crew along. I wish they'd finish with this flapdoodle and get under way."

Batch, the second pilot, climbed to his cockpit. A starter whirred and a motor roared into action; then the second motor. They idled, purring.

Jimmy cocked an ear to them. "They're sweet!" he announced professionally. "Sweet! Have a nice time at the movies last night?"

Esther pouted. "You might have known I wouldn't go."

"Just because a fellow has flat feet?"

"You're perfectly horrid!"

God, I'm Sick

He uttered an elderly laugh. Planet's nose-thumbers were getting aboard.

"Well, we've got to shove off. So long." He was stiff-legged with pride as he walked toward the plane, climbed aboard and took his seat. The plane wheeled about, taxied to leeward, faced the wind and took off.

The passengers, discovering that their voices were nearly lost in the roar of motors, expressed themselves by grimaces and gestures. But, being long on industry and short on pantomime, they gradually lost interest in one another and went in for scenery. Jimmy had his nose against the window, watching Patterson at the controls.

He noticed that Batch kept spitting into his handkerchief and that once or twice he turned an agonized gaze upon his co-pilot. Patterson squirmed uneasily in his seat, stuck his head above the windshield so that cool air blew on it. He was turning greenish and his lips were white. Suddenly his hands left the wheel and went to his belly as though he had been shot. Batch took the controls. Patterson writhed convulsively in his seat, stood half erect, and nearly fell backward against the door.

Jimmy turned the latch, slid the door open, and the pilot reeled into the cabin. "God, I'm sick!" he moaned.

The passengers were in commotion. Several of them rose and started forward. "Get back there and sit down!" bawled Jimmy. "Go on! Sit down!" To Patterson: "Sit in my place."

"Can't," said the pilot. "He was stricken with another pain. "Got to lie down." He sprawled in the narrow aisle, clutching his belly, his eyes staring as though they might pop from his head. "Tell Batch to land at nearest town. Doctor. This is awful."

Batch was glancing back through the door. Jimmy went to him, found him gagging.

"Patterson says to land at nearest town. He's terribly sick. Ptomaine, I guess."

"Me, too," gasped Batch. "That damn hash house! Had breakfast together. Good Lord, son! Can't see anything! Take her for a little bit. Just hold her steady. Wait."

He swung the ship about, headed for Planet.

"Pilot?" he asked.

"No."

"Just hold her on that point." He indicated the compass. "Don't touch throttle. O Lord!" He put his head outboard and gagged. "Hold rudder to center. Fly herself. Got to straighten up. One of us be all right in a minute."

This Is Terrible

He straightened as though a spring had whipped loose inside of him and slid into the cabin on top of Patterson. They were frightfully sick—too sick to care whether the plane crashed or not, and presently so sick that they were afraid it wouldn't. Ma Duffy's food had done them in.

Jimmy, cold from fright, stared at the compass and tried to keep on course. From his bedside instruction he had a vague idea of what he should do, but the plane had a rebellious way of swerving blindly off. When he tried to correct he overcorrected, with the result that he was flying a long, flattened S. The altimeter was mounting higher and higher, because the weight of an extra man aft, less one forward, made the ship tail-heavy. He had been told not to touch the throttles, but it wouldn't do to go on climbing, so he leveled off with the controls. The experiment seemed to work. He held the wheel there and concentrated upon the compass, which was far off again.

Frederick L. Ramsey of the Planet Stove works, stuck his head forward and yelled "Hey!" in Jimmy's ear. Jimmy turned for an instant.

"Do you know how to fly this thing?"

"I'm doing it!" answered Jimmy. "Are they better yet?"

"They're worse!"

His heart sank and he uttered an "O, my gosh!"

"We want to know," yelled Ramsey, "if you can land us?"

"No!" answered Jimmy.

"This is terrible!" announced the stove king, as though he had made a discovery which should be reported to the police. "Terrible!"

Jimmy faced him squarely. "Shut up!" he yelled. "Keep your trap shut and get one of those pilots on his feet. Can't stay up here all night."

"We've got to do something," said Ramsey.

"What the hell do you want me to do?" demanded Jimmy. "Anchor to a cloud?"

"Do something," the man repeated. He was a captain of industry and accustomed to having his orders obeyed. Upon land it needed a stout heart to tell Frederick L. Ramsey to shut up.

Jimmy, exasperated to the point of murder, said: "If you know any more about this than I do, take it!" He lifted his hands from the control. The plane stuck her nose up as though she'd hit a bump and Ramsey disappeared. Jimmy got the nose down again, looked ahead, and saw the smokestacks of Planet. To the right lay the field, so inviting, so unattainable.

"Write," Commanded Jim

In the cabin Frederick L. Ramsey was busily trying to wash up an accumulation of fifty-odd years of unsaid prayers. Several followed his lead. The others stared stonily ahead or exchanged shy, desperate glances. The only ones who didn't care what happened were the pilots: they were too wretchedly ill to care about this world or the next.

At the field eleven men were sick. Three doctors from Planet were working over them, and an ambulance was removing them, two at a time, to the hospital. The health authorities had closed Ma Duffy's hash house and seized the food for analysis.

The panic was at its height when the big cabin plane appeared over the field. Andy Torrey, feet planted far apart, stood looking up at it as it circled.

"What the devil!" he exclaimed softly. The turn had been made stiffly, not with the easy, deft control of either Patterson or Batch. The plane had skidded around, wanting to go in one direction and being forced into another. It continued to circle, without losing altitude.

"Now what the——" he began and broke off. He whipped around, gaped for a moment at the men about him. "Did Patterson and Batch have breakfast at Ma's this morning?" he demanded.

"Yes," replied one of the mechanics. "They ate together."

There was a moment of horrified silence, broken by a yelping order from Torrey to get out his plane; then a rush for the hangar. The plane was wheeled out and the engine started. It seemed ages before the indicator moved out of the red.

In the air, Mr. Ramsey was acting as Jimmy Longstreet's secretary. "Write!" commanded Jimmy. "'Both pilots sick and unable to fly. Am at controls. Paint on side of airplane what to do.' And sign it James Longstreet." He took the paper from Ramsey's shaking hand, glanced at it. "Now take off your shirt. Take off your shirt, I say!"

Under both of the pilot's seats were neat tool cases. He opened one, took out a wrench. "Wrap the note around that and tie it with a strip of shirt," he ordered. "Then tear the rest of the shirt in two pieces. Tie them together so they'll make a streamer."

He gazed down at the field and cast the message overboard.

Torrey had just waved a signal to have the blocks withdrawn when one of the men shouted and pointed to a white fluttering object. He waited, saw it fall a half mile from the field.

"Get it!" he said, and gave his motor the throttle. He zoomed off and climbed.

Painting Instructions

The two planes pulled abreast. Torrey could see Jimmy's face turned toward him inquiringly. He caught his control stick between his knees and raised both hands in a gesture of applause. Jimmy pointed back into the cabin and went through a pantomime show of being sick. Torrey replied that he understood; then he said in sign language: "I go down. I come up again. You stay here." Jimmy nodded violently.

Next Sunday

Louise was nine and in the third grade, but she never was allowed to go to school by herself or to play with other children; even roller skates were an unrealized dream until one wonderful day when her father came home . . . a short story by Margaret Weymouth Jackson.

A Soul's Necessity

The little plane dived for the earth and taxied, tail up, to the hangar.

"Blaine!" yelled Torrey. Blaine ran forward. "You're going to make a plane change. The kid's up there alone and he doesn't know how to land her."

"Haven't got a ladder," replied Blaine.

"Use a rope then! Knot it! And wear a 'chute. Give me a paint pot and brush! What was in that message?" Jimmy's note was thrust into his hands. "The kid's using his bean," he said. "Good kid!" He glanced aloft. "Stick it, baby!"

A mechanic came running with a pot of red paint. Torrey printed in large letters on the starboard side of the fuselage, "Will Try Put," and on the port side, "Blaine Aboard." Then he hopped off again.

He came up on Jimmy's port and exhibited the first three words, crossed over, and let him see the remainder of the message. Jimmy nodded and Torrey went down in a motor dive.

Blaine was waiting, wearing his parachute, rope in hand. Torrey examined the rope, tossed it to the mechanics, put an arm around Blaine, and took him to one side.

"I'll try to spot you right on top of the cabin," he explained. "Beware the propellers. If the kid gets rattled and starts jumping don't try to make it. Just cut loose and we'll try it again." He glanced at his watch. "The kid's got seventy minutes of gas left. That means we can make at least three tries at it, so don't take any fool chances. If you get busted up we're cooked."

They rejoined the others and watched the men attach the rope to the landing carriage of the plane.

"It's going to be a horrible black eye for flying if we don't get that ship down," said Torrey. "If the kid tries to land—and he can't stay up there forever—he'll probably spread 'em all over two square miles. And maybe that won't be in every paper in the world tomorrow morning! Let's go."

"This 'chute is going to make it terrible awkward," complained Blaine. "I'd just as soon take a chance without it, boss."

"You'll wear that 'chute!" replied Torrey, and he muttered something about "more guts than brains."

They mounted and Blaine cast overboard the rope so that Jimmy could see it; then he crawled out on the wing and sat there. They could see strained faces peering from the cabin windows at them.

Ramsey Reports Progress

Torrey motioned "straight ahead" and held his hand flat as a warning to be steady. He pulled up slowly and came over the ship, gave Blaine his signal. The boy wriggled down toward the undercarriage, disappeared. By looking over the side Torrey could see him on the rope, swinging in the gale of wind, revolving slowly, descending knot by knot. At last, at the very end, he wound the rope about his right leg so that he could rest his arms for an instant. By putting out one arm or the other against the wind he could control his spinning, hold himself facing forward. He looked up and waved.

Jimmy had selected a point on the horizon and was aiming for it, holding the ship squarely on it. A head peered over the ridge of the cabin, ducked down now and then. It was Ramsey, reporting progress.

Torrey let his plane sink slowly, gave more throttle. A slight error in judgment, a sudden jump of the cabin ship and the propellors might make hash of Blaine.

He dragged the boy up the backbone of the cabin, saw him cut loose and sprawl there, legs and arms out, clutching desperately at the smooth sides. He was just aft of the highest point of the cabin roof. The blast of wind against him and the downward slope of the roof made it seem unlikely that he would be able to work his way forward. In that case there was nothing for him to do but go over the side and hope that the stabilizer plane would not hit him. He continued to cling there.

If only Jimmy knew enough to throttle down and put the ship into a glide, thought Torrey. That would cut off the propellor blast and reduce the slope. Torrey drew alongside and made a frantic gesture to him to go down—down!

A hand—Ramsey's hand—shot up and grabbed Blaine's, just as Jimmy obeyed the order and put the nose down. Ramsey pulled, grabbed the parachute harness and pulled again. Blaine went over the shoulder of the cabin, head first into the cockpit. He hit the controls and the plane entered a vicious dive.

It Was Too Wonderful

Torrey dived after them, saw the big ship swing up on an even keel. As he drew alongside Jimmy and Blaine waved triumphantly.

The sight of his passenger plane winging its way gracefully toward the field should have made his heart glad, but for a moment he felt as though he, too, had ptomaine. He felt sickish, weak, done-in. He wanted to stretch out in the shade and not have any one speak to him for hours. Good kids, Jimmy and Blaine! They had done the job and he had done the worrying. It was great stuff for them, and nothing but more gray hairs for Andrew Torrey.

"O, it was too wonderful!" exclaimed Esther. "Daddy simply raved about you! He says you were too wonderful for anything!"

Jimmy shifted uneasily. The idea of John T. Towson raving was too much.

"And have you seen the pay-pers?" she went on.

"I don't think it was particularly wonderful to sit up there like a bump on a log trying to save my own skin," said Jimmy. "I was just like a darn flying Dutchman—no place to go."

"Every one says you were marvelous!" continued Esther. "And I think you're the sweetest thing to come over and see me! I've never been so proud in my life!" She paused, but only for lack of breath.

"I've got some good news to tell you," he said. "I wanted you to hear it first." He drew her over to the couch and they sat down. "Andy Torrey had a talk with dad just before dinner, and I'm all set. The M. P. T. company is going to give me my training free at its school on Long Island!"

"Jim-may!"

"Torrey says I've got to finish college and that if my marks are high enough I'll get advanced training next summer."

"O!"

"And I'm to specialize in aeronautical engineering. And listen to this—Torrey says he'll give me a job in the engineering department after I graduate! Isn't that hot? He says they need trained engineer-pilots. Gosh, I'm a lucky stiff! And Torrey's got dad all sold on the idea. Yesterday I was just a mugg swinging a sponge and now I'm going to be a pilot!"

Her hand crept into his.

"It's a pretty dirty paw you're holding. I can't get 'em clean."

"I don't care! Will you write to me—ever so often?"

"I sure will, if you'll write to me." She nodded excitedly. "And I'd be mighty happy if you'd wear my fraternity pin while I'm flying. Will you?"

"O, Jim-may!"

Vacation Bound

By Eleanor Jewett.

But, Rover, I don't know if boys
Can bring their dogs along;
And when a fellow's new in camp
He hates to get in wrong.

Look here! Take care of Mother;
I'm leaving her behind—
And it sort of, kind of, aches me,
Though I didn't think I'd mind.

You know she likes you, Rover,
'Most as much as you like me—
And don't forget that mutton bone
You buried by our tree.

Shake hands, old dog—I have to go—
There's Daddy with the car.
D'you like my suit case? It's brand new—
Camp's not so very far.

By Meta Given

The Base of Almost Every Delicious Salad Is Cool, Crisp Green Lettuce.

META GIVEN.

A man of average size would have to eat about fifty large heads of lettuce each day to meet his calorie or fuel needs and at least 24 heads to fill his protein requirements. With only this much information about lettuce one would naturally conclude that it is not an important food. It is unfair, however, to judge food value entirely upon a fuel and protein basis. Lettuce eaten in a generous amount [say one-quarter of a head for a serving] supplies considerable calcium, phosphorus and iron as well as vitamins A, B and C. But these chemical constituents are not the only valuable contributions of lettuce to our diet. It is the physical, or aesthetic, qualities such as texture and beautiful color and form that are so essential in making the perfect salad. And it is these physical characteristics rather than the food value that have made lettuce the most important salad plant in the world.

Can you think of a cool, crisp, colorful salad without lettuce? It is true that attractive salads may be made with cress, celery, cabbage or Pe Tsai [celery or Chinese cabbage], but these plants do not always harmonize with the flavor of other salad ingredients as does lettuce. More than any other plant, lettuce has made salad the popular and indispensable food that it is. When the market supplied us with lettuce only for a few months in the spring, salads were rarely served. As soon as it was available the year round the salad became a daily article of diet.

Many Varieties Offered.

Highly specialized trucking areas and improved methods of transportation have made this constant supply possible. And in this supply drawn from all parts of the country many interesting varieties are offered. There are more than 125 market varieties produced in the United States. But only about one dozen are important and not more than four are important on the Chicago market.

Iceberg lettuce, the most common of all varieties, may be obtained the year around. It is the lettuce that most housewives choose. [Many are not acquainted with other varieties.] In fact, many seem to prefer it to other varieties because the heads as a rule are solid, crisp and well blanched. It stands up well in salad, is attractive for shells to contain other salads, or cut into cubes or sections to form the entire salad. Iceberg lettuce, however, does not rank high in table quality. The flavor is the most neutral of all lettuces. Its appearance and keeping quality are what make it so popular.

Big Boston lettuce, one of the most important varieties appearing in the east central markets of the United States, may be identified by its large, pointed, loose head with envelope leaves turned back at the tip. The leaves aro thick like those of the Iceberg, but not so well blanched. The eating quality is considered high, the flavor sweet and slightly buttery and nutlike. Big Boston lettuce is not on the market now, but is available on the Chicago markets in the early spring and again late in the fall. It is used for garnishes, shredding, and for entire salads

Romaine and Leaf Lettuce.

Romaine, sometimes called Cos lettuce, is identified by its plain, long, narrow leaves. [See illustration]. There is no tendency to head, but the dense upright growth of leaves resembles a semi-head. The leaves are dark green, are crisp, coarse in texture, but have a fine flavor that is sweet and nutty. Those who are good judges of lettuce quality consider Romaine the best of all.

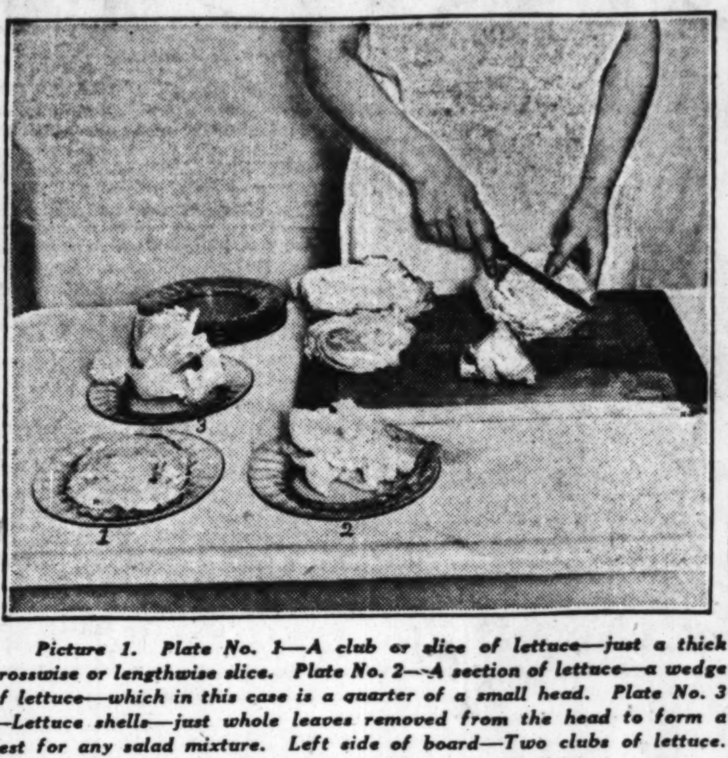
Romaine has been on the market for the last two months. It will be avaible again in the fall. If you are not familiar with this variety of lettuce, get acquainted with it as soon as you can. It is fine as a salad base, makes a most beautiful garnish and is excellent for shredding and wilting.

Leaf lettuce is of many varieties—Black Seeded Simpson and Hanson are two important ones. It is usually produced in green houses early in the winter and spring. It can be identified by its long, light green, ruffly, serrated leaves with an upright growth that gives the apearance of a loose head. It is the most fragile of all lettuces and is too tender and tears too easily to be used as a garnish. The thin leaves wilt easily. Although this variety is not adapted for salads that must stand, it is desirable for shredding or wilting and is well worth trying because of its delicate texture and superior flavor.

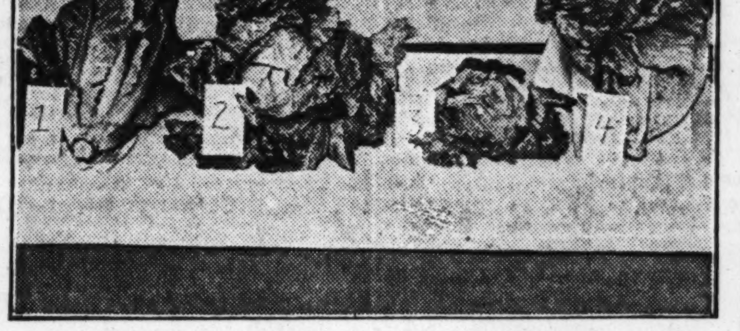
Deteriorates Quickly.

Whatever the variety of lettuce is bought one should not buy more than two days' supply at a time. It deteriorates rapidly and should be kept in a cool, but not too damp place. A good way to keep lettuce is to cut a thin slice off the root and stand it in a bottle of water in such a manner as not to expose the leaves to the wet. When preparing for salad, cut out the central stalk. If it is a leaf or loose head variety the leaves will immediately separate. The leaves of a firm head with the central stalk removed will eventually loosen in cold water, making it possible to separate them in perfect shape for shells and garnishes. Shells as well as the trimmed washed heads should be wrapped in a clean cloth and put in the refrigerator.

All outside leaves of the lettuce not attractive enough for salad service but with no damage other than tears or bruises can be used successfully in the preparation of many delicious foods. Any kind of pot herb such as greens or spinach may be augmented by outside lettuce leaves and an interesting mellow flavor will result. Outside leaves may also be shredded for salad garnishes or for wilting. They may be used too, in the preparation of delicious hodge podge salads or cream soups.



Picture 1. Plate No. 1—A club or slice of lettuce—just a thick crosswise or lengthwise slice. Plate No. 2—A section of lettuce—a wedge of lettuce—which in this case is a quarter of a small head. Plate No. 3—Lettuce shells—just whole leaves removed from the head to form a nest for any salad mixture. Left side of board—Two clubs of lettuce. Right side of board—Cutting a head of lettuce into sections.



Picture 2. No. 1—Romaine. Note the long plain leaves quite firmly held together in a semi-head fashion. No. 2—Home grown head lettuce of Hanson variety. No. 3—California iceberg lettuce. Head smaller and firmer than No. 2. No. 4—Leaf lettuce. Note the long, rather broad leaves that are so tender that they scarcely hold together at the base.

One of the most common ways of serving iceberg or head lettuce is in sections with thousand island or Roquefort cheese dressing. By sections we mean a wedge of lettuce obtained by cutting the head into five or six equal portions. The section should always be served on a lettuce shell or a bed of shredded lettuce to be pleasing in appearance. Another interesting way of serving head lettuce is in clubs. A club is a thick slice of lettuce cut crosswise or lengthwise to the head. These lie flat in the salad plate forming a good base for fruit and vegetable salads, such as tomato and pineapple. [See illustrations for cutting clubs and sections.]

RECIPES.

CREAM OF LETTUCE SOUP.

1 medium solid head lettuce.
1½ tablespoon butter.
1 tablespoon minced onion.
½ teaspoon salt.
Pepper.
2 cups water.
¾ cup top milk.
2 cups concentrated meat stock or 2 cups water in which 3 beef or chicken bouillon cubes are dissolved.

Shred lettuce fine. Melt butter in saucepan, add lettuce, onion, and salt. Cook until lettuce begins to change color, stirring occasionally with a fork. Add water and simmer until lettuce is tender. Press through a coarse sieve. Almost all the lettuce should go through. There should be 2 cups liquid and pulp. Add to liquid and pulp the stock or the water and bouillon cubes. Reheat to boiling point. Add milk and pepper. Serve at once.

Yield: 4 cups or 5 servings. One serving: Total, 100 calories: protein, 8 calories; fat, 78 calories; carbohydrates, 14 calories.

HODGE PODGE SALAD.

2 cups shredded lettuce.
1 cup sliced celery.
1 cup diced tomato.
¼ cup diced green or red pepper.
½ cup diced cucumber.
½ cup French dressing.

Combine all ingredients just before serving. Arrange in mounds on attractive lettuce shells.

Yield: 6 serving. One serving: Total, 130 calories, protein, 4 calories; fat, 103 calories; carbohydrates, 23 calories.

Precautions.

Cut each vegetable carefully. Toss ingredients together carefully to keep shape and preserve identity of each vegetable. Any finely cut vegetable used in salad should be prepared immediately before using. The beauty of a salad depends much upon the freshness of each ingredient.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Fathers Out of Work, Small Children in Need, Mothers Write to Sally Asking for Help.

THE last year has seen a great deal of unemployment and its accompanying afflictions have reduced many erstwhile comfortable families to a state of privation and poverty. The small savings wage earners were able to accumulate during their working years dwindled away quickly when the expense of living continued while the income stopped and people find themselves in a situation they are unable to cope with.

Families in this condition, especially those with small children, are pathetic and from them we beg the assistance a number of you are able to give. The mother whose letter I am printing below is only one of a great many who have come to my attention:

"Dear Miss Brown: Is there any way that you can get some help for me? My husband has been out of work since the beginning of the year and we don't know how long this will last. All our savings are gone and we have five children to feed—four boys, 12, 6, 2½ years, and 4 months, and a girl 4 years old. Now these children need food and clothing which we cannot give them.

"Friends have helped a little, but they cannot buy wearing apparel for us. Our rent is long past due, we owe gas and electric bills, and there's not a chance in sight that things will change. Would it be possible to obtain through your column some of the things the children need and perhaps a baby carriage or bed for the baby? Perhaps you could get some castoff clothing for me, too. I wear size 40 or 42, and shoes size 6½.

"MRS. C. P."

Try to imagine the mental anguish of a mother in the position and circumstances of Mrs. C. P. Five small children, unable to do anything for themselves, no income, no employment, and a despairing outlook on the future!

Out of Hospital.

"I have just been discharged from the hospital, where I spent the last 2½ years and am now able to do light work, but I haven't presentable clothing to wear. If you can get me what I need it will help so much in giving me a fresh start. I am five feet six inches tall and weigh 150 pounds. My shoe size is 8½ and I need shorts, size 15½. I would especially like a suit of clothes and a brief case, if possible.

"M. K."

After such a long siege of illness the business of getting back to work and a normal life is one that requires a great deal of perseverance. Can you help to give this poor fellow the start he needs by providing him with clothing that will be presentable for work?

Porch Awning.

"I wonder if, through your kindness, I could secure an awning for my porch. It is 7x18 feet. I am a woman, 75 years old, no longer able to work. My house is small and stove heat makes it uncomfortable during the summer. My elder sister who lives with me is an invalid and an awning would make the porch more comfortable for both of us.

"MRS. A. S."

If you are investing in new awnings this season, won't you give the large one you are discarding to these elderly women? With such protection from the hot rays of the sun, their porch would be a pleasant place for them to spend their leisure minutes.

Seeks Education.

"My husband was an orphan and for some reason he received no education. We have been married three years and after that time of seeing better jobs go to men no brighter than he, we have begun to realize why he is out of work so much. Could you get me some school books so that I can teach him in the evenings? We need a grade school speller and a beginner's arithmetic. MRS. A. P."

Have you the books which will give this young man the education he missed when he was a child? With the help of these, his own ambition and the assistance his wife can give him, he should be able to accomplish a great deal.

Meet Romance Half Way

By Antoinette Donnelly

Be Your Prettiest, Daintiest and Freshest and Remember a Sunburned Nose Has No Particular Charm

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—As I have suggested before, this is one summer when a girl may prove to her satisfaction (matrimonial even, maybe) that there's no such thing as a homely woman, only the one who does not know how to make herself attractive.

All summers are good seasons for girls. There are no prettier clothes than summer ones and, with outdoor life added to your wardrobe, what chance has the poor boy friend to escape your lure! This summer of the year 1930 you have, in addition to the season's advantages, a beauty of dress that hasn't been rivaled for years. It offers you, in addition to the gay colors, the cool colors, and the crisp, an infinite variety of fashion lures that can be called by no better name than feminine.

Take advantage of them, every one of them, from embroidered linen shoe to a tantalizing scent trailing you hither and yon, letting your skirt, full or trailing, flutter in the summer breeze.

Insure a Romantic Season.

But, beside the moon and the stars, there are certain elements of summer to be reckoned with for the making of a romantically beautiful season. I know a girl who had a young man on the verge of a proposal. Anyway, he had all the symptoms of a man ready to declare himself. Then she went swimming in the broiling sun one noonday and sat on the beach for a few minutes with said young man. He asked her to go sailing with him that evening. By six o'clock the girl was suffering so from her sunburn that she had to call a doctor. The young man couldn't go sailing alone —at least, young men don't, so he asked another girl. By the time girl No. 1 was recovered the other girl had got in such effective work that No. 1 never did learn anything more about astronomy from the lips of said young man.

Which just goes to show that you have got to think about other heavenly bodies beside young men and the moon and stars when you're away gathering vacation romance. You don't want to get all burned up—by the sun.

Unless your skin is hardened to exposure don't hang around a minute after you come out of the water. It is the wet skin that raises blisters. Dry yourself off and get into the shade immediately. You can do a year's damage with one bad blistering. There is nothing about a burned skin to win eulogies, and, unless your tanning is goldenish along with the brown, your 1930 complexion will not be a success. The tropical shades are passé. So take your tanning treatments in light doses. Sunlight at the seashore, on mountain tops, and in the open fields is different from sunshine in the city, and must be taken in smaller doses at first.

Take Sunlight with Care.

Don't expose yourself to the sunlight all day for the first day you are out in it. A few minutes the first day, then gradually extend the time. If you have only a day at the beach, or a week-end, get into the sun before and after the middle of the day.

Sun bathing and sunlight are necessary for the good health and looks of a woman, but they can be overdone with harmful effects. They can, in addition to burning, cause freckles and, unless one is a piquant young thing, freckles are not attractive. The large black or dark brown ones are almost disfiguring.

Women are by now well educated in preserving the skin by protective lotions against the signs of age. It is a simpler matter to protect the skin against summer ailments. A cream rubbed into the skin will prevent the burning and freckling in some cases. If the susceptibility is great, then more stringent methods of prevention had better be adopted. There are oils and lotions on the market that prevent the sun's rays from penetrating deeply and there are lotions to apply immediately after the skin has been burned. If the skin is burned don't use water on it for a day or two. Then tepid water is the thing to use.

There is an old formula which you may use to prevent and relieve a burn if you can stand its odor. It is equal parts linseed oil and limewater, and it is effective.

It is understood the sun tan make-up is not so prevalent a passion this year as last, which is well if it eliminates those women for whom the manufacturers never intended it. But there are any number of girls who can adopt this type of make-up and be the more attractive for it. If it gives you a mustardy, jaundiced look, forego it. But a little tan may be just the touch you need. You can get the shades you want in powder and rouges—only be sparing in the use of each, and with the powder be sure and extend it to the neck, as the neck and face should not be two different shades.

There is one other summer malady to which many are prone and which, if not protected against, leaves a girl out of the attractive class. It is perspiration. It is well to let the summer heat work perspiration out of the system, but this can be done with an exercise program, after which a warm bath is taken, a shower follows, and the skin is clean. If there is perspiration in excess of this and it has a noticeable odor, use a deodorant or an astringent under the arms. Use a dusting powder over the entire body surface after the bath. There are excellent ones to be had at comparatively small cost.

Then, in summer, remember because of the extra activity of the sweat glands you need to be particularly clean about underthings. Twice a day changes are needed. Shoes should be worn on alternate days and stockings kept just as sweet and fresh as possible.

It is not only the ravishing colors and the season's fascinating style of clothes that is going to create the lovely summer Miss. It is those items added to the most scrupulous care of the body in every little detail of hygiene.

Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Mae Tinee Edward Moore
Jay Allen John Chapman

JULY 20, 1930.

Madrid Governs, That Explains Her Existence

Her Secret Not Sinister, It's Amusing.

This is the third of a series of articles on Spain by Jay Allen of The Tribune's foreign staff. In the series he will tell of the political and economical problems now confronting this ancient and romantic country, including the movement, which he terms "really formidable," against the king. The next will appear in an early issue.

By Jay Allen.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID. — [Special Correspondence.]—This hotel belongs to an international chain which furnishes its rooms all alike.

To make sure in the first bewildered moment of awakening that you are in Madrid and not in Brussels or Lyons or anywhere but Madrid, all you have to do it to cock your ear to the noise.

This is an infallible system except during the siesta hour after lunch and around 6 in the morning when the city is silent storing up for new outbursts.

If you hear a burro, it's all right, but in case the burro which they station under your window for the purpose is sick there are other sounds peculiar to this capital.

A street in Madrid wakes up all at once in the morning. Like a barracks. The reveille is usually a galvanized iron shutter thrown up with ear-splitting effect. All the stores in Madrid are shuttered as in other Latin countries where the memories of unpleasantnesses are not dead.

Bang Go the Shutters.

Somebody sets off one of these shutters. It is the signal. They go up all along the street, like a barrage. All sorts of things begin to happen at once.

Maids throw back French windows and more shutters higher up. They salute the morning with tattoos on carpets.

Within eight seconds the street venders arrive. The fellow who seems to be announcing fire, plague, and revolution is only selling bath towels. Another shouts lyric praise of his stock of string beans and still another wants the world to know that he has churros (a kind of doughnut) for sale at ten centimos a pair. Next come the street cleaners pushing batteries of iron carts over the cobbles.

From the café across the street comes shuddering sounds. They are dragging forth big flat iron pans of coffee beans to be roasted on the pavement over charcoal braziers.

The coal dealer is late. A full twenty-six seconds after the signal for the barrage he dashes up in a little two-wheeled cart drawn by a burro, leaps out, jerks up his shutter and falls to with his shovel. His burro is in good spirits.

The Burro's Song.

"I thought at first," said a nice old lady from America later in the day discussing this burro, "that it must be something gigantic and mechanical gone all to pieces. Then I realized that even the Spanish aren't ingenious enough to develop a purely mechanical noise like that. I got up and looked out the window and, of course, it was that burro, a very small beast with a ridiculous summer haircut down to his legs that makes him look as though he had boots on. He was doing it all with his teeth bared in a grin and his ears snapping forward on their sockets after each couplet in keen appreciation."

"The burro's name is Manolo, madame," said the porter at the desk, glad to be of service.

There is nothing to do after "Manolo" breaks out but to call it a night.

The camerero, who wears a striped red apron and it not abashed by it, is astonished that you have rung at 8:30.

He inquires if you are leaving on the morning train for Seville and finds that you aren't. He then apologizes for his agitation by remarking that there is a saying in Madrid that no one who respects himself gets up before 10:30. He does not explain how this small group of the elite manages to sleep after the uproar begins. But you feel bad about it and plead that you forgot about Spanish hours.

These are a shock at first. To the office between 10 and noon. Two or maybe three hours for lunch at either 2 or 3, dinner at 9 or 10, theater at 10:30 and 11, and to bed . . . whenever you can manage it. The streets are full of animation until long after 3 in the morning.

Such hours make getting up in the morning in Spain a grave matter. You never know if and when you are going to get to bed again.

The Spanish Servants.

The mozo brings in your shoes polished beyond recognition. In many Spanish hotels they wake you up at an early hour to collect fifty céntimos for this. Spanish servants are grave and thoughtful. They are almost never humbly critical like the English or bossy like the French. They talk as one man to another and don't consider the finer points of service terribly important. They cannot be yelled at with success. But they can be tipped, although there is 10 per cent for service on the bill.

They can't be kept out either. In Spanish hotels there often are no bolts on the doors. The maid or the valet comes in and quietly announces his or her presence. This can be embarrassing.

They bring in your breakfast. Coffee, black like tar, that has to be diluted about five to one with hot milk. Those good Spanish rolls made of fine white bolted flour. Everywhere in Spain they eat these except in the poorer regions of Galicia. The peasants of Castile like them baked hard and almost unleavened and unsalted.

Sooner or later Americans in Europe succumb to the breakfast in bed. In Madrid, what with the climate and the hours, you need a shot of this vitalizing tar to bring you to at all.

Police Raid of 'Vanities' Excites East

One Awkward Scene, Not Nudity, the Cause.

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At this calm moment when a whole week has passed without the opening of one production—not even a shoestring mystery drama with sets from Cain's and clothing from the actor' hall bedroom closets — three interesting questions beset the harassed theater.

One is the problem of the league of New York theaters, which appears determined to control the tickets to all the shows and keep them out of the hands of gougers.

Another is a new angle on the talking picture menace.

And the third, and by all odds the most talked-of, is the police raid upon Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

With considerable sagacity, the police laid the burden of their complaint against "Vanities" upon the smirching quality of one of its sketches, rather than upon the nudity with which the revue abounded. Nudity, too, was complained of, but the greater offense, apparently, was the appearance of Jimmy Savo, an ineffably droll comic when he is left to pantomine, as a bashful window dresser in a fashion shop. Mr. Savo was given lines to speak and actions to execute that might make a sensitive policeman squirm in embarrassment in his orchestra chair.

There have been just as obscene sketches in revues before, and the gendarmes haven't galloped up. The fatal failing of this sketch was that it was not funny. Not even the most enthusiastic of smoking car sitters could have got a great howl out of it. And the ironic fact is that had the police delayed their raid two more days, Carroll would have taken the sketch out voluntarily. His motive would not have been one of chivalric care of public morals, but one of purely commercial showmanship. The sketch was weak, and something funnier was to have been found.

Corrected Before the Raid.

Carroll may be accused of having used the critics and other first nighters at his show much as old-time shell game manipulators used cappers to egg the public on—although, in Carroll's case, the cappers were not willingly helping him. On the first night, armed with free tickets, they attended the revue and won; they found a lewd, nude show. They saw an undersea ballet, for instance, in which an Adagio Adam and Eve interval was the most arresting detail. Then these attendants at the premiere did their capping. Some, as reporters for the press, told or hinted at what they saw in print; the others spread the news by word of mouth.

Then, on succeeding nights, the yokels who pay real money for their tickets stepped up—and found that the pea wasn't there. Adam and Eve had been dropped from the show. Faith Bacon, who did a fan dance in the nude at the opening, appeared in a garment even before the police raid. It wasn't much of a garment, but by contrast it was blushingly modest.

These items were put in the show for a first night thrill, and, having served their purpose, were taken out. This sort of shell game is an old Broadway custom, and is to be found in scorching dramas with incandescent lines, as well as in the flesh and dry goods extravaganzas.

War on Ticket Scalpers.

Tomorrow—your tomorrow, as you read these lines—is the date set for operation of the league of New York theaters. Unless a further postponement occurs, the league will begin its supervision of the box offices of 80 per cent of the Broadway playhouses. From this time on, in theory, showgoers will be able to buy their seats from brokers at no more than seventy-five cents above their face value, and, if they have the energy to pay a before hand visit to the theater they wish to attend, at box office prices at the box office.

Sixteen agencies have been given permission to deal in tickets, and they may have no more than seventy-five per cent of the orchestra seats. Certain rows of tickets must be kept in the box offices for window customers.

"Vanities" has been used as a laboratory experiment. In the main the scheme has been working well, although "outlaw" speculators have obtained by "digging" plenty of $6.60 seats, which they sell for $11 or $15. The league is confident that in time "digging" will be checked, for soon all tickets will be printed with space on the back for a record of whose hands they go through, and if this record is not properly filled out the league will have a fairly good idea of where the trouble lies.

The plan, however, is in for plenty

GOOD morning!

Sea Bat—"a giant ray weighing several tons and with a wing spread on the ocean of 10 feet or more. The bats, known as a constant menace to sponge and pearl divers populate the waters near Matzatlan . . ."

That's what and where a sea bat is, according to the press sheet before me. And Mazatian, informs the p. s., is a seaport of Sinaloa state, Mexico, on the Gulf of California. [So much for your geography and nature study lessons this morning, children.]

On the southern coast of Mexico and in the Bahama Islands "The Sea Bat" company spent about two months making a picture that you're going to like. It's an atmospheric, actionful number, intelligently directed by a man who demonstrates a fine feel for situation and effect and splendidly acted by a cast who SHOULD be splendid—look at 'em! Raquel Torres, George F. Marion, father in "Anna Christie," Nils Asther, John Miljan, Edmund Breese; AND for a hero the big go-getter, Charles Bickford, who has been slaying the lady screen fans lately. Not to mention Mack Swain and the unbelievably pillowy Mathilde Comont. AND swarms of black skinned islanders who do, do, do, WHAT they do, do, do as if they believed every word of it and hadn't an idea there was a camera in the offing. Nils Asther has here his first speaking rôle. He isn't on the screen long, due to the activities of the sea bat, but he makes his precious moments count.

That Terrible Bat.

Portugala is, if memory serves me as it should, the name of the island where occur the land happenings of this story. Here resides Nina, daughter of Antone, no-account Spanish superintendent of a run down sponge fishery. Nina lives in terror that her lover, Carl, will be killed by the sea bat, and one day she gives him a little cross to take down with him to protect him from harm as he hunts for sponges on the floor of the ocean. Down into those dangerous waters also goes Juan — spurned half breed adorer of the girl—a vicious fellow who is insanely jealous of Carl.

On the day of the presentation of the amulet Juan fouls Carl's air line, leaving the boy helpless. A sea bat does its worst. The sponge fishers land that night carrying a silent figure wrapped in a sail. They are attended by crowds of natives wailing their voodoo rites for the dead.

Nina, well nigh mad with grief, in a frenzy eschews Christianity and offers herself to any man who shall kill the creature that has deprived her of her lover. All the riff raff of the island responds to the offer.

Well — a preacher comes to the island — a strange preacher with a wary eye, a mighty arm, and an iron fist. A preacher who doesn't preach. A preacher who closely resembles the posted pictures of an escaped convict wanted at Devil's Island . . . !

'Anima Allegra' Bows at Ravinia Tomorrow Night

Lucrezia Bori Heroine in New Opera.

By Edward Moore.

QUITE a section of the Ravinia company has been more or less in retirement the last few weeks. You saw them in their regularly scheduled appearances on the stage, but if you sought them for business or social reasons any other time, the chances are that you would be told they were down at the park in a rehearsal of "Anima Allegra." According to some of the whisperings that have been allowed to creep outside the company, "Anima Allegra" is tricky, full of alarms and excursions, and needing a good deal of doing before it can be depended upon to function smoothly.

But everything, even hard work, comes to an end some time, and "Anima Allegra" is finished and ready. It will go on for the first time in this part of the country tomorrow night.

Agreeable Story, Happy Ending.

They say it is a pleasant opera, with an agreeable story and a happy ending. Mr. Eckstein would seem to have made an important discovery in the matter of opera giving, which is that gloomy art is not always the best art, nor necessarily the most popular art.

They have been giving opera in the United States over a century now, and still there is a certain proportion of the population that refuses to take it quite seriously, that occupies a position between downright boredom and ribald derision over the absurdities that are sometimes served up in the name of serious opera. It may be that Mr. Eckstein will be able to win over some of the agnostics simply by his policy of presenting works that do not put such a violent strain on the credulity.

Since it is impossible to believe in some of these situations, since even the most flamboyant tunes sung by the finest artists on earth cannot altogether compensate for the unchecked foolishness of some of the librettos, people simply end by not accepting them at all, and go away with a lowered opinion of grand opera as a rational entertainment. They have been doing it a long time. It was nearly two centuries ago that Lord Chesterfield told of how he found it advisable to check his brains with his cloak and hat when he went to the opera. There is an excellent chance, however, that he would change his mind if he sat through a Ravinia season as it is being conducted now.

Ingeniously Sophisticated.

Consuelo in "Anima Allegra," is described as being ingenuously sophisticated. She is Spanish, as well. Wherefore, there is only one imaginable person to take up the character, and that person is Lucrezia Bori. Another character is Pedro, a bachelor of gay tastes and no chance to exercise them in a dull, ancestral home until Consuelo comes there to make a visit. That sort of part seems on its face to be pretty well specialized as well, and Mario Chamlee is to do it. Florence Macbeth will appear in a vivacious soubrette part, a good deal of the same character that she has been doing with enormous success in "La Rondine." Ina Bourskaya is to appear as a Spanish noblewoman, presumably of the stiff-spined and forbidden type, and Vittorio Trevisan will have the part of a glum but amusing major-domo.

Some eight other artists will have further parts in the casts. They will be Ada Paggi, Lola Monti-Gorsey, Philine Falco, Giuseppe Cavadore, Marek Windheim, Lodovico Oliviero, George Cehanovsky, and Paolo Ananian. One part of the opera calls for Consuelo and Pedro to put in an appearance at a gipsy camp. Here there will be dancing, and the lovely and exquisitely trained Ruth Page, with her dancing partner, Blake Scott, and the corps de ballet will have an important part in the proceedings.

They say that Franco Vittadini's music is modern, but not too modern, that it has color, and life, and tune, that it is much in keeping with the character of the story. We shall see. In the meantime, we can keep on hoping. For good light music is so much more difficult to write than good tragic music that when a piece with the real sparkle comes to the surface it ranks as a genuine discovery. Gennaro Papi is to conduct, which is a good advance guarantee that none of the merits of the score will be concealed from hearing in the performance.

Fifth Week of Ravinia Season.

Ravinia's fifth week will begin today with "An Afternoon of German Music and Composers." This is another of Ravinia's national concerts and is an annual event which is largely attended because of the large numbers of German people living within the Chicago district. The German nation has for centuries contributed prolifically to the world's best music, and there is no music more universally appreciated.

The Sunday afternoon concert will be given by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Eric DeLamarter conducting, and with Joseph Vito, harpist, as soloist. Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony will be the main number of the orchestral program. Other numbers are the overture to "Fingal's Cave," by Mendelssohn, the minuets from the Serenade by Brahms and the "Rienzi" overture by Wagner. Mr. Vito's harp group will include "Valse Caprice," by Gilman; "Waterfall," by Thomas; Schubert's "Moment Musicale," and Brahms' Valse in A.

W. Schueller, German consul in Chicago, will be an honor guest at the concert and will speak. Dr. George Schaller, vice consul, will likewise be an honor guest. As is customary at all the Sunday afternoon concerts at Ravinia, this German day event will be open to the general public and

Her Secret Not Sinister, It's Amusing.

By Jay Allen.

It is a sad rite, breakfast in bed. None of the fine smells that precede the morning ritual at home, much less the breakfast delicacies that Americans abroad come to consider their country's greatest contribution to civilization.

A Luminous Morning.

It is too painful to go down to the high and florid dining room that smells of wax to watch your suffering countrymen, idealists all, still trying to get bacon crisp and eggs cooked enough to stay in one place. The smell of wax betokens cleanliness here where they take up all the rugs and carpets in summer and keep the floors, whether hardwood or tile, highly waxed. But before breakfast it is depressing.

Another luminous morning. Wet streets glittering in the sun. The dirt and dust is washed away a dozen times a day. The smell of roasting coffee and now and then on some fine avenue the barely perceptible odor of sewage. The fresh early morning breeze from the snowfields of the Guadarramas has begun to falter and in the shining cloud masses are already becalmed.

Six beggars doze on the steps of the new Church of Jesus, the pewter plates in which people drop those big copper céntimo pieces, on their knees. The beggars of Spain never change, still the same faces which you see in the canvases of Ribera. There are even dwarfs by Velazquez, but in the flesh.

The café terraces are too inviting. The waiters are putting out seltzer bottles, toothpicks for the olives, and all the utensils of the daily ritual. If you sit down it means getting your shoes shined again. Bullet headed urchins gallop up pretending that you have called the magic word, "limpia," shine. Spaniards, being caballeros all, like to have bright shoes. It only costs two or three cents and it gives you an expensive feeling to stretch out and watch the girls go by and try to figure out what the censor has clipped from the papers. It starts the day right, they say.

The Censored Papers.

On such a morning as this it doesn't take long to sense that Madrid is hiding something behind her bold façade of modernity.

The papers for instance. So little space devoted to business and so much to politics, or the rumors and the suppositions, for that is all there is now to politics. You see Spaniards who look as though they lived on their incomes, carefully perusing lists of low interest government bonds or staple internationals—where much of Spanish money goes.

You stroll about a little and see that other café terraces are filling too. Yet it is in the morning. Young bloods, very well groomed, are beginning to appear in the "American Bar Pidoux" and the elegant but slightly battered ladies who stir thirsts and what not in this leading drinkery are driving up in taxis.

The little counters open to the street where they sell soft drinks and beer are crowded. And this all day long except for the two or three hour ebb when people go home to lunch and to doze and workmen lie sprawled in the sun on sidewalks.

You feel it in any crowd. All these women strolling guarded often by duennas. And the men who have time to stare. All these priests and soldiers and the lugubrious gentry who sit as though embalmed behind the plate glass of club windows. There are so few people who seem to be going anywhere. Yes, there is a little girl dressed as a bride walking with her brother in a white serge suit. They are going to their first communion. She carries a long artificial lily and has her ears pierced.

Low Pay the Rule.

You see nothing that approximates that little queen of chic, the American stenographer. Girls do work in offices in Madrid to some extent and they are beginning to go in larger numbers to the universities. But on a salary of forty dollars a month you don't ape the duchess of Alba in dress; you are lucky if you have a pair of silk socks for Sunday. Low pay, low production, low buying power are so evidently the rule here.

Even in the shining subways you sense it. There are more than ten miles of them, a system second only to London's in cleanliness and to none in efficiency. Shining red steel cars roar in and out of white tile stations with Moorish polychrome tile effects over the tunnel mouths. There are elevators to the surface. Smartly uniformed girls—and in a country where women's place is still supposed to be in the home—are at the wickets selling and taking fares that range in price from 15 to 35 céntimos [from less than two to four cents]. In 1929 over 80,000,000 people used the subway in Madrid and only fourteen had complaints to make. The line, known as the Compania Metropolitana Alfonso XIII., makes money.

You see sandaled monks sitting in quiet contemplation as the trains roar through the tunnels. Over half the passengers are laborers in corduroy trousers with yards of felt wound round their stomachs for belts, and bronzed peasants in blouses. There is of course a certain number who look like business people anywhere. There is a woman with damp black hair and a veil who reads a bullfight weekly with suppressed excitement, her lips half open. A pair of hussars pay audible compliments to two girls with a duenna.

Move as Individuals.

Throngs of people everywhere but no crowds in the awesome modern sense, of people dressed all more or less alike, scurrying along dominated by common aims and ideas, struggling to beat a system. Here, the bullring excepted, you are more conscious of individuals than crowds. They don't move smoothly regimented by long practice. They move as individuals. They dress as they please. The long skirt hasn't struck Madrid except for the world of wealth and fashion, although her streets are very clean. Women wear a veil if they want, or go hatless. Men dress well if they have money but it would be hard to spot the influence of style. Except for black hats and in winter blue capes pulled up over the nose. But that has been going on for decades.

The taxies are driven by amiable lunatics in twill jumpers. Tariffs seem ridiculously cheap at seven cents the first 800 meters and about ten cents a mile thereafter. The Madrileños don't find them so. They are equipped with brakes yet the drivers for the most part seem to find more useful the image of St. Christopher which you see on every dashboard. In bad moments they glance at this and things come out all right.

Madrid's facade of modernity is so blatant that at first you take her at her own valuation. But everything contradicts it. And soon you discover her secret.

Madrid a Parasite.

It is nothing sinister. It's amusing.

It is not, like London's, one of misery and apprehension, of decay behind a mask of grandeur, nor is it what you find behind the pretty gracious mask of Paris, a revelation of a clammy materialism and a pinchbek outlook.

Madrid has her extremes of wealth and misery, of high privilege and rank injustice. But these aren't secrets. She makes no pretentions to perfection. But she does make a pretention to modernity.

She is not what she pretends to be. She is a parasite whose functions can be defined without the help of any twentieth century terms.

Madrid governs.

Other cities, some one says, became great and so came to govern. Madrid began with the governing and became great afterwards.

The vast majority of her population are in some way connected with this operation, either part of the huge and cumbersome machine that performs it or is dependent on it. Her population is one of functionaries big and small, judges, soldiers and clergy who in a sense help in the governing too. Around this nucleus have collected of course lawyers and doctors, butchers, bakers and grocers. And the big banks and big interests of Bilbao and Barcelona have come to be nearer the center of things.

"The closer to the sun the warmer you are," say the Spaniards who are nothing if not disabused about such things. Madrid has other functions of course. Because of her central position she is fast becoming the most important distributing center in Spain. The big railroads, though, like the "Norte" and the "Madrid, Saragossa and Alicante" have their offices in Paris.

Lazy and Corrupt.

But primarily she is the sun. Here the king, a king with power and a royal family which has a civil list of 9,250,000 pesetas yearly, and the aristocracy many of whom own a princely train of palaces that make the establishments of many a Balkan monarch look very modest.

And here the governing machine. Not as cumbersome as it was in the seventeenth century when the treasury had sixty thousand employés, or at the end of the eighteenth century when one-fourth of the adult male population of Spain were government employés, soldiers, nobles or ecclesiastics.

It has been much cursed but even Spaniards forget that from 1898 to 1923 it worked a profound transformation of the country. But Primo de Riviera found it lazy and corrupt. Everybody had to get to work on time, he barked. The first morning the congestion in many an office was terrific. But the machine moved a little faster. Roads and schools were built. Primo fell, but the machine has gone on working.

In its deliberate way it used to grind out orders to put down the Cubans, to curb separatism in Catalonia, syndicalism in Barcelona, anarchism in Andalusia. Now the orders are to slacken up on Catalonia. It is very paternal about business in the dusty offices of these ministries, many of them very impressive, and the work of government is done between 9:30 in the morning and 2 in the afternoon.

Geographical Monstrosity.

A writer in El Sol complains that his study of wages and the cost of living is incomplete because the statistics have not been compiled since 1925 except haphazardly for Madrid and Barcelona.

"Insuperable obstacles to the study of matters of vital importance to the nation's life," he says. Every one was astonished when the trade statistics for the first trimester of this year came out in May before those for the preceding periods. Data on per capita wealth and many other matters simply is not available. A representative of a foreign government wrote to the ministry of state five months ago to ask what part of the machine corresponds to the American Bureau of Standards. No answer.

But the ministries let out at 2, through for the day.

Madrid is a "courtesan and a bureaucrat" and a "geographical monstrosity," says Luis Araquistain, the Basque writer, who is one of the keenest critics of life in Spain. He finds that it is more an atrophied member burdening the national life than a vitalizing head.

"Geographical monstrosity," but political necessity, or so she was when Philip the Second chose her in 1560 as capital of united Spain. She was a bleak village with no tradition, but Toledo in New Castile, Burgos in Old Castile, Saragossa in Aragon, Cordova and Seville with their Moorish pasts, would not have served this passionately desired unity so well.

On the map it looks fine, the capital in almost exactly the geographical center of the realm. But in reality here is Madrid set down in the bleakest steppe in western Europe, the most sparsely settled and the most unproductive. Mountains to go through to get to the fertile coastal fringes and the ports where the modern world looks in.

Spring Is Intoxicating.

And what a climate!

The air has a strange potency. In winter, the popular saying goes it would kill a man and not blow out a candle. That's why Madrileños hold their capes over their mouths in winter. You have only to cough and friends diagnose it immediately as pneumonia. In spring it is intoxicating. In summer liquid fire.

It gets at the nerves. Madrileños are jumpy. Thus their contrasting states of lassitude and keen excitement. Many events in Spanish politics can be explained by the climate. Primo de Riviera simply had a case of nerves when he sent out the famous questionnaire to the army that cost him his job. Rumors breed in this atmosphere whether the papers are censored or not. Every night a new crop rises like the vapors from a swamp.

The king will abdicate in the morning. A republic will be proclaimed within the week. A new military dictatorship is about to be sprung. The Catalans are to get their autonomy at 2 o'clock on Wednesday. . . . You have only to take your choice and forget all about it.

Then Philip had to pick a site without a river. Madrid is the only capital in modern Europe with no mirror to preen herself in. Of course there is the Manzanares, a humble stream that creeps bashfully around the edge of town. People make jokes about this miserable brooklet, down in the lantern-hung gardens of Bombilla by its banks, where they dance and drink cider and the stiff edges of Spanish decorum are considerably softened of warm nights.

City Growing Fast.

A German ambassador once won fame by preferring the Manzanares to all other rivers because navigable by horse and buggy. But they have tried to glorify her by giving her a concrete bed to lie in and monumental lights along her banks which reveal what might have been kept quiet, that she dries up in summer.

Madrid is growing fast. She has doubled her population since 1914, but she is no less artificial, only a more imposing fungus.

Madrid governs. Barcelona, commercial, Catalan, Mediterranean Barcelona is slightly larger although the censors don't say so, and she does a full half of the nation's business and seventy per cent at least of its industry. The clearing house reports do not show this, for various causes. But it is true. She is gay on her flowered Mediterranean slope. She can afford the luxury of green shade and almost Parisian grace along her wide ramblas where business is actually done. She crabs continually about these Castilians whom she keeps up with her taxes, sitting around cafés all day. Yet she counts for nothing, absolutely nothing, unless an irritation in the Castilian cosmos.

Madrid, haughty, Castilian, Brahmin, sits in the bleak center of her realm and rules, sucking up the life and brains of the nation. Being all these things she longs to be more.

In her yearning to appear otherwise she builds skyscrapers on treeless streets. And the businessman does his work in a back room of his apartment.

On the Gran Via.

That soaring cathedral-postoffice, the biggest in Europe, is full of shining gadgets. You get automatic receipts for your telegrams. And these telegrams take longer to get under way than from one of those notorious French bureaux de poste, where some of Mr. Morse's original instruments are regarded as pretty new fangled.

Up the proudest stretch of the Gran Via trots a shaggy burro with a load of that red peasant pottery. Astride his peaked rump sits a sandaled peasant with a three day growth of beard. Twentieth century traffic shrieks a protest, glad of the opportunity to shriek. Behind, drawn by two mules in tandem with a baby burro as guide, trundles a two wheeled cart with a top like a prairie schooner and loaded with very ripe hides. Sancho Panza himself, his round terra cotta face covered with gray stubble, directs this equipage and disputes the right of way with a sleek Rolls Royce.

Herds of sheep and pigs are sometimes driven through these haughty thoroughfares because the peasants of Castile have their ancient fueros, their privileges, to drive stock through the "villa y corte," town and court, of Madrid, and those who would keep the secret can't do anything about it.

Few Urban Dwellers.

Although Madrileños live in such a tight little urban shell that they don't think much about it, these phenomena are significant. There are 22,000,000 people in Spain and of these 17,000,000 work in or from the soil. In the nine leading cities, there is but twelve per cent of the population. Between thirty-five to fifty per cent of the total population over the age of five is illiterate. Sixty per cent of the wealth of the country, it is estimated, is in the hands of less than ten per cent of the population.

This bold façade would then seem premature, to say the least. But a presage of what is to come. . . .

"Europeanize Spain?" Unamuno, the philosopher of Salamanaca is asked. He answers, "No, Hispanize Europe." And Unamuno is the god of Spanish youth.

The traffic roars by a café terrace on the Alcala. Men talk, heedless. Some of them are very much part of the new surge in Spanish life, in literature, in politics.

One says, "We are too tough. The old Spanish soul has withstood too much. We will bend modernity to our needs. There is yet time as you see. That," he said pointing contemptuously at the telephone tower, "is not our fate. That. . ." (more contempt) means nada! nada!" nothing, the most expressive word in the Spanish language.

But who can read the future?

SCENES FROM MADRID.

THESE are middle class Spanish folk. Most of the men, young and old, wear berets, while the long skirt is seldom worn except by women of the aristocracy. One of the girls is bareheaded, but she probably owns several chic hats, while the other has on a veil. This she wears for shopping on weekdays and for church or fiestas on Sunday.

MADRID alarm clock. Many burros are seen on the streets of Madrid, often much heavier laden than this one. They are great vocalists and when they begin their morning songs you might as well get up, as further sleep is impossible.

Broadway Items About Its Plays and Its Players

German Play Is to Be Produced Here.

NEW YORK, July 19.—[Special.]—As it should have been moderately easy to guess, the German play which is scheduled to take over the lofty Bayes theater early in the new season turns out to be "Die Wunderbar." There are reports that they will call it "George Jessel's American Bar" and it seems that because of the play's cabaret background the Bayes will have to be pretty completely altered.

Although he may no longer belong in this department, Eddie Cantor, a Broadway boy who is making good in Hollywood, will be back in town in August for a brief while. On the way to or from New York he may stop off for a week of personal appearances in the middle west, but that will be all. He is said to be casting large eyes at "Flying High," and Mr. Lahr's part is suitable for his use in the speaking films.

"About Town," the revue which Max Gordon is producing with the Erlanger office as an interested participant, is scheduled to open in Baltimore on Sept. 28 and play the following week in Washington before coming to Broadway. The California Collegians, whose musical stunts were popular in the Zelli's scene of "Fifty Million Frenchmen," have been added to a company headed by the trio who contributed so much to the first "Little Show"—Clifton Webb, Fred Allen, and Libby Holman. Rehearsals of "About Town" will begin on Aug. 20, with Hassard Short concerned in the staging of the book and Albertina Rasch directing the dances.

Allied as he is with the reasonably up-and-doing Erlanger office, Mr. Dillingham promises to be busier than is his usual wont during the oncoming season. Certainly he will be starting his activities earlier.

The first of his productions will be that English war play, "Suspense," the work of Patrick MacGill, which attracted a good deal of London attention in the spring. Like "Journey's End," "Suspense" calls for an all-male cast. Reginald Denham is here to stage it, and the opening date is now Aug. 11 at the Fulton.

Shortly thereafter will come Bayard Veiller's new melodrama, "Jane Doe," which will go in rehearsal in another two weeks under the direction of Lester Lonergan. As things now stand the cast will include A. E. Anson, Phoebe Foster, Lucille Watson, Cora Witherspoon, Helen Eby-Rock, Helene Sinnott, Austin Fairman, Gavin Muir, Oswald Yorke, and George Probert.

Third on the Dillingham list is that long contemplated Lonsdale play, "Canaries Sometimes Sing," which has already been done in London. October is now being mentioned as the month in which this comedy will see the light of Broadway presentation.

The producer likewise bulletins among his activities a play by Elmer Harris, the same Elmer Harris who wrote "Young Sinners" and several others. This is announced as the dramatization of a famous book, and maybe it is. Mr. Dillingham still expects to bring forth an American version of "Mr. Cinders," the rights to which he has held for more than a year. And then there is a promise of several musical and dramatic pieces to be done in association with the Erlanger office and to be announced later.

On tour this year Mr. Dillingham will send Fred Stone, a couple of his daughters, Dorothy and Paula, and "Ripples." The show is scheduled to open in Newark on Labor day and to proceed to Chicago by way of Philadelphia. Mrs. Stone will not appear with her family on the road, but will be replaced by Maude Eburn.

William Harris Jr. is, of course, one of the most unhurried of Broadway producers, if not the most unhurried. Having no theaters to fill and no rigid schedules to maintain, he tinkers with a manuscript until it is just about as he wants it to be. Wherefore the recent reply of an author in response to an inquiry concerning the state of her play was only mildly surprising.

"Why, it's getting along fine," she said. "It's already in its third year in the Harris office."

Mr. Lonsdale himself was in town overnight last week, en route from London to Hollywood. He, too, said that "Canaries Sometimes Sing" would come along in October, but that the play that he had promised for Edgar Selwyn—it is to be a sequel to "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney"—was far from finished. "And since I don't like to work any more than you do, I don't know just when it will be ready," he concluded.

Philip Goodman expects to begin preparations on "Another Language," the Rose Franken play, in a fortnight. The piece comes under the general classification of "A Comedy of New York." Michael Gold is also at work on the manuscript of his play for presentation by Mr. Goodman, and is turning it out without the collaboration of Vincent Lawrence, who was once reported to be associated in the venture. This play, a panorama in 38 scenes, is based somewhat on Mr. Gold's "Jews Without Money," and Mr. Goodman expects to begin its performance at 7:30 p. m.

The play by William Du Bois, in which Miss Ulric will be seen under the management of Lewis E. Bensler and the Erlanger office, is the one previously announced by the Shuberts as "Keys to Paradise." Its title, however, will be changed. Although rehearsals will not begin for several weeks, Miss Ulric is on her way back from the coast. Thomas Findlay is the only one thus far engaged for her supporting cast.

An entirely revamped version of "The Duchess of Chicago" is scheduled to open in Atlantic City on Aug. 25. . . . The young Messrs. Brady and Wiman have, it is reported, acquired a play by Philip Dunning and one L. G. Lippincott. There is some talk of using it as a convenience for Mary Boland. . . . Catherine Willard will have the place formerly occupied by Phoebe Foster in the cast of "Topaze" when the comedy reopens at the Music Box theater in another two weeks before beginning a road tour.

Finding a leading woman for Mr. Stallings' dramatization of "A Farewell to Arms" continues to be one of the chief concerns of the Woods office. Robert Williams and the Italian actor, Giuseppe Sterni, are at present members of a cast which is scheduled to go in rehearsal on Aug. 4 under the direction of Rouben Mamoulian. The play will open at the Brighton theater on Aug. 25. . . . As for that other Wood production, Dr. Davis' "The Ninth Guest," it began rehearsing last week and will be presented in Long Beach on Aug. 8. After a couple of weeks in the seashore places, it will, if good, be deposited upon the stage of the Eltinge on or about Aug. 25.

Katherine Alexander, who was good in "Hotel Universe," will probably be among the players in "A Graceful Generation," the Knowles Entrikin play which Brady and Wiman control. Miss Alexander, it should not be necessary to mention here, is Mrs. William A. Brady Jr.

There is at present only one attraction in the Chicago theaters—that is the play called "Sisters of the Chorus," which has not yet exhibited itself in New York. According to an old graybeard on Variety, the theatrical weekly, a similar state of affairs has not existed for 98 years. The Shuberts are planning to remedy the situation in another fortnight, sending westward the issue of "Artists and Models," now on view at the Majestic.

Mr. Ziegfeld is the latest to plan the reopening of a show on Broadway. From the coast he has sent word that Ed Wynn and "Simple Simon" will return to the Ziegfeld theater the second Monday in August—that would be the 11th—before beginning a tour. The producer now confides that he is not at all certain about staging that oft announced "Follies," the ticket situation and other matters being what they are. He says, however, that he will definitely produce a "Follies" for the talking screen. At all events he will be back in New York before August is far advanced, which gives him plenty of time to make up his mind about fall projects.

Atlantic City this week will see Mr. Belasco's new one, "Dancing Partner," which will get back to 44th strteet in time to open the new season on Aug. 5. The play comes from the Hungarian by way of the Hattons and its cast includes Lynee Overman, Irene Purcell, Henry Stephenson, Charlotte Granville, and Suzanne Caubaye. . . . As seems to be his habit when producing a new play, Mr. Belasco will celebrate a birthday this week. It will come on Friday and will be his 77th.

of grief. Those who believe it will not work are legion, and a few showmen, chief among whom are George White and Florenz Ziegfeld, are in open opposition.

Talkie Bogey Arises.

The newest talkie menace comes directly from the plans of certain large motion picture firms to use their wealth in producing legitimate attractions. At first consideration the use of all that film money and energy would appear to be of benefit to the stage. Consider, for instance, the Warner brothers, who produced two musical shows during the recent season. At a time when many legitimate producers were so broke or so afraid of business conditions that they refrained from offering any shows, the Warners backed two enterprises—"Top Speed" and "Fifty Million Frenchmen"—that gave employment to hundreds of theatre folk, and added considerably to the enjoyable part of the season.

The Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League, however, has some misgivings about Hollywood as an angel. Having these misgivings, it has declared that a certain rule in the minimum basic agreement—under which all legitimate producing is done—must be lived up to. The rule is this: That film rights to stage productions must be placed on the open market for competitive bidding. Which means, in theory, that the Warners could produce a musical comedy and Paramount-Public could outbid them for the talkie rights.

I understand that the Dramatists' Guild is quite sensible of the fact that literal enforcement of that provision would obviously be unfair to the firm that had invested, say $200,000 in a production. But the Guild fears that the movies are trying to make the Broadway stage a mere dog-town for Glutz's Cinema Palace in Willow Crossing, Kansas. And it is using the competitive bidding clause in its minimum basic agreement as a weapon with which to fight.

To make it more clear: The Guild suspects that the movie magnates are no more than incidentally interested in the Broadway run of their stage production. They buy a musical, schedule it for a legitimate showing on a certain date, and schedule a film version for a certain number of months later. The Broadway run will be of great selling value to the film when it is released, but the run itself is not of chief importance. When the date for talkie production begins there is no further use for the New York show.

May Cut Down Royalties.

That, the dramatists fear, may reduce the royalties to the show's authors. The league wants to guard against haphazard Broadway production, and wants to make sure that the fullest benefits are derived from the legitimate end of an enterprise. There still are, for instance, profits to be made on the road. A road tour adds nothing to the fame of a show, in comparison with a Broadway run, but it fills the author's bank account.

And it is to be noted that, while "Strike Up the Band," "Sons o' Guns," and other musical comedy hits of the last season have been scheduled for road engagements, no such plan has been made for the Warner backed "Fifty Million Frenchmen." Indeed, some showmen say that the New York engagement of this smart musical could have been prolonged with a little solicitous nursing.

"Frenchmen" was not bought from the author-composer, Cole Porter, under the basic agreement. It is understood that a special arrangement, doubtless satisfactory to Porter, was made concerning both stage and film profits. But that leaves the Dramatists' Guild out in the cold, and the Guild's first thought is for the protection of the stage.

The basic agreement expires Jan. 1, and no doubt will be modified so that the film companies can go ahead with their great plans for musical and dramatic productions. But the authors intend to see to it that they are not losers.

Signs Twenty-fifth Contract.

Herman Devries, famous pedagogue and writer of Chicago, has just renewed his contract with M. Witmark & Co., music publishers of New York. This is the twenty-fifth year of Mr. Devries' association with the company, which has published such works from his pen as "Bonjour, Suzon," "Si J'Etais Dieu," "La Cloche du Soir," "Komm', mein Glueck," the Schumann-Heink waltz, and Valse in F. Several of these are of a quarter-century standing.

A curious incident in the matter of language in music arose in Europe recently, one that may give the opera-in-English fans something serious to think about.

Alexander von Zemlinsky, one of the conductors of the Berlin opera, has been temporarily suspended from his post because he went down to Prague and conducted Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the words of Schiller's "Ode of Joy" sung not in the original German but in the native Czech.

As the Musical Courier puts it, the German authorities grew wrathful over the deed, holding that he should have protested against such desecration of art and fought against the Czech view that Beethoven in Prague should be intelligible to the Czechs. He answered that "Deutschland ueber Alles" was not his motto, but that "Kunst ueber Alles" was, but his employers considered he had "insulted German art." So, for the present, he has been benched.

Music Notes.

Among the concerts scheduled for today comes a recital by Fred Schade, violinist, at the Allerton house this afternoon, and a program of solos and ensemble numbers by the Hanna Butler Singers, a mixed quartet, at the Hotels Windermere this evening.

John W. Williams, music educator of New York, will give a lecture to the musicians of Chicago in the west ballroom of the Stevens hotel tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock. The subject will be "The Musical Education of the Modern Child." Any one interested is invited to attend.

Marie Sidenius Zendt is appearing both by ether waves and face to face this week. She is on the air at WMAQ this evening, and will give a recital of songs at Kimball hall next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Rev. William J. Finn of the Paulist Choristers of New York will give a demonstration of the training of boys' and girls' voices at the Cinema Art theater next Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock. At the same hour on Thursday Vito Chiaverini, also of New York, will appear in a violin recital on the same stage.

They are saying in Europe that Verdi's opera, "Simone Boccanegra," a failure when produced in Venice in 1857 and again a failure when it was revised for Milan in 1881, has had another revision in Germany with the result that it was a triumph in Vienna and Berlin this year. Franz Werfel, author of a singularly vivid novel about Verdi's life during the ten years he lived in Venice, made the second and successful revision. The book is full of swords and maledictions and tears, from which one infers that it is a melodrama of the "Trovatore" and "Rigoletto" type, and those who have heard it say that the music is in the character of "La Forza del Destino."

Tagore, Poet of India, Enlists Quaker Aids

OXFORD, England.—(AP)—Dr. Rabindranath Tagore, the Indian mystic poet who resigned his knighthood with a stirring letter of rebuke to King George because he was dissatisfied with British rule in India, is in England making arrangements to place two Americans in charge of the health work of his ashram in India.

The Americans are Dr. Harry G. Timbres and Mrs. Timbres, who did relief work in Russia and Poland several years ago for the Society of Friends.

In recent years, Dr. Tagore has been much interested in Quakers and on his present visit to England was the guest of Quakers at their 253d annual gathering.

While in England too he was called on to deliver the Hibbert lectures at Manchester college, Oxford. He endeavored to show his audiences how inner religion may unexpectedly appear from the unknown realm of our personal consciousness.

The subject was difficult to follow but it was rendered luminous by bright gleams of humor and lucid illustrations. The personality of the poet as he spoke with the sunshine falling on his white head and lighting up his benevolent features helped hold the attention of his audience.

THE GLORY OF SPAIN

LUCREZIA BORI.

OF Spanish nativity, at least twice in her Ravinia experience she has appeared in Spanish operas. One, "La Vida Breve," was completely Spanish. The other, "Anima Allegra," though from an Italian pen, is a story of Spain and Spanish life, which will be given its first appearance in this part of the country tomorrow night, and Mme. Bori will appear as the leading character, a joyous young person who goes under the name of Consuelo.

Chicago Girls Enthusiastically Received in Milan Recital

THIS interesting letter was written by Herbert M. Johnson, business manager of the Chicago Civic Opera company, from Milan, Italy:

We arrived in Milan yesterday after a delightful drive through the Alps and over the Brenner to find the Italian plains as hot and stifling as usual at this season of the year, but we were glad to be in Milan, for it holds several things of particular interest to Chicago music lovers this year.

First I want to tell you about our scholarship winners, Lydia Mihm and Helen Ornstein. We heard these two young women this afternoon, and were much pleased with their progress. Maestro Tanara says they are model pupils, and the development of their voices shows that they have applied themselves seriously to the task in hand since their arrival here last November.

A few days ago they made their first public appearances, a joint recital at the popular Italian resort of Montecatini, which has a large clientele of Americans. Among those present at their concert were several Chicagoans. The young women gave an interesting program and showed promise of artistry and talent above the ordinary. They received enthusiastic notices and hearty applause.

St. Moritz Next.

Maestro Tanara, who has been entrusted with the work of preparing them for their operatic debuts, is taking a great interest in their development, and they are to go with him to the Lido for the remainder of July and to St. Moritz for August. The maestro takes his best pupils every year to these two resorts to continue their studies under the ideal conditions furnished by the seaside and the mountains. It gives them a fine holiday in the bargain, and possibly they will make appearances in concert in both places.

Our experience with the first winners of the Chicago Civic Opera European scholarships has thus far been satisfactory. But in connection with the contests I wish to urge on Chicago teachers the necessity of fulfilling as nearly as possible the conditions of the contests. These competitions are not designed primarily for the best pupils of the different instructors, but for young singers who are ready for operatic experience. Marx Oberndorfer, who will again conduct the contests for the Society of American Musicians, told me that last year several teachers said to him, "I am entering pupils who are not yet ready for opera because I think it good experience for them to learn three operatic rôles."

Such a policy is not only an imposition on the judges of the contest, but might work a serious hardship on the students. Failure in a contest of this sort, where rigorous conditions are laid down, might discourage them to the point of seriously hampering their future careers. It would be much better for every teacher to delay participation of his or her pupils until they are fully qualified to meet the terms of the competition. The contests are held for the purpose of selecting material that is ready for operatic performance.

Mr. Oberndorfer asked me to again stress the fact that the contest is not limited to students of teachers who are members of the Society of American Musicians, but is for pupils of all teachers in Cook county.

Chicagoans in Milan.

Several of our Chicago artists have been in Milan during the last few days. Among them were Charles Hackett and Mrs. Hackett, Richard Bonelli and Mrs. Bonelli, Oscar Colcaire and Maestro Moranzoni. Chase Baromeo was here until recently, but by now is on the water en route to the United States, where he plans a holiday in the Canadian woods.

The Scala has officially closed its season with a final concert conducted by Oskar Fried. The season began rather inauspiciously, but closed with some excellent performances, quite up to the standard of the Scala at its best.

Raisa and Rimini write from Capri, where they have just arrived, that they are looking forward to an ideal vacation. "I have not thought of opera since leaving Chicago," writes Mme. Raisa. "Our trip to Poland and our brief stay at the villa were both delightful, and now I am looking forward to a complete rest here and at the villa, before sailing for the United States."

Festival Is Success.

Our mail bag brings us word of a successful festival at Vienna, during which some operas were performed for the first time in this century. The State Opera forces reached back into the eighteenth century to exhume Pergolesi's "Serva Padrona" and followed it with Gluck's "Le Cadi Dupé," composed in 1783. Both are rollicking comedies, and our correspondent reports that both were excellently performed and well received. Another work seldom given was Mozart's ballet pantomime, "Les Petits Riens."

Haydn was represented on the program by a concert in costume of his "L'Infedelta Delusa."

Lotte Lehmann repeated her London successes of Rosalinde in Johann Strauss' "Fledermaus," with Slezac as the Alfred.

Negotiations are under way between the directors of the State Opera and the management of the Theater an der Wien whereby the latter, long the home of light opera in Vienna and birthplace of some of the greatest successes of the last three centuries, would become a subsidiary stage for the opera. Such an arrangement would be much like that between the State Opera and the Kroll in Berlin, with the same artists on the roster of both theaters, and the smaller house reserved for lighter works.

Polacco Coming.

Maestro Polacco writes from London that he will join us here in a day or two. Other letters from London tell of his great success with the revival of "Pelleas and Melisande" at Covent Garden. He was welcomed as an old friend, and received the same enthusiastic notices that had been his portion in seasons before the war.

Covent Garden has been badly handicapped during the French and Italian season by the illness of leading artists, but on the whole the performances were satisfactory. I understand that the management plans to enlarge this portion of its répertoire for the 1931 season.

Maude Adams' Activities.

From the coast comes more than an inkling of Maude Adams' activities in connection with the play by John Colton in which she expects to return to the stage this fall. Miss Adams, it appears, is still intent upon being the mystery woman of the theater. No one seems to know just where she lives in Los Angeles, but every day she proceeds to Mr. Colton's house from some place or other by way of street cars or bus. She has been using these methods of conveyance because "chauffeurs talk."

As to the play, the title of which has been printed as "That's the Way with Them," it is reported to be in five episodes and fantastic in form. Miss Adams will act as woman of her own age—which is 57—and in one episode, it is said, she will be called upon to visit Mussolini, in another King George. Further, word has it that the play is good.

Notes from London.

Here are some items from London: "The Devil and the Lady," a play which Tennyson wrote at the age of 14 and which has just been published, was produced during the last week with Baliol Holloway and Barbara Hoffe in the title rôles. . . . Add memories from the past: The London Times not long ago referred to Edward Royce as "the producer of the Ziegfeld 'Follies.'" . . . Gilbert Miller is to present "Let Us Be Gay" in England next month with Tallulah Bankhead in the rôle acted here by Francine Larrimore. . . . Clare Eames, who has been abroad for some time, recently turned producer on behalf of two plays. One was an adaptation of Anatole France's story, "The Procurator of Judea"; the other an English version of Vildrac's "Le Paquebot Tenacite," which attracted no little attention some seasons ago.

The sacred words do something to strange girl and strange preacher . . .

I could tell you plenty of thrilling events that follow, but will only mention a fight between the preacher and a crowd of desperadoes headed by Juan, and a great battle staged with the sea bat by this same queer, two fisted he man. It's only fair to give a good picture a chance to deliver its own punches.

Of this be sure—you'll get a kick out of "The Sea Bat." You'll find it smooth and entertaining from start to finish.

Bits aBOUTem.

KING VIDOR is a great believer in "westerns." "When all other types of stories are out of fashion," the director said the other day, "we'll still have 'westerns.' . . .

"The western is the only type of story which has gone through the history of the motion picture without important change. The drama of the west in the so-called wild days has a permanent appeal for all classes of theatergoers in these times when white collar workers can't go galloping over endless plains but must take their thrills vicariously.

"In all other types of photoplays we have cycles, periods when we are flooded with war stories, crook stories, divorce stories, south sea stories, etc. Only the western film continues constantly."

REMEMBER VICTOR VARCONI? You're going to see him as the hero of "The Gay Caballero," which Warner Brothers are to produce. It is said that he's a linguist and so will possibly play the lead in the Spanish and other language versions of this film. Fay Wray, borrowed from Paramount, will play opposite Mr. Varconi.

Jobless Get Work, Then Go on Strike

BRISBANE, Australia.—(AP)—Unemployed men who clamored for work and were given it, went on strike for more pay.

To relieve distress among the unemployed the Brisbane city council gave them road jobs at $15 a week. The men seemed grateful and all went well for a fortnight. Then they demanded an extra dollar a week.

They now are unemployed again.

Janet Gaynor Off Pay Roll; May 'Get Gate'

Producers Fed Up on Star's Capers.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Janet Gaynor, it is possible, may not make pictures for her palpitating public any more. Things are not in such shape for the petite little queen of filmland. The disagreement with her producing company, Fox, has reached a point where if something in the way of giving in is not done by Janet pretty soon her future in films may become a past.

Things have been in a state of armed truce for some time. The trouble began as long ago as Janet's marriage to Lydell Peck, when there was a great deal of feeling about the studio that Janet had jilted Charles Farrell.

Charley was immediately sent on a tour about the country to forget about it. Feeling ran a bit high again when Janet was seen about with Charley after her marriage. On one of these occasions Peck, the new husband, brought up the rear with Charley's partner, Virginia Valli, as his partner, while Janet and Charley entered the theater at the formal opening together.

This was not calculated to make things run smoothly as the executives at the studio were as interested in Charley's happiness and welfare as they were in Janet's.

The latest ruckus started over the sort of screen rôles for Janet. She did not want to do "Sunnyside Up," which she did not feel to be her type of rôle. Then came another singing and dancing picture. Even the fans admit that Janet cannot sing or dance. Then came the purchase of "Liliom" to placate her. Instead of being placated there was something else wrong and Janet started for Hawaii. The Fox company, instead of holding up "Liliom," went ahead and hired Rose Hobart of the New York stage for it. It is a successful picture without Janet.

Hubby Has "Ideas."

Among the demands made by Miss Gaynor is a demand for "better working conditions." Fox officials thought they had arranged things so that Janet had it about the best of any girl in the films. There is a Hollywood report that Janet is being advised on her course by her new husband, Lydell Peck, a member of the bar, who told friends he would like to do for Janet what John McCormick did for Colleen Moore and what Walter Moresco did for Corinne Griffith. Both of these stars are now idle.

Hollywood is awaiting with interest the outcome of parleys at the Fox lot, where it seems the feeling is that Janet will have to take some steps before they dust off the studio throne for her again. Miss Gaynor's contract has four years to run, but her pay checks are now stopped because the studio feels that she is to blame for not working. In spite of the great box office popularity of Miss Gaynor, which though partly a hangover from her silent success, was sufficient to install her as the year's most popular actress in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and New York News polls, it is possible that Janet may follow Madge Bellamy—a discarded Fox studio queen—unless her row is soon adjusted. Miss Bellamy will be remembered as the biggest success in 1928 in "Mother Knows Best," but has made but one program picture since leaving the Fox studio, when she took umbrage at something and walked out.

If Janet Gaynor were to meet such misfortune it would be one of Hollywood's sorry happenings. Her popularity, beauty of a particularly fragile appealing sort are badly needed on the screen today.

Tsk! Tsk!

Joseph Cawthorne and John Barrymore are great fishermen. After a recent cruise prior to their departure together for Alaska, Cawthorne was jubilating over the fact that he had caught his first tuna, a game fish that abounds in the tepid California waters, and his stepson, William Kernell, was adding to his ability as a speaker to his father's delighted announcement.

A sweet old lady, a bit hard of hearing, looked so amazed at the announcement that Cawthorne had caught a tuna fish that some one asked her what was so astonishing in that. "I never knew," said the dear old soul, "that tumors were catching before!"

Berry as Barnum.

Wallace Beery will play P. T. Barnum in Grace Moore's picture founded on the life of Jenny Lind. It was the famous American showman who brought Jenny Lind to America. Reginald Denny also is in the picture. Miss Moore comes to pictures from opera.

Old Montserrate Palace on Market; Taxation Blamed

MONTSERRATE, Portugal.—(AP)—High maintenance costs and heavy taxation have forced on the market the Palace of Montserrate, a majestic mansion lying at the most westerly point of Europe.

It has an incomparable view of the Atlantic ocean and has been in possession of the Cook family for several generations. It was built by James Knowles for Sir Francis Cook, first viscount of Montserrate, but the present chatelain, Sir Herbert, surnamed the "Merchant Prince," is making only brief appearances here, being detained by business in England.

Not far from the palace, and belonging to it, is the "Cork convent," so named because its interior is entirely lined with sheets of cork. The convent is partly hollowed out of a rock and was used as place of punishment for recalcitrant monks from the monastery of Pena.

In the cleft of the rock in the garden St. Honorius, it is said, passed fifteen years of his life, endeavoring, as Byron said, to "merit heaven by making earth a hell."

VOICE OF THE FAN

Prefers Flame to Icy Virtue.

Dear Miss Tinee: This letter is written in criticism of "A Fan," whose letter was published in the V. of the M. F. column. One wonders if she has ever come in contact with the type of woman "Anna Christie" is. If so would she make Miss Garbo's portrayal of the part so vehemently denunciatory?

I admired Greta Garbo tremendously in that picture. A girl with only saccharine prettiness as a characteristic could not have called forth the sympathy most of us felt for the girl whose nature had been hardened and embittered by the experiences Anna Christie had had.

Excuse me, please, but I like a flame to warm myself by, rather than an icy virtue to chill my soul.

ONE OF THE MARYS.

A Brick for the Talkies.

My dear Miss Tineé: I want to register my protest against the talking pictures, as they are, up to now. At first I was carried away by them; thought I would never like a silent picture again, but little by little the glamor has gone, and I thought I could not sit through a feature picture.

Thinking perhaps it was my own "nerves" that made me rebel against the infernal din and evidence of "canned" art [?] on every side, I stayed away from the moving picture theaters for three months until last night when I dropped in to see George Arliss in "The Green Goddess." The magic of this fine actor has gone for me—his "Disraeli" is forgotten because of the flaws in the first named picture. Again the "nerves" came back, and everything seemed cheap and tawdry.

N. M. C.

Script Clerk Asleep.

Dear Mae Tinée: I enjoyed every minute of "The Vagabond King." I loved it when it was at the Great Northern some years ago and the treatment of it in the movies proves that intelligent direction and perfect casting can bring to thousands the romance and music that have been limited to hundreds.

And now a criticism: In the first scene, after his awakening in the palace, Villon is dressed in an outfit of rose brocade, with a golden brocaded cloak. He wears this during his interview with the king, and five minutes later, when he is with Katherine in the garden, he is wearing a suit of cloth of silver. Again, Katherine says to Villon: "Through me the women of France thank you," wearing a white satin and pearl robe, but a split second before, in the garden, she had on a gown of blue lace.

I really do not care how many slips of this kind they make, so long as we can hear Dennis King, but it seems absurd in a picture as lavishly produced and costing such a vast amount, that some one does not check up on such trifles.

Sincerely,
ELBA BURKEY.

Editor's note: Now, I didn't notice those slips.

One for Chevalier.

Dear Miss Tinée: I just want to say a word to Helen Humphry about that remark she made about Maurice Chevalier. Well, I am sure French, and when I read that I nearly boiled over. She certainly doesn't know a good actor when she sees one. Maurice isn't ugly, is a good actor, and has a very good voice. I saw "The Love Parade," and intend to see "The Big Pond" soon. Helen may have her señor, but give me my monsieur. He shall continue to be my favorite despite any one's opinion.

I hope you print this letter and she reads it. Sincerely yours,

"FRENCHY."

A Hope Granted.

Dear Miss Tinée: Every Sunday I read your column and I think it is just about time I give my point about pictures. Last week I went to see John McCormack in "Song of My Heart," and I must say it was the best picture I ever have seen. The young people should go to see a picture like that and learn clean, true love. John McCormack sure has a wonderful voice. I wish it were possible to give a picture more than four stars and that is a picture I would give it to.

EVELYN MONTGOMERY.

Editor's Note: I hope you're happy that your hope has been fulfilled.

Pat for Maurice.

Dear Miss Tinée: To Helen Humphry: I'm glad you like Ramon Novarro so much. I do, too. But your remarks about Maurice Chevalier make my blood boil.

Chevalier dislikers invariably lack a sense of humor. Just ask your friends about yours.

A face of such intelligence, humor, and friendliness as Maurice's can never be "ugly," and it's not always the grand opera voice that wins. Maurice's is delightful for its wonderful warm expressiveness. As for his personality being "sugared artifice"—hooey and more hooey! N'est-ce pas, Mae.

ELEANOR MERRIAM.

Applause for Byrd.

Dear Mae Tinée: I'm so glad you gave the "South Pole" five stars. Wasn't it the most humanely interesting, thrilling, deeply touching picture! All too short, I thought. Best to you.

HARRIET GUSTIN.

Editor's Note: Wonderful! Thanks.

Young Talkie Enjoys the Best of Good Health

Movies Represent Outlay of $2,112,000,000.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The next time your favorite critic fails to find his bottle of bromo on the bathroom shelf or runs out of ideas and writes a piece about the early death of the talking pictures my advice is for the reader hastily to turn to another section of the newspaper, for the critic is wasting time, type, and good white paper.

Perhaps, the fellow did not know that the present investment in the movies, according to a Wall street survey, is approximately $2,112,000,000. Of this sum $1,302,000,000 is invested in the exhibition end and $810,000,000 in the production efforts. That young Mr. Talkie is enjoying good health is evident from the fact that this total represents an increase of $112,000,000 over last year's estimate.

So much for cold figures. This column is more interested in warm figures and pledges itself not to become statistical. Nevertheless, before we go on to more merry matters it should be noted that only fourteen legitimate theaters are holding open house this week in the New York sector. Word comes that Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago are content with two or three each this month. Well, no matter where you live, just begin to count the picture houses that are open this summer. No, Mr. Talkie is not dying, regardless of the poor diet he is being fed.

Aim to Please the Public.

And writing of Mr. Talkie's diet, as almost every one who owns or has access to a typewriter is, there is every evidence that the fodder he is being fed is manna to Mr. and Mrs. John J. Public. In other words, the movie writers and producers are shooting directly at the level of Mr. Movie Fan's head and while the level is not up in the clouds, it is well above the gutters of a lot of the legitimate theaters and high enough to satisfy most of us who attend the talkie theater frankly for entertainment, amusement and relaxation.

A lot of people—and this is what two of the largest producers have decided—expect too much of the talking pictures. They will find educational, artistic and even propaganda pictures if they look about for a bit, but they will find them playing to small audiences. The movie public is attending the sort of pictures it has ordered and the producers say they are going to continue to make the popular pictures, regardless of hackneyed plots, so long as they continue popular.

Shorts Doing Well.

The short industry is very active, hereabouts. George Jessel is making a couple at Paramount's Long Island studio. Several of our local newspaper columnists have been booked for shorts by both Paramount and Warner Brothers [names on request, or if they make good].

Sophie Tucker, who is over in London rehearsing for a music show, has turned down a "flattering offer" to be starred in an English talking picture. O, yeah. Dorothy Hall, one of George White's musical comedy stars, also is reported spurning talkie offers. It is just another way of getting one's name in the paper.

Talkie Fans' Gossip.

They may not be so hot, but these are the things the talkie fans are gossiping about in this sector:

The quick change in the front handle of young Mr. Roger's name. He no longer is "Buddy," but is billed as Charles Rogers. They say he got tired of the nickname and asked for the change. Charles has grown up a lot, lately.

What is going to happen to Clara Bow? Has she secretly been married to Harry Richman, her Broadway year-in-and-year-out beau, or is that just a lot of gossip? Not so long ago one could not point a finger at Clara without bringing in a lot of angry letters. Now they are saying the red haired girl may not get her Paramount contract renewed.

Davy Lee, the youngster of the films, is heading east on a personal appearance tour. He's booked as far as Philadelphia.

Buster Keaton, who by the way, has not kicked about his nickname, or maybe it really is his first name, is going to Europe with the missus, who is the former Natalie Talmadge. They will sail from New York next week for a two month automobile tour of the old world. Buster wants to find some of the places where he slept in the mud during the world war.

Remember Leon Errol, who used to stumble around on a pair of trick knees in the Follies? Well, Paramount is going to use him in a farcical mystery story by Owen Davis. They will call the piece "Social Errors."

May Go Back to Stage.

Movie fans may have the opportunity of seeing Ronald Colman on the stage, this fall. The movie star told friends here just before he returned to Hollywood that he and Noel Coward had discussed a play the dramatist is writing. Colman has not been seen on the New York stage since he played with Ruth Chatterton in "La Tendresse" at the Henry Miller theater.

Stepin Fetchit, the Negro comedian, who has been appearing here at the Academy of Music, since stepping out of Hollywood, says his ambition is to be a great tragedian instead of a comedian.

Duke Ellington's all colored band, which made a reputation in Broadway shows, will be Hollywood bound early next week. The band has been signed up by Radio Pictures for the Amos 'n' Andy show.

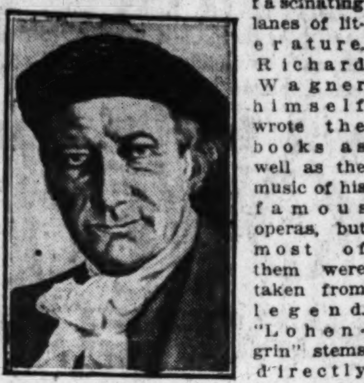
The Armchair Playgoer

AT RAVINIA.

By Fanny Butcher.



VICTORIAN SARDOU.

Tonight "Lohengrin" will lead armchair playgoers into one of the most fascinating lanes of literature. Richard Wagner himself wrote the books as well as the music of his famous operas, but most of them were taken from legend. "Lohengrin" stems directly from the Arthurian legends, which have furnished many authors—and composers—with inspiration, including Alfred Lord Tennyson and John Erskine. The most authentic setting down of the legends is conceded to be Malory's "Morte d'Arthur," a completely adult version of the more innocuous King Arthur legends that we all read as children. In it the husky swan—it always seemed like a bit of nature faking to me, a swan strong enough to act as a ferry boat to an opera tenor—Lohengrin, and the fair Elsa are all to be found, and assorted other old friends, not always, however, in the purely romantic guise that we have been wont to meet them, and never as moral lessons. Once you begin digging around at the roots of the Arthurian legends you'll find all sorts of excitement.

Tuesday and Friday evenings' offerings are both sprung from the literary parentage of Victorian Sardou, one of the idols of the European play-going public between 1860 and 1891. "La Tosca" [sung on Tuesday evening] was produced as a play in 1887 and for years after its premiere it was a favorite. The part of Tosca is what those in the profession call "fat"—which being translated means that it gives the actress a vehicle which is almost pure success if she has any talent whatever. The fact that Sarah Bernhardt created the rôle [written for her] at the height of her fame gave it an added glory. "Fedora" likewise was written especially for the greatest of the French actresses, five years before "La Tosca." There are echoes in all of the memoirs of the period of those two characters, and they are even to be found in her biography in the Encyclopedia Britannica, so integral a part of her fame were they. "La Tosca" was made into an opera by Puccini and produced in 1900, with, however, the text by Illica and Giacosa worked over from Sardou's original play. The text of the Sardou play itself was used for Giordano's opera "Fedora."

* * *

On Wednesday evening the popular double bill of "I Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" will lead armchair playgoers down two attractive literary lanes. The actual text of Pagliacci is not taken from any one book, but the Pierrot-Pierette-Columbine triangle is one of the favorites of all literature. It is in a sense the eternal three-sided affair. Drama is full of versions of it, Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped," Reginald Arkell's "Columbine" and "Prunella" by Granville Barker, to name some of the more recent ones. And countless poems have been written on the same theme. All of them are akin to the little play within the larger drama of the opera. "Cavalleria Rusticana" is an operization of a tale by the Sicilian novelist Verga. It has been beautifully translated into literary English by D. H. Lawrence, who died a few months ago, and who has been in the international news of late over the assorted suppressions of his novel "Lady Chatterley's Lover."

* * *

"Manon," which will be sung on Thursday evening, is, for armchair playgoers, a sign post to one of the great classics of French literature, "Manon Lescaut," by l'Abbe Prevost, or, as its French title has it, "Histoire de Chevalier des Grieux et de Manon Lescaut." It was published in 1733 and never during these one hundred and ninety-seven years has it found oblivion even for a short period. It is one of the classics of love.

Nude Cults in High Favor on French Riviera

STE. MAXIME, France.—(AP)—With the arrival of summer nude cults began springing up like mushrooms in southern France. Already four have been located between Toulon and the Italian border.

Several years ago the police took action against a colony that occupied the top of a mountain behind Cannes. The German doctor who headed the colony was heavily fined and his forty followers were given a fortnight to leave France. They started for Haiti where they were told the winters would be less rigorous.

The new colonies live behind high walls surrounding huge estates and in two cases have private beaches.

Bathing "in the raw" is a common night time diversion all along the Riviera. One group was surprised in the water one moonlight night by three men and the host had to pay a hundred francs before the intruders would leave.

Dramatic League

WHILE the Dramatic league, in its original prospectus, said that each play would be cast according to its requirements, stars or no stars, it admittedly keeps in mind the popularity and the box office value of "players with names." Among such it will have the following next season in Chicago or elsewhere:

Isabelle Jeans of London, as yet unknown in this country; she will be in "The Man in Possession."

James Dale, remembered in Chicago for his playing in "Loyalties" and "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney."

Helen Menken, here last season in "The Infinite Shoeblack."

Leslie Banks, here also in "The Infinite Shoeblack," and to be seen in a new play—probably, Maurine Watkins' "The Devil's Diary."

Miriam Hopkins, last here in "The Home-Towners," and now in the New York revival of "Lysistrata."

Ernest Truex, absent from Chicago since "The Fall Guy," and now also in the revival of "Lysistrata."

Grace George, who will tour for the Dramatic league in "The First Mrs. Fraser."

Ivor Novello, as yet unknown here, who will come as the star of his comedy named "A Symphony in Two Flats."

A. E. Matthews, who will again be with Miss George, and later will appear in Molnar's "Wolf! Wolf!"

Constance Collier, last here in "The Matriarch," and now helping Bruce Bairnsfather to dramatize his new novel, "The Man in the Square," for the league.

Philip Merivale, who will star in "Death Takes a Holiday" until January, and then will go into Pinero's "Dr. Harmer's Holiday."

Frank Morgan, last here in "Rosalie", with Marilyn Miller, who will star for the league in "Topaze."

Mary Newcomb, last in Chicago in Melanie Koll's "The Lady of the Streets."

Lillian Braithwaite, here in 1926 with Noel Coward in "The Vortex," and coming with Mr. Novello.

Forenc Molnar has been victorious in the Supreme court of Budapest in an action to recover from the Vigszinhaus, the principal theater of the Magyar capital, his original rights in some of his plays. One of the plays is that which the Dramatic league of Chicago calls "Wolf! Wolf!"

The play which Elmer Harris was writing for the league has been completed, but is not to be done by or for the league. Instead, it passes to the control of the Messrs. Shubert, who have cast William Woolf and Violet Heming in the principal rôles.

The principal success of the year in the theaters of central Europe has been "Allice Takats," a comedy by Deszie Szemory. This piece has been in the Dramatic league's list of new plays since, about April 1, the first bulletin of the establishment for next season was sent out to the newspapers and the league's subscribers. Thornton Wilder has been asked to make an adaptation of the comedy for the use of the league.

The world première of Pinero's "Doctor Harmer's Holiday" will not take place until January, when it will be held in the Princess theater as part of the Dramatic league's subscription season. The postponement is made to permit Philip Merivale to continue in "Death Takes a Holiday" until all the Dramatic league cities shall have seen that work.

Censor "Lispies."

PARIS.—(AP)—France's film censors have asked the government for $10,000 with which to buy sound apparatus for the censorship studio. The censors now must visit the various film concerns to pass upon "lispies."

THE running of the Classic at Arlington racetrack recently attracted the largest crowd of society folk that has been assembled at any event, this summer. Among those present were Wolcott Blair and his sister-in-law, Miss Melissa Yuille of New York City, who had been visiting the Blairs, Mrs. Stanley Field and her son-in-law, T. Clifford Rodman, the Chauncey McCormicks, Mrs. William H. Mitchell, and Mrs. John A. Stevenson. Most of the fashionable element lunched and watched the races at the Post and Paddock club.

Deer Park, G. P. Blow Estate, Open to Public in August

By Nancy R—.

IN less than a fortnight one of the most interesting and historically important spots in our state is to be opened to the public—Deer Park, at La Salle, Ill.

Although the two great canyons of the park [a mile long and 150 feet deep] have been private property for several decades, the privilege of exploring them has been extended to countless wanderers and visitors in that part of the land, thanks to the gracious hospitality of their owner, the late Mrs. George Preston Blow, the former Adele Matthiessen.

During her lifetime, her many friends and the friends of her four children—Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor of Lake Forest and Nantucket, George Waller Blow of Chicago, Frederick Matthiessen Blow of Paris, and Richard A. Blow of Florence, Italy—were always given a warm welcome at this most delightful of Illinois country places, and invitations to visit there were cherished by all those fortunate enough to receive them.

After Mrs. Blow's death last year, the executors of the estate decided that no more fitting memorial could be achieved than to open the 2,000 acres of the park to the public. A blockhouse and stockade, designed by a pair of clever young Chicago architects, and patterned after the early forts on the Illinois river [Fort Creve-Coeur at Kaskaskia, and Fort St. Louis, at Starved Rock] have been erected at the entrance to the canyons. The first floor of the blockhouse will serve as rest and recreation rooms, and the second floor has been made into a fine Indian museum. There is a pleasant outdoor refectory and the semi-circle of the stockade wall ends in a picturesque little building to be used as the caretaker's lodge.

An Old Hunting Ground.

Deer Park, so called because the Indians used to drive the deer into the natural trap formed by the canyons and there capture them, will have its informal opening on the first of next month, with a formal dedication to follow, perhaps early next spring. And if ghosts walk, who knows what dim, romantic shades may not be seen there—the slender gallant form of that daring young Frenchman, Robert Cavalier, Sieur de La Salle, whose restless feet took him into that part of the world just two and a half centuries ago; Tonty, the Italian soldier of fortune, devoted squire of La Salle and commander of his garrisons; the friendly redskins and the eager, courageous whites, traders and trappers, all of whom have contributed so much to the history and traditions of this part of the world.

Another representative of the Matthiessen clan, Philip Matthiessen Chancellor, son of Dr. Philip Chancellor, formerly of Chicago and now of Santa Barbara, and nephew of the late Mrs. Blow, is at this moment engaged in a thrilling occupation. He set out last month with the Chancellor-Stuart zoölogical expedition of the Field Museum of Natural History. Their first port of call was Rarotonga, one of the Cook islands in the south Pacific. There they boarded a small schooner and headed for Aitutaki, the most remote and least known spot of land in the group, where they are now established.

Their mission is to learn all they can of the plant, animal and human life in that distant place, and I'm told they are doing wonderful work in still and motion picture photography, not only on the surface of the land, but also under water. Photography has been one of young Chancellor's main hobbies since he was a little boy, and as soon as he came of age, less than two years ago, he departed on his first expedition to New Zealand, whence he returned with a splendid collection of photographs and data to be added to the museum's files.

Two Other Expeditions.

Time was when the Field museum sent out some eighteen expeditions annually. Now they have decided that concentration is the better part of valor. This year three are in the field—that already mentioned; a second zoölogical enterprise headed by Arthur S. Verny of New York and London, to the Kalahari desert and Angola land; and an archeological expedition to southwestern Colorado under the direction of Dr. Paul S. Martin, and financed by a fund established by Julius Rosenwald in memory of Augusta Rosenwald. Special permission has been granted for the excavation of a large mound, and it's expected that much will be learned of the history of our prehistoric Indians.

The Field museum has undertaken an enormous project—illustration of the development of life from earliest prehistoric times down to the present day, a span estimated at approximately one billion five hundred million years. The exhibits are scheduled for completion in time for the 1933 Century of Progress exposition here in Chicago, and three halls are to be devoted to them, involving an expenditure of several hundred thousand dollars.

"Leading scientific authorities are being consulted in connection with the preparation of the exhibits," I quote from the Field Museum News of April, "and eminent artists have been engaged to execute certain groups, series of figures, and paintings. Directly in charge of the work are distinguished members of the institution's own staff, including Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator of anthropology; Dr. O. C. Farrington, curator of geology; Dr. B. E. Dahlgren, acting curator of botany; Elmer S. Riggs, associate curator of paleontology, and

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

By Herma Clark.

Chicago, Sept. 18, 1873.

DEAR JULIA:

How terrible the bank failures in New York are! Aren't they? Will says that, though he has not said anything to me about it before, one of his banker clients has been fearful, for some time, that there were breakers ahead for Jay Cooke & Co.

I do feel so sorry for Mr. Cooke, don't you? When you think of his splendid work in raising money for the Union cause during the war, you can't but have the greatest respect for him. Happily, we had not bought any of the bonds they were sponsoring, which caused their failure, so we haven't lost anything, but even if we had, I believe I should still have sympathy for him.

I shall never forget how grateful we all felt when, after the confederate army surrendered, the secretary of the treasury needed over five million dollars to pay our soldiers and send them home, and Jay Cooke secured this in a short time—only a few months. Will says Jay Cooke was to our government what Robert Morris was to the colonies during the revolution.

We are hoping the many bank failures in New York won't bring disaster to the west. Will was talking to C. B. Blair yesterday and Mr. Blair was very optimistic. Will quotes him as saying, in his blunt way: "I have never failed and I don't expect to fail. I have always paid my debts, and I always expect to. I never saw the west in better condition."

Lyman J. Gage is another banker in whom every one has a great deal of confidence, and he is cheerful, too. He says the west has boundless resources, and if we keep our rudder true, we shall be all right.

Will was talking with Eugene S. Pike today, and he said this trouble is a natural result of an era of speculation, and we had to have a collapse. He feels too many people made profits on stocks, and went on recklessly to the inevitable end.

Sept. 28.

Well, we are feeling the panic out here now. Banks have partially suspended. They require notice, for withdrawals, and issue certified cheques, which unfortunately many creditors won't accept, and we have a general feeling of depression that is rather alarming. Will says we must go on just as usual, pay our debts

Gotham Fusses Over Discovery Society Gambles

City Is Horror Stricken; Elite Annoyed.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, July 19.—[Special.]—What a pother there seems to be in New York over the fact that divers people have suddenly discovered that society is going in for gaming!

Of course gambling is quite illegal. Just as much so as is imbibing spiritous liquors, but none the less fashionable folk have found it possible to wager their dollars on the roulette wheels and the hazard board, not to mention "chemmy" and baccarat tables from Palm Beach to Newport and back again.

Simply every one is aware that Bradley's at Palm Beach is the most famous casino in the world, where the amount of money that passes across the green is perhaps greater in sum than at any other casino the world over. No one minded that—but just because the news leaks out that at both Southampton and Montauk casinos are open, the whole city raises its hands in horror—and, incidentally, annoys society frightfully.

Hideaways Taboo.

Society, I must say, will not gamble just for the sake of gambling. Unless the setting is right such notables as Mrs. Charles Minot Amory, the Stotesburys, Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, Caleb Bragg, and scores of others will not flock to a rendezvous simply because the whirling wheel and clicking ball are in action.

The Beach club at Palm Beach, better known as Bradley's, is a lovely white rambling building set in the midst of floral gardens right on the edge of the famous lake trail. A splendid dining room, a huge rotunda lighted with soft amber bulbs make it a perfect setting for the myriad bejeweled women and perfectly clad men of society who gather there for dinner or stroll in later for parties at the various villas.

In New York proper society does not visit gambling houses. There are always places where men who wish to gamble may find the opportunity, but the elect do not choose to visit hideaways where the police may barge in at any moment. The setting, as I have said, is absolutely necessary.

Favor Montauk.

Since most of New York society is away for the summer, the favorite calling places of the notables are reached by water as well as land. It so happened that during the week, visiting at Southampton, we went by Comments on the Fair.

Speaking of the 1933 fair, I was interested in the comments made a few days ago by a certain Chicagoan, but recently returned to our city after some ten months spent wandering about the face of the globe. He and two other world travelers were members of a small after dinner group. Bridge, dancing, and the other usual summer night diversions were given the go-by in favor of that almost lost accomplishment, good conversation. The listeners had been whisked cheerfully from crevasses in the Canadian glaciers to rope bridges in the high Himalayas, from motor routes in the Canal Zone to the dancers of Bali, from the Indian art of our own country to the tombs of Egypt. Abruptly the man of whom I speak brought the talk back to our section of the universe.

"There have been many fairs since America got her feet firmly planted among the nations of the world," said he. "Those of Jamestown, of Boston, of Philadelphia, of Chicago, and St. Louis have passed into history. Centennial, bi-centennial, and tri-centennial expositions have come and gone. When the present backers of Chicago's 1933 fair started their movement they met with opposition. New York had had the same idea. But that matter has been ironed out, and from what I see and hear we're going ahead with the preparations in a marvelously efficient and spectacular way.

"On all sides I find men aglow with the enthusiasm that comes from gigantic plans. I see business men and scientists working shoulder to shoulder to attain a goal that far exceeds anything ever dreamed of before. Science, exploration, and commerce have made immense strides in the last few years. The results are to be collected, classified, and exhibited so that the whole world may realize the true meaning of the term 'Century of Progress.' Wherever I may wander within the next two or three years I shall return to Chicago for the exposition."

Polo in Tibet.

One of the most delightful bits of reading the R—— family has come upon this summer is "Thin Air," by Constance Bridges (Mrs. C. B. Jones). Mrs. Jones is a former citizen of ours now living in the east—she has a house at Old Lyme, Conn., for the summer—and this, her first book, is an extremely well written and highly entertaining account of her journey by caravan from the vale of Kashmir up to Leh, in Tibet. It is an accurate and honest account of that three months' expedition, and the beauties, hardships, and thrills of the trip are told in a swiftly moving, conversational fashion that makes it thoroughly enjoyable, even to the laziest of warm weather readers.

There's a sprightly bit in the book about the polo at Leh—a study in contrasts between sport in that far away and almost inaccessible spot, and our own country. According to Mrs. Jones, Leh is almost the home of polo, which is supposed to have originated in Persia and been preserved and perpetuated in Tibet. But let Mrs. Jones tell you herself:

"In the afternoon we joined the rest of the population of Leh to watch the polo game. The ground was a narrow, dusty strip behind a garden wall. At either end were high walls, and on the fourth side we sat in state with the chief officials on the grandstand. Like all oriental events, it was late in starting. . . .

"At last a sufficient number of players arrived. There are no regulations that the players must be dressed for the sport in which they are engaged. . . . It was impossible to tell which player was on which side. Several wore the fur Ladakhi caps, and plum colored robes with long sleeves and high collars. One or two had little tight fitting caps, and three of the players were so magnificently robed and turbaned that they must have been rajahs, at least.

"When the play began there were no more than three on each side. Other players rode up and were mysteriously added from time to time, without affecting the game.

"Both sides started with a rush from the same end. The leader, in full gallop, threw the ball into the air and struck it with a tremendous swing. There seemed to be no rules and no fouls. The game was fast and spirited. Whenever the ball was driven through the white stones that marked the goals the crowd cheered with equal enthusiasm for both sides and there was an eruption of noise from the band. Since I was quite unable to follow the play, I gathered that the game was over when both sides and the ponies were completely exhausted. I was assured that we had witnessed some fine playing; that these men were the most skilled at the game. That must have been high commendation, for it is the universal sport. Infants of 2 play in the streets with polo sticks, taking competent swings at any object that happens to be at hand. They are put on ponies almost as soon as they know how to walk."

Compare Our Matches.

What a difference between that description and our own well organized, thoroughly disciplined matches! Every bright Sunday, this time of year, finds groups of our players and their following of fans motoring leisurely over to one of the expansive, trim, green fields that ornament the rural landscape. Long, powerful motor cars glide through winding roads, the sun glancing from the high finish of the automobiles and the hard hats of the players. Motor lorries back up to disgorge their loads of beautiful ponies. The match, whether it be practice or tournament, is run through like clockwork, a capital sight to watch for laymen as well as the initiate.

A certain polo enthusiast lamented to me a few days ago that Chicago folk weren't nearly as interested in the sport as they ought to be.

"Why," he wailed, "can we get only a few hundred watchers together when we're having good matches, while there are enormous audiences in the east and often as many as a thousand in Minneapolis and Duluth?"

We didn't know the answer, for we have excellent teams in and around Chicago (the Onwentsia, the Oakbrook, the Cantigny, the Leona farms among them), and any number of good players, including Charles Glore, Laurance Armour, Col. R. R. McCormick, Ralph Hines, William Mitchell Blair, Paul Butler, Harold Strotz, Earle Reynolds, B. H. Rader, Richard Simmons, Dr. Paul Magnuson, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, E. Stillman, C. Crawford, R. McIlvain Jr., Max Corpenning, S. Pearson, and D. Craw.

Thurbers Plan New Home.

That popular young married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Thurber, who have been living in Chicago since their marriage a few years ago, have, we hear, bought an eight acre piece of property out in Barrington and are planning to build a colonial house there this fall. Their grounds adjoin those of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Shroyer, who moved their lares and penates to that attractive little community a season or so back, settling down next door to the piece of land owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCormick Adams. Mr. and Mrs. Adams, by the way, have never built on their property but have used it each summer for entertaining their friends at large, informal picnic parties.

Among the many distinguished guests whom the international law convention will bring to Chicago from Aug. 20 to 25 are Sir William Bull and Lady Bull of London. They will be at the Stevens hotel during their visit in this part of the world. Sir William is father of the idea of building a tunnel between England and France—a plan at one time the subject of much interest and discussion, but given up, for the present, at least. George and Anthony Bull, sons of Sir William and Lady Bull, spent a month in Lake Forest last summer.

Mrs. Noble Brandon Judah is chairman of the committee of women who are already making great preparations for the entertainment for the wives of the men coming here for the conference.

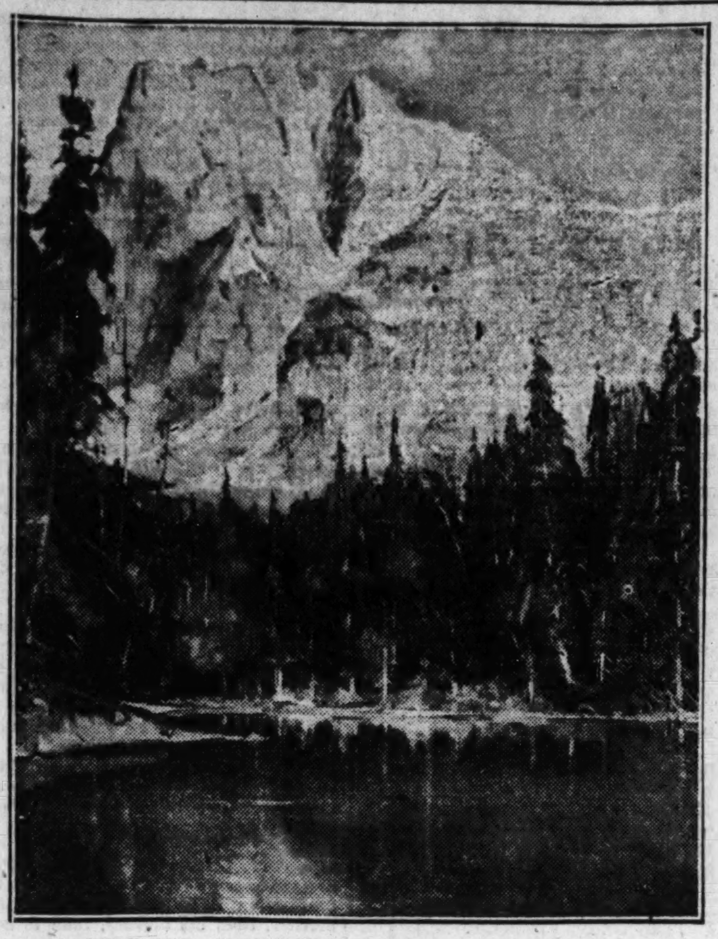
Art Institute Exhibits

Summer Visitors to Chicago Find Many Interesting Shows of Paintings and Prints.

By Eleanor Jewett.



"EMERALD LAKE," by Oliver Dennett Grover. It is well at intervals to consider those American artists who, though death has lost them to us, yet live in their paintings which survive. Mr. Grover was a Chicago artist, a friend and contemporary of Lorado Taft and Ralph Clarkson. He is represented in many collections of importance throughout the country and in our own Chicago Art institute.

The Knoedler galleries held a memorial exhibit of his pictures last winter. He remains through the beauty of his painting a force to be reckoned with and a man to be remembered.

THERE are times, particularly in summer, when sultry days do their best to kill initiative, when the only possible course at all attractive to pursue is that of least resistance. Then the news which bulges the weekly Art institute letter becomes a boon and the jaded keys of one's typewriter lick it up as the dusty roads lick up a passing shower. And so to the task of passing along the museum's latest bits of information!

Mrs. Walter W. Seymour of 7126 Euclid avenue, Chicago, has been elected by the Municipal Art league to fill the position of vice president and director, a position formerly held by the late Mrs. William Frederick Grower. Mrs. Seymour is well known to the club women of Illinois, having held the offices of president, vice president and director two years each in the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs. She now is chairman of resolutions in the General Federation of Women's clubs.

Carnegie Show Planned.

The Carnegie international exhibition of paintings will be held again, as usual, this fall in Pittsburgh. Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of the Carnegie institute, recently made a tour of Europe and selected some 300 canvases to be exhibited. A number of American paintings are to be added, selected by an American jury. Last year 136 American paintings were shown and several of them were the work of Chicago artists, among whom were Davenport Griffin, Beatrice Levy, George Oberteuffer, J. Theodore Johnson, Ivan LeLorraine Albright, and William S. Schwartz. Next spring, from March 10 to April 21, the European section of this exhibition will be shown at the Chicago Art institute.

The influx of summer visitors to Chicago is noticeable at the museum in the increased attendance in its galleries where there are many interesting exhibitions to see. Besides the large group of galleries containing the permanent collections, a number of rooms house temporary exhibits. For instance, the eleven east wing galleries have been filled the last few weeks with the work of the students of the Art institute school. This exhibit has just given way to the installation of the summer shows which open on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

In the Print Rooms.

In the print rooms several exhibits have been arranged. There are etchings by Lepere; there is the new exhibit of Modern Norwegian Prints; there are prints from the Albert H. Wolf collection and early Italian engravings and etchings by Seymour Haden. In the Allerton wing of Gunsaulus hall there may be found an extremely attractive exhibit of Chicago costumes and accessories of the nineteenth century. In the children's museum on the first floor the work done by the Saturday junior department of the Art institute school and by children from 8 to 13 years of age from the public schools of Chicago has proved an interesting and inspiring exhibit.

An original canvas by Veronese, "The Creation of Eve," has recently been acquired by the Art institute by gift from Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Worcester. In his authentication, Dr. von Hadeln, the German critic, says: "This painting, on canvas 81 by 103 centimeters, is a work from the hands of Paolo Veronese. It was probably created about 1570. Veronese, whose real name was Paolo Cagliari, was born at Verona in 1538 and died in Venice in 1588. He was a pupil of Antonio Badille in Verona, where he studied under the influences of the works of Paolo Morando, called Cavazzola. Later he continued his studies in Venice under the influence of Titian and Tintoretto. He worked in Verona and, after 1555, in Venice, also in Mantua, Vicenza, and Padua."

This, while giving at some length the history of the painter, says really but little about the painting. The canvas is in a remarkable state of preservation despite its age which is suggested in the date above as approximately 360 years. Adam is seen recumbent, still deep in sleep; Eve is erect standing looking at the Lord who, clothed in a robe, is carefully inspecting His work. The Lord is shown as a Being with a magnificent head, partially bald, a flowing gray beard, a strong aquiline nose and a powerful figure. The landscape at the left suggests the garden of Eden with beasts of various kinds grazing in the distance.

Norwegian Art.

The exhibition of modern Norwegian prints in gallery 13 and in the alcove of gallery 12 of the Art institute print department, shows the powers of the native craftsmen of Norway as being rather in an experimental stage. There are no decided modernistic pictures and this comes as a distinct relief; rather, there is an approach toward simplification of line and mass. Particularly may this be seen in the etchings by Edward Munch, especially in his print of "Comfort," where in the two nudes a woman attempts to comfort the shaken body of a weeping girl.

In his lithograph "The Swine" [from Alpha and Omega], Munch has simplified his drawing almost out of existence. In another lithograph, "The Composer—Delius," the artist gives us a vital and convincing composition, a skillful arrangement of the conductor, the orchestra and the audience, a flashing glimpse with the emphasis on the conductor whose portrait is particularly fine.

Edward Munch is recognized as being one of the powerful figures in modern art. The prints in the current exhibit give meaning to the description.

There are eight color lithographs by Pola Gauguin, a son of the late famous and infamous Paul Gauguin, who lives in Denmark. The color lithographs are extremely lively and brilliant in tone, some of them are more than a little reminiscent of the color harmonies in the elder Gauguin's south sea paintings. One is a still life and others are entirely concerned with the nude female form in various attitudes, lithe figures bathing, boating and playing. One dramatic study shows a street riot with a squad of soldiers shooting down a group made up of three men and a woman.

The exhibition was assembled by the Norwegian Society of Graphic Arts of Oslo, Norway, sent to this country and is being shown in Chicago until Aug. 15.

The exhibition of Japanese prints executed by Japanese artists during a tour of foreign countries has just been placed on view in the Hutchinson wing and is well worth a visit. The Japanese set down in their customary rhythmic fashion their impressions of Paris, London, New York, Washington and other cities. An occasional involuntary slip on the part of the craftsman adds to the jollity of the exhibit. For instance, one inspired print submits palm trees in the background of a Washington landscape and again New York City boasts mountains. The prints are the gift of Mrs. Emily Crane Chadbourne and they will remain on view until the end of October.

Resembles Rembrandt's Work.

A rather stunning portrait of a forbidding patriarch has been hung in the Old Masters' gallery of the Art institute. It is a painting of the school of Rembrandt. It bears many of the characteristics of a canvas from Rembrandt's own hand, but enough doubt persists to make the first classification the most reasonable. The picture, first given the title, "The Merchant," but later called "The Geographer," has been lent to the museum by Chester D. Tripp of Evanston and Chicago. The accessories in the picture, the revolving globe, the books and so on, point to the title of "The Geographer" as the better justified.

The man wears a heavy fur cap, the brownish yellow tones of which blend marvelously with the other colors of the picture. The background is a faint green. The hands and face of the old man are in relief, the light striking them boldly and bringing them clearly into focus. His hands rest on each other clasped over a book; between his fingers is an eyeglass. He wears a full gray beard and his face is lined and wrinkled.

The canvas is substantial and sturdy and extremely interesting. It may be of value to note here that the authentic Rembrandt, "Girl at an Open Half-Door," in the Art institute is valued at nearly half a million dollars. Rembrandt, himself, died in poverty and in debt, his going scarcely noticed in the chronicles of the day. His superb collection of drawings and etchings brought less than $2,000.

Summer Show Opens Wednesday.

The six one-man shows on the Art institute calendar for this summer will open Wednesday in the east wing galleries. On the list are paintings by Jean Crawford Adams, Frank J. Gavencky, Charles E. Mullin, Rudolph Ingerle, and Roy H. Collins, and sculpture by Enrico Glicenstein. With the exception of Glicenstein, these are all Chicago artists. They have various awards to their credit. For instance, Miss Adams won the Englewood club prize in 1925; Mr. Gavencky won the Clyde M. Carr prize in 1930, Mr. Collins won the Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize in 1930, Mr. Mullin divided the Fine Arts Building prize of $500 in the same year with Cora Bliss Taylor, and Mr. Ingerle won the Bower prize in 1927. These prizes are among those offered in the Art Institute Chicago Artists' exhibitions each year.

The first large gallery in the east wing will be occupied by a special group of paintings from the collection of Max Epstein.

Leaders Herald 'New Emphasis' in Church Life

Find Thirst for Certainty Replacing Externals.

By the Rev. John Evans.

TO say that significant changes are taking place in American religious life is to repeat something everybody knows. The vast amount of printed matter in circulation bearing on religious developments—if one tries to be conscientious in reading all of it—makes one feel like a tired swimmer who lets down and finds himself beyond his depth.

During the last week two parallel series of addresses have been given in Chicago by recognized leaders. Thoughtful persons have stated that both series have been of great value. It is asserted that they throw light on what has been called "the new emphasis." One series was given by the Rev. William Chalmers Covert, general secretary of the Presbyterian board of education, speaking at the pastors' conference at the Presbyterian Theological seminary. The other was given at the Methodist camp meeting at Des Plaines by the Rev. J. W. Langdale, book editor of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Dr. Langdale seemed to put his finger on an uncertainty in the minds even of the church leaders when he said, "We must determine whether Christ was a dead hero or a living Lord." A summary of opinion which any one may gather would lead to the conviction that if the problem Dr. Langdale put could be settled in the minds of any considerable number of people a "public" would soon be created which would give news values to constructive religious subjects.

Until now religious editors of the secular press scarcely know whether they are writers of religious news or of political news, while most religious journals of the country not seeking or depending upon endowments or subsidies are those that deal almost exclusively in political and international news or with organizational methods and interests of the church groups.

Dr. Covert, speaking at the Presbyterian Theological seminary, confirmed the impression given by Dr. Langdale that the most significant change in American religion today is a renewed effort "to give a new vitality to religion for this baffling period in which we now live." In other words, if these two eminent leaders reveal the trend of thought beneath their churches, the near future will see American churches dominated by a search for inner certainty rather than for external dominance.

When the "new vitality" that results from concerted conviction that there is "a living Lord" strikes American religious life, then religious editors can write about religion instead of squeezing news out of secret crime hearings conducted by the churches.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

BISHOP H. LESTER SMITH.

[Spellman Photo.]

Bishop Smith of the Tennessee area of the Methodist Episcopal church brings to a close the 71st annual Des Plaines camp meeting tonight. The Tennessee bishop formerly was in charge of the Helena, Mont., area of the church and prior to that time was pastor in Detroit.

Officers of the camp meeting assert that the 71st session has been the most successful in the long history of the meeting. During the last seven years the camp meeting has been expanded in its scope and now the historic grounds are being used continuously from May until October.

The tenth anniversary and the annual meeting of the Evangelical Men's auxiliary of the Evangelical Synod of North America, will be held at the Evangelical home for children and aged at Bensenville this afternoon at 3. The meeting will be in charge of Louis Broman, president of the men's auxiliary. The children's band will furnish the music. The main objective of the men's auxiliary is to help support the home for children and for the aged. It also supports Elmhurst college at Elmhurst, and shows a benevolent interest in all of the synod's local enterprises.

The Rev. J A. Sutherland, nationally known member of the extension department staff of the Moody Bible institute and a Bible authority of note, will preach at the Moody Memorial church, North avenue and North Clark street, today. Dr. Sutherland has successfully led numerous Moody-sponsored religious gatherings in all parts of the country.

The Rev. H. McCormick Lintz, also an extension department member at Moody institute, has charge of the Sunday services during the month of July at the Salem Evangelical Free church of Chicago, Mozart and Lincoln streets, and will be in the pulpit the remaining Sundays of July.

Jean Duncan MacDonald, R. N., graduate of the Mount Sinai Hospital school of nursing, and late head nurse there, sailed last Thursday on the S. S. American Shipper of the American Merchant line from New York by way of London to Portugal, where she will study the Portuguese language for a year before continuing on to Dondi, West Central Africa, to serve as a missionary nurse under the American Congregational board of commissioners for foreign missions.

The days when the Christian church was in its infancy in Illinois are recalled in connection with the eightieth anniversary of the founding of St. Peter's Episcopal church, Grand Detour. The celebration takes place this afternoon, when representatives of Episcopal churches from throughout this section will gather at the historic stone church to pay tribute to the missionary zeal of its founders.

The struggle between Chicago and other early settlements for supremacy as the metropolis of the midwest also is brought to mind by the occasion. For Grand Detour, located on the Rock river, at one time promised to be a city of large proportions. The advent of the railroad and the development of lake transportation, however, spelled the downfall of Grand Detour and gradually the once flourishing city has dwindled until today only a handful of residents remain.

The Rev. A. J. Warner was the founder of the little church, the original stone building of which still stands. He came across the prairie of Illinois to the newly founded village and then traveled up and down the Rock river on horseback, calling on other villages and seeking the faithful. He was schoolmaster as well as pastor at Grand Detour.

The church of St. Peter's was formally opened and dedicated by Bishop Philander Chase in July, 1850, and consecrated by Bishop H. J. Whitehouse two years later. It is said to be the second oldest church building in the state of Illinois which is still in use.

Services are held in the little church during the summer months for the benefit of the summer colony there. In the winter months, however, the residents are so few that the services are discontinued. The Rev. Albert B. Whitcombe of Dixon is the priest in charge.

The Rev. J. A. Wilson, pastor of St. Paul's United church, Paris, Ontario, will preach this morning at the Drexel Park Presbyterian church. The Rev. Dr. Clinton Cox, pastor of the Drexel Park church, announced that Dr. Wilson is a widely known leader in the Canadian United church.

The annual Epworth league institute and camp meeting of the German Methodist Episcopal churches of the Chicago area will open tonight at the camp grounds near Dolton. The Rev. Dr. Adam J. Loeppert, district superintendent of the Chicago northwest conference, in announcing the meetings, stated that the annual institutes have been held nearly 50 years. The program will include an address by Dr. Loeppert on his recent trip to Oberammergau.

Other well known leaders of the German Methodist Episcopal church will speak at sessions which close next Sunday night. Prof. C. W. Hertzler of Baldwin Wallace college will be the speaker at the final meeting. Dr. E. D. Kohlstedt, secretary of the board of home missions, will be another important speaker.

The Rev. Benjamin Martin Will, pastor of the Sheridan Road Methodist Episcopal church, has returned from a vacation tour of eastern Canada and New England. He will preach this morning on "Life's Outlook."

BRIDE

[Daguerre Photo.]

The marriage of Miss Margaret Anita Slocum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gaylord Slocum of Riverside, to Malcolm Smith Seay, son of Mrs. A. D. Seay of La Grange, took place on June 28 at the Methodist Episcopal church in Riverside. Mr. and Mrs. Seay will reside in La Grange.

The Bride as Hostess

By Helen Bartlett

Miss Bartlett's two booklets, "Table Setting and Service for Luncheon" and "Table Setting and Service for Dinner," may be obtained by sending a stamped, addressed envelope to this department. Address Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

A YOUNG woman says in a recent letter, "Your department was a tremendous help to me in that hectic time when I was planning my wedding, buying my trousseau and learning how to cook. Now I'm at the anticlimactic stage where I can calmly survey my new house and plan to entertain. But how? Our apartment is small, I do my own cooking, but I have no confidence in myself as a hostess. I want to give some sort of a party for my husband's family and my own, and do something, too, for my wedding party of eight. Also, I want my friends and my mother's friends to call and perhaps have tea. Can you give me some ideas?

"My apartment is pretty [at least I think so], and while our means are not beyond the average, we've set a fairly modest standard I want to stick to. How, then, can I return the courtesies that have been extended to me and keep up my social duties?"

The thing to do, I would say, is to do things in your own way. Remember that it isn't lavishness nor a display of luxury that makes hospitality—it is something far less tangible but infinitely more satisfying, principally a genuineness of feeling.

However, you are obliged to invite your husband's family to dinner. If you can possibly afford to hire a waitress from a caterer, do so; it is pretty hard to be cook, waitress, and hostess in one, at least without being flurried and pre-occupied. Select a menu that is well within your cooking capability—don't attempt anything you're not quite sure of. The fact that it is simple makes no difference. Good cooking and smooth service would make even the most uninteresting meal something of a delight.

Don't attempt to have too many guests. If having your family and your husband's family at once would make too many, have one dinner for the four parents, yours and your husband's, and combine the other members of the two families at later and perhaps less important parties.

If you must do the cooking and serving, four courses will do. Use your nicest linen, china, and silver to make your table pretty. Your husband sits at the head and you at the foot. The father could be at your right, and your mother at his right.

Simplify the Service.

To simplify the service you could have the first course, if it is a cold one, on the table [on service plates] when the guests enter the dining room. For this course a fruit or fish cocktail would be a good choice. The second course would consist of meat you can cook well, vegetables, and potatoes. If you have a waitress have her bring in filled plates from the kitchen and set them in place when she removes those of the first course. If your husband carves and serves, plates can be passed, the first going to you, the next to your mother, then his mother, then to both fathers.

Next comes the salad. If you have a waitress this can be a separate course. Have it a good one, and a decorative one, and have little toasted crackers or cheese sticks to accompany it.

For dessert select something that balances your menu nicely and something that is simple to serve—perhaps something that can be placed in its dishes ready to serve before dinner. Icebox cake, for instance. You can serve coffee with this or you can leave the table and have it in the living room. If you have it at table have cups and saucers, cream and sugar, etc., on a tray ready to transfer to the table at your place, where you can fill the cups and pass them. Or, if you prefer and it is convenient, filled cups may be brought in from the kitchen.

The thing to strive for is smooth service. Do what is most convenient and least distracting for you. Plan each step carefully so that the mechanics of serving won't be too obvious and both you and your guests will be at ease. Perhaps my little booklets on table setting and service will help you. I'll gladly mail them to you if you will write for them, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Sunday Night Supper Party.

Your entertainment for your wedding party and other members of the two families can be a supper party. I suggest a Sunday night buffet affair. You can have a much simpler menu then than would be necessary for a dinner and you can have a larger number of people at a time. On your buffet, if it is large enough, or your dining room table, have plates, napkins and silver, with the trays of food in neat array.

At one end of the table place your coffee service and put your maid of honor or one of your bridesmaids in charge of it. At one side have the cups on their saucers and a row of teaspoons side by side. At the other end can be the other silver, the forks also side by side, standing on their edges. Plates and napkins can be neatly stacked beside them. The napkins are smaller than dinner size and the cloth covering your table can be of lace or linen with drawn work. The centerpiece can be a low bouquet.

Along the edges of the table, on attractive dishes or trays, have the food. This need not be elaborate, but it should look appetizing—and you'll find that clever garnishes will turn this trick. For a menu there are thousands of things. You can have a hot dish, such as deviled crab meat, cheese soufflé, or lobster Newburg with tiny buttered rolls, or you may have cold meats, a delicious mixed salad, and lots of fancy little appetizers. For a sweet you can have small cakes. And have plenty of coffee. I'm sure Meta Given, THE TRIBUNE's cooking editor, could help you with menus suited to your requirements if you explained to her what you wished.

Luncheons and Teas.

After these parties you can have simpler forms of entertainment for those to whom you are indebted. Giving an informal luncheon to three of your friends at a time can be easy. Use the luncheon sets you've surely been given as wedding gifts and have your table colorful and pretty. Serve a simple first course of soup, or perhaps something cold, and for your main course have a dish that can be prepared beforehand and ready to serve.

Tomato stuffed with cheese or fish is a good choice. In these days of diet and intelligent eating most women limit their luncheons to three courses and you can take advantage of this. Your dessert can also be something easily prepared beforehand—perhaps a short cake or angel food cake with crushed fruits over it. In hot weather you can have iced tea or coffee.

When people come in to tea you'll find that "having things in the house," as our grandmothers would put it, is a great help. Thanks again to the current knowledge of diet, this in-between refreshment is extremely simple. Nothing more than a few appetizing sandwiches, perhaps open-faced, a few small cakes and a stack of fresh, good tea is necessary, at least in the way of food. Dainty services and an easy air of hospitality are what make it a delightful interlude in a day.

DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay you $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Loss of Prize Foretold.

I spent hours puzzling over a contest in which $500 was to be given for the best slogan submitted. I wrote one, addressed an envelope and stamped it, and forgot about the contest. Months later I had a dream in which I saw someone waving a check for $500 and calling out my slogan, but the person holding the check kept going farther and farther away instead of coming toward me with the money.

The next day I looked up my carbon copy to make sure the slogan I wrote was exactly as I had dreamed it. It was. A few weeks later I saw my slogan in a newspaper—but it was credited to some other person who was quoted as having thanked them for the money.

I wrote, sending them my carbon, and reminding them of their promise that equal awards would be given to tying contestants. They insisted they had not received a contribution from me. I was about ready to sue them when I ran across my slogan, addressed, stamped, and sealed, in the top of a seldom used box of stationery.

P. H.

Neglected to Observe Warning.

We intended to start out on a long trip the following morning. During the night I had a dream in which I pictured us stalled on a lonely country road without gasoline. In the morning I told my husband of my dream and warned him to see that we had plenty of gasoline.

We had driven about fifty miles when suddenly the car came to a complete stop and refused to start again. The gasoline had given out. Looking about I saw that the place where we were stalled was the very place I had seen in my dream.

We waited and waited until at last an automobile came along and gave us assistance.

yacht to Montauk, where society now goes to do its polite gaming.

Nowhere have I seen so lovely a place as the casino where the notables of Southampton and the Long Island shores gather evenings and week-ends. It lies on an island right at the very end of Long Island itself, with nothing but the broad Atlantic on all sides. The winding roads lead through bare sand dunes and the water craft come silently across the quiet waters to a landing place that finishes off broad lawns at the end of which is the casino.

There is quite a resemblance to Bradley's at the Montauk casino. The same arrangement of dining room and roulette room. An orchestra playing delightfully in the dining room, and the croupiers standing silently awaiting the time when the diners will have finished their dinners and will come in to play the wheels.

Not All Gamble.

At Palm Beach there are always players by 9 o'clock, but at Montauk I noticed no one playing until well after ten. And not every one played. Many came just to dine and dance and to sit on the broad verandas or stroll along the paths that border the lawns and walk out on the pier to where the white yachts with their red and green and blue riding lights lay.

The Carroll Livingston Wainwrights and their niece, the Hon. Eileen Beresford, were there, as well as the Kenneth O'Briens, the Jay Duffs, the John W. Kisers, and many others. Most of them had come from Southampton and after dinner they reboarded their yachts and sailed home again in the white of the perfect moon.

That Sinister Air.

The only difference between the Long Island and the Florida casinos was that the Long Island one is too obviously guarded. The charm of Bradley's is that it possesses an air of belonging, while the Montauk place, while utterly lovely, has a slightly sinister air due to the fact that there are so many rather fierce' looking men about who seem always to be on the watch.

Society, however, coming and going by water, pays little attention to what is going on. With decent music, a lovely setting and the chance to fritter away a few dollars if one wishes, the notables are content to take their pleasure and ask no questions. It has been the custom of years and no one has given the matter a thought.

So far as all the other is concerned, nothing will be done. When Saratoga opens at the end of the month and society flocks to the New York spa the gaming rooms will open there as well. Just so long as society continues to congregate at fashionable spots, just so long will there be places for them to dance and dine and play the wheel. It has always been like that—and so far as I know—it always will be.

Every One Sea-siding.

Of news about town, there is little or none. Every one is sea-siding. Coming through Long Island one noticed that the whole sand bar was en fête. At Glen Cove the huge black Corsair of J. Pierpont Morgan is still lying waiting, I hear, until J. P. is ready to make his annual visit to his estates abroad.

For the first time in many years J. P. will be able to indulge his fondest wish, which has always been to cross the Atlantic in deepest seclusion with no one to goggle at him and intrude in his privacy. Once well out to sea the famous financier probably will don dungarees and sneakers and lend a hand about the boat. Yachts have been J. P.'s one relaxation for many a year.

Baby in Red Cross.

Deaf Hear Again Through New Aid

Earpiece No Bigger Than Dime Wins Enthusiastic Following Ten-Day Free Trial Offer

After twenty-five years devoted exclusively to the manufacture of scientific hearing aids, the Dictograph Products Co., Inc., Dept. 508M, 180 North Michigan Blvd., Chicago, Ill., has just perfected a new model Acousticon that represents the greatest advance yet made in the re-creation of hearing for the deaf. This latest Acousticon is featured by a tiny earpiece no bigger than a dime. Through this device, sounds are clearly and distinctly transmitted to subnormal ears, with wonderful benefit to hearing and health alike. The makers offer an absolutely free trial for 10 days to any person who may be interested, and a letter will bring one of these remarkable aids to your home for a thorough and convincing test. Send them your name and address today!

Edges' Lease Ancient Chateau for the Summer

Take Up Residence in Villa d'Avray.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 19.—The American ambassador, Walter E. Edge, and his family have just taken up their summer residence at the Château de la Ronge, a handsome 15th century structure at Villa d'Avray. The last formal reception at the embassy was held on July 4 so Mrs. Edge will do little entertaining during the summer.

Every one knows that Villa d'Avray is rich with souvenirs of Jean Corot who found many characteristic subjects there along the borders of the twin ponds. He favored particularly the valley set with woods known as Bois des Fausses where there repose a forest ridge occupying the high ground between Villa d'Avray, Sevres, and Versailles. This region may be seen from the shanty known as Cabane de Corot where the painter lived at times and not far away is a monument erected to his memory in 1880.

Museum Gets Painting.

Although Corot is much identified with this spot he passed his schoolboy days and part of his youth at Rouen and there he painted his first pictures from nature. In 1867 he received only the second class medal at the Exposition Universelle. Napoleon III. somewhat atoned for this by making Corot an officer of the Legion of Honor, but what pleased the painter most was the purchase of his famous picture "Matinée de Villa d'Avray" by the Rouen museum.

A few years before certain American amateurs began to collect works of Corot; a Baltimore financier named Walters saw his canvas called "Etoile du Berger" at a Villa d'Avray studio. Walters was inclined to take it but while he was making up his mind the museum at Toulouse snatched it up quickly for $120. Walters, however, ordered a small replica.

Chicagoans in Paris.

Chicagoans now visiting Paris and recent callers on Ambassador and Mrs. Edge are Ira Nelson Morris accompanied by his wife who were hosts at a dinner at the new restaurant Ambassadeurs before going to Deauville.

Mrs. E. H. Little has just joined her husband here before going to England. Later they will motor through central Europe.

John F. Gilchrist has just arrived with his daughter, Dorothy, after touring the château district. Other Chicagoans here are Misses Agnes and Virginia Amberg and Bert Denman and his wife.

Heir to Throne of Spain Displays Ear for Minstrels

SEVILLE, Spain.—(AP)—The prince of Asturias, heir to the Spanish throne, like his father, King Alfonso, is fond of roaming the streets, unheralded and unattended, and chatting with chance acquaintances.

The prince, long in ill health but now greatly improved, was strolling one night recently through one of the poorest sections of the city. Following the Sevillian custom of late hours he began his walk about midnight—which was just after dinner.

He chanced upon a band of itinerant minstrels, hired them, seated himself at a sidewalk café and listened to their quavering, high pitched Andalusian folk songs and gypsy ballads until 3 o'clock in the morning.

"Gossip Stone" Is Ancient Warning to French People

MULHOUSE, France.—(AP)—The famous "gossip stone" still warns idle talkers as they pass the ancient, frescoed city hall. This stone, a mask that weighs 25 pounds, is in the Historical museum, but a duplicate hangs on the end of the city hall, with a warning inscription. Its significance is evident from the big tongue hanging out.

Centuries ago gossips were punished by being compelled to walk the streets wearing the heavy stone mask. Its use is recorded as far back as 1551 and as late as 1781.

BRIDE

MRS. KEN REED DYKE.
[Marceau Photo.]

THE marriage of Miss Elizabeth Dudley Taylor, daughter of Mrs. Dudley Taylor of Kenilworth, to Ken Reed Dyke, son of Mrs. James S. Dyke of New York City, took place on June 20 at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

When Chicago Was Young

as promptly as possible, and be cheerful, for a lot of the trouble is imaginary. He says what Chicago is doing is simply paying for its speculative whistle, in company with the rest of the United States. We have danced and we must pay the piper. The piper is charging heavily, but he must be paid. Will thinks the country will be all the healthier for this reaction, but when stocks are falling, as if they were made of lead, it isn't easy to be calm.

Will brought home today our tickets for the Star lecture course at Music hall. I have been looking them over, and think they will be very interesting. Such distinguished names appear on the list as Bret Harte, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Newman Hall, and Gerald Massey. We have also bought concert tickets for the Thomas orchestra concerts. These are among the great musical events of our city. Theodore Thomas is a remarkable director. I hear he has written a composition to be performed on the anniversary of the fire. That should be most interesting.

We attended the opening of our exposition last night and were delighted with all we saw. The monster building was brilliantly lighted; the exhibits were almost all in place, and everybody, dismissing thoughts of the panic, seemed quite gay. There were speeches, quite brief, which was a relief and the music of the band was fine.

Our friend, N. S. Bouton, chairman of the executive committee, made the address, turning over the building to the board of managers. Senator Richard J. Oglesby, Senator John A. Logan, Gov. Beveridge; C. B. Farwell, our representative in congress; John B. Drake, W. F. Coolbaugh and others had something to say. It was a really distinguished gathering. All regretted Potter Palmer was not able to be present.

We were much interested to see an elevator engine made entirely by Charles R. Crane, son of Richard T. Crane. The young mechanic made the beautiful engine in seven months. It took a good deal of perseverance to work all that time and never give up. I don't know anything about machinery, but Will says it is a wonderful piece of work.

I saw many dolmans at the exposition, and one which was trimmed around the neck with feathers reminded me of the definition a friend of Will's—an amusing, but rather coarse man—gave of this garment. He says it is a fashionable cloak, short in the center, long on the sides and resembling a chicken with a bad attack of the pip.

I really must close, but I want to ask you if you have heard the story about Bishop Phillips Brooks and the lemonade. I met his brother, the Rev. Arthur Brooks, rector of St. James' Episcopal church here, the other day, and asked him if it was really true, and he said he thought it might be.

The story goes that Bishop Brooks, visiting a parish bazaar, patronized the first booth he came to, where some little girls were selling lemonade at five cents a glass. He drank a glass and then, looking across the room, saw another booth, where lemonade was being sold at ten cents a glass. He inquired why the difference in price, and the little girl who had just sold him a drink said: "You see, the cat fell in this pail of lemonade, and we didn't think it was right to charge as much for it as for the other lemonade." Well, the bishop had already consumed his purchase, and couldn't do anything about it!

Much love and do tell me whether you in New York are feeling any more cheerful than we are here. With love,

Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

The panic of 1873, mentioned in Martha's letter, was a serious one. Jay Cooke, born in 1824 and thus in the height of his powers at this time, had immense prestige, so that the failure of his banking houses in New York and Philadelphia, shook the country to its foundations. It is pleasant to record that he was able to pay his losses after a considerable time.

Lyman J. Gage was just coming into prominence in Chicago as a banker. He was later secretary of the treasury of the United States.

Charles R. Crane, the boy who made the model of the elevator engine, is a resident of New York, and is known as a philanthropist and patron of science. He is brother of Richard T. Crane, of Chicago.

Anne Kinsolving Important Guest at Newport, R. I.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 19.—[Special.] — An important visitor here during the week was Anne Seddon Kinsolving, daughter of the Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving and Mrs. Kinsolving of Baltimore, whose engagement was recently announced to John Nicholas Brown, long famous as the richest young man in society. Miss Kinsolving is the guest of Mrs. Brown at Harbour Court.

Luncheons and dinners continue to crowd the calendar. Miss Emma G. Stone is giving a luncheon in honor of her niece, Countess Alexandrin von Beroldingen. Others entertaining include Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, Mrs. Eugene O. Reynal, Mrs. George Fritz Chandler, Mrs. Herman D. Kountze, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. P. Richardson, Mrs. Guy Norman, Mrs. Charles Betts Hillhouse, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, Julia Berwind, and Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Blair.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Goelet are entertaining as their house guest the Marquise de Thiecourt of Paris, who will be with them all summer. Lady Herbert has come from London and is with her sister, Mrs. T. Shaw, safe for the month.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Walters, who recently returned from abroad, arrived in their yacht, Namda. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster will arrive at Pen Craig on the 27th, having sailed from Europe during the week. Lord and Lady Camoys, who were expected to remain here for the whole of the season, already have sailed for London, having been forced to change their plans.

Count and Countess Laszlo Szechenyi are to leave the Whitney villa at the end of the month and return to Hungary for the remainder of the summer. They will return to Washington for the winter. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney will probably occupy her villa in August.

Boy Scouts Are Given Benefit by Southampton Elite

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., July 19.—[Special.]—Canoe Place inn was the scene on Friday of a dinner dance, cabaret and fashion show, all in aid of the Boy Scouts of Suffolk county. Among the girls who took part in the fashion show were Dorothea Gay, Isabel Gardner, Alice Belmont, Betty Campbell and Elizabeth Munn.

Patrons included Mr. and Mrs. Jay Robinson Duff, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Snowden, Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Hoardman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Van Vleck Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Livingston Wainwright, Kenneth O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pitou, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ziegler, Dr. and Mrs. Fenton Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. David Helier, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kiser, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy H. Stewart.

The Greatest Two-Week Vacation Trip Ever Offered

Circle Tour East
Through the Switzerland of America.

In America's finest Motor Coaches—equipped with washroom and lavatory, high back deep-cushioned seats and ice water containers. The most comfortable and easy riding cars ever built.

If you are fed up on the "usual" tour offerings, here's a two weeks' vacation trip that will thrill you—it has that romantic "something" we call adventure. It has scenic beauty, real natural scenery, points of historical interest and many other things that no other vacation suggestion has to offer.

*NEXT TOUR
July 20th*
and Weekly Thereafter

Every minute will be an interesting one. You'll love the Thousand Islands, the forested ranges of Adirondacks, beautiful Lake Placid, and you'll be thrilled with your visit to Ausable Chasm and your trip across Lake Champlain. Your journey thru the Green and White Mountains, over the Berkshire Trail, thru the Berkshires, along the Hudson River on the Storm King Highway, over the Poconos, thru the Delaware Water Gap and Watkins Glen, will provide scenes you'll never forget and things to talk about for the rest of your life.

And Gloucester—you'll never forget your half day on romantic Cape Ann, you'll enjoy Salem, the witch city, and you'll never forget your visit to Marblehead, that brine-drenched town by the sea. Then there's a day in Boston—two full days and three glorious nights in New York—with a heavenly night and an enchanted day at Alexandria Bay and the grand climax—a trip across Lake Erie.

All of these scenic thrills are packed into the greatest vacation trip ever offered, the result of seven years of successful operation and experience.

An illustrated folder will be mailed you upon receipt of your request to

By sailing on Wednesday, the trip is made in true "Dutch" Style—on the "Veendam"—just chartered from the Transatlantic service of the Holland-America Line.

If return is arranged on the "Bermuda," there's another Transatlantic thrill coming with a jolly British crew and all the niceties of "Furness" service.

In Bermuda, bathing, sailing, bike riding, teas, dances, tennis, sightseeing and many other pastimes in the cool mid-ocean atmosphere. Bermuda's average summer temperature is only 77°.

Sailings from New York every Wednesday on the S.S. "Veendam" and every Saturday on M.S. "Bermuda"

IMPORTANT TO NOTE: "Veendam" and "Bermuda" sail from Manhattan Pier 95 (west 55th St.) and go direct to dock at Hamilton (Bermuda), thus avoiding inconvenience of five mile transfer from anchorage. Write for literature regarding summer all-expense tours, including Washington, New York and Bermuda. Rate $199.45 and up; leaving every Sunday. This includes transportation from Chicago to Bermuda and return to Chicago, also all sightseeing trips and hotel accommodations.

A-A-A-1 MEN LISTEN! We Start Every New Man in the Field With Men Already Making $25 to $50 Per Day

This is probably the fastest selling deal in America today. No hard [illegible] here. Men close over 50% interviews with 20 minute presentation. We will start every new man to work with such men. They can get a prospect in a few minutes. There are nearly a million such prospects in the territory handled from this office. We can give exclusive virgin territory to men who can qualify and handle it properly. We are furnishing one of the most powerful sales kits ever utilized. The strongest and most convincing endorsement letters imaginable are pouring in to us from all sections of the United States.

We are selling a patent specialty with a field bigger than the automobile or radio. The only specialty of its kind. It is not a household article. We furnish an iron-clad guarantee of performance and savings with every purchase. Other factors of this specialty, however, are far more important to the buyer than the saving effected. We conduct a bona fide public test every day demonstrating savings effected on one of the most universal expenditures in modern life. Here are results of last 4 tests:

NO. 1 SHOWED SAVING OF 29⅛%.
NO. 2 SHOWED SAVING OF 20%.
NO. 3 SHOWED SAVING OF 33⅓%.
NO. 4 SHOWED SAVING OF 52%.

This specialty will sell to the biggest corporations as well as to the individual. Commissions on a sale run as low as [illegible] and as high as $2,500. No salesman, however, is permitted to make big sales until he has a thorough knowledge and understanding of the business and has demonstrated his sales ability. We cannot afford to spoil big prospects. If you are a good salesman this policy will appeal to you.

We want men who can do what other men are doing—men who can make [illegible] to $50 a day when they go into the field with men making this amount and see how it is done. Remember these are the commissions from small sales.

While we are already operating extensively in more than 20 states, we just started a Chicago organization last week. Openings for 20 state managers and executives in positions which will pay $2,500.00 to $50,000.00 per year to men who can fill them successfully. As far as possible these positions will be filled with men from our Chicago organization.

If you are a real salesman, a worker and a live wire and are looking for a live deal and a real one, call, write or wire

KANKAKEE STEAMER COMPANY

FARMS FOR SALE— Here are some real bargains, a 20 acre De Kalb County farm, 1 mile south of Malta, on good road, the very best of black oil, good 8 room house, barn, poultry house, hog house. This is what goes with the farm: Pair of young mules, can be handled by children, 2 fine milk cows, fresh; 15 thoroughbred hogs, 2 calves, about 600 chickens, full set farm machinery, 8 tons of fine hay in barn, 12 acres of fine corn, 1 acre of potatoes. Here is a real chance to start with an income; reason for selling, the owner sustained an injury in the spring which rendered him unable to continue farming and his wife has recently lost her eyesight. I am offering this splendid little farm and all the above mentioned property for only $7,800; $3,500 cash and long time on balance.

Fine De Kalb county farm of 120 acres; well improved; 3 miles from Sycamore, Ill. County seat of De Kalb county. $155 per acre; has $8,000 long time loan; bal. cash.

I have some real bargains in small tracts of 2½ acres and some well improved 80 acre, 120 and 240 acre farms. Now is the time to buy a farm for an investment.

THE NEW FREE-WHEELING STUDEBAKERS HAVE GIVEN

US THE BIGGEST NEW CAR BUSINESS OF THIS YEAR

Result Is Hundreds of Late Model Cars Have Been Taken in Trade.

We need the room, our showroom is packed with cars, so we are willing to sacrifice these autos at

SURPRISINGLY LOW PRICES!

Investigate these bargains at once. Every car is backed by the famous Studebaker Used Car Pledge that guarantees 5 days' free driving trial.

ERSKINE SEDAN. 1929 Six. Actually used only 5½ mos. It's in wonderful condition now, so it will be sold at once at our price of $445.

GRAHAM-PAIGE CABRIOLET. 1929 Conv. model. We defy anybody to tell this from a brand new car. It has an unusually smart paint job, wire wheels, side mounts, trunk, driving light, shock absorbers, and other extras. Roomy rumble seat. It's a real bargain at our price of $595.

STUDEBAKER 8 SEDAN. 1929 President that was carefully checked over by expert Studebaker mechanics and now it carries a 30 day free service guarantee. Every feature is absolutely in brand new condition. $895.

AUBURN CONV. TOURING SEDAN. A late model 8 that's the classiest car of its kind in Chicago. Has wire wheels, fender wells, and a wealth of extras. The interior is spotless, and the finish is bright and gleaming. Has a smooth, powerful motor. Sold for almost $3,000 a short time ago. Now $1,045.

STUDEBAKER VICTORIA. 1928 Commander that's the last word for sparkling performance and attractive appearance. Only used a short time. Very fully equipped. $495.

PONTIAC CABRIOLET. 1929 with a spacious rumble seat. Has brand new tires and many valuable extras. This car was only driven a few mos., so it will give new car satisfaction today. $595.

STUDEBAKER COACH. Std. six that will make an ideal vacation car. Has many valuable extras, chormium plating and dandy tires. $165.

FLINT TOURING. Here is a sporty car with khaki top, tonneau windshield, windshield wings, practically new tires, trunk, 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Runs fine. $145.

PACKARD SEDAN. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, spotlight, shock absorbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. The upholstery, finish and motor are in splendid condition. $350.

OAKLAND COACH. 1928; looks and runs better than many cars selling for twice this price. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, spare tire, snubbers, bumpers, etc. $395.

NASH SEDAN. Adv. Six 4 dr. that we sincerely believe is the best Nash buy in Chicago. Motor is A1 and the finish is bright and shiny. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, heater, etc. $450.

BUICK SEDAN. This late 27-47 Master 6 was owned by a prominent manufacturer. The finish, upholstery and tires are in the original new condition, and the motor runs very smoothly. Equipped with 4 whl. brks., shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $385.

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT. 1927 Big Six 7 pass. Sedan that will please the most exacting buyer. Oiled and greased every 500 miles by the original owner, so it's in wonderful condition now. 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $485.

PLYMOUTH SEDAN. This 1929 is eqpd. with 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Has a sweet running motor. It's like brand new. $385.

CADILLAC VICTORIA. Was given unusual care by the original owner, so it will please you in every particular today. Has a wealth of extra equipment. Special for $95.

HUPMOBILE SEDAN. 1928 that you will be proud to own. It's A1 mechanically and every detail of the interior appears new. 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. $595.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. 1927 Commander finished a smart color. This car was chauffeur driven and the result is it's in topnotch condition now. 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $285.

FORD 4 DR. SEDAN. 1929, with very low mileage. Every feature is in the original new condition. Offered at a big saving.

MARMON SEDAN. Late model Little 8 that your neighbors could not tell from a brand new car. The finish, upholstery, and tires are A1 in every respect. Motor is very efficient. $425.

STUTZ 8 SEDAN. Late model with very low milegae. This is a low slung car with a world of power and pep. Has hundreds of dollars worth of extra equipment. $545.

GRAHAM-PAIGE SEDAN. 1929 that was driven only Sundays and evenings for pleasure purposes, so it's in marvelous condition today. This car is the last word for sparkling performance and attractive appearance. Special for $485.

BUICK COUPE. 27-28 4 pass. Victoria. The finish, upholstery and tires are all in splendid condition. Has 4 whl. brakes, new tires and many extras. $285.

NO NEW CAR AT THESE PRICES

CAN MATCH THESE USED CARS OFFERED BY PIERCE-ARROW

The quality materials, precise workmanship, solid comfort, beauty and performance of these good used cars cannot be matched in a new car priced so low. That's what makes a good used car a better buy than a cheap new car, if it's purchased from Pierce-Arrow.

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN.
1930 on the 133 inch whlbse. This car is a beauty and the performance is 100%. Only driven a few thousand miles. $2,000.

PAIGE SEDAN.
1928 eight with four speed transmission. Brand new tires, and many valuable extras. This car looks and runs better than many new cars selling for $1,200. Our price now $550.

BUICK SEDAN.
1929 seven pass. with wire wheels, side mounts, window ventilators, and many other extras. This Mast. 6 was only driven a few thousand miles, so it will give new car satisfaction today. It's a real bargain at our special price.

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN.
Model 33 seven pass. Motor is A1. Very clean throughout. Many extras. $195.

LOCOMOBILE PHAETON.
Model 48 with very low mileage. This is a 4 pass. that's very sporty. Has 6 Vogue tires and a wealth of extras. $645.

REO SEDAN.
1928. The finish, upholstery and motor are in the original new condition. No one could tell this from a brand new Reo. Brand new tires. $685.

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN.
Model 80 that was reconditioned and is in topnotch condition today. 4 whl. brakes, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $575. Also a complete line of model 80s.

STUTZ SEDAN.
1929, with special custom built Le Baron body. Has wire wheels, practically brand new Vogue tires, fender wells, and every essential extra. Sold for almost $7,000 a few months ago, now $1,685.

PIERCE-ARROW ROADSTER.
1927 model 80 that's one of the sportiest Roadsters we have ever had in our stock. Finished a beautiful light green and equipped with 4 whl. brakes, 5 practically brand new tires, windshield wings, shock absorbers, bumpers, etc. Has a spacious rumble seat. Motor has been checked over by expert Pierce-Arrow mechanics. $750.

LINCOLN SEDAN.
1928, 7 pass. Le Baron body. Finish is bright and gleaming and the upholstery and tires appear brand new. Motor is smooth and powerful. Will sacrifice.

LINCOLN COUPE

Current model five pass. Convertible Coupe. It's a special custom built Dietrich body. This is like a five pass. Victoria, but the top is collapsible. Actual mileage only 4,600 mi. Has wire wheels, fender wells, new Vogue tires, and hundreds of dollars' worth of extra equipment. In fact, every feature of this car is still in the original new condition. This is probably the finest auto in Chicago ever offered as "used." Cost $6,600 a short while ago, now offered at only a fraction of its original cost. Liberal terms, your car taken in trade. PIERCE-ARROW SHOWROOM. 1834 Ridge-av., Evanston.

LINCOLN-DIETRICH CONVERTIBLE COUPE.

Custom built De Luxe model, 6 wheels, side mounts, Lorraine light, six brake system, etc. Original factory finish. Like new in every way; has been in storage 17 months. Pianos and Players.

PIANOS TO LOAN.

With the removal of one of our factories to St. Charles, Ill., and the loss of several thousand feet of storage space, we have a large number of COMBINATION PIANOS to loan to reliable families until we need them.

These pianos must be moved at once. They have been priced for sale at greatly reduced figures so that any one contemplating the purchase of a piano within the next year can hardly afford to miss this opportunity.

Instruments not sold will be loaned in homes to those who may be interested in owning a piano soon. We, of course, reserve the right to select homes to which the pianos are to be loaned—YOU PAY NO RENT—merely the cartage only. Ask for our Shop Foreman, AL KLUSENDORF.
